BREWER CONFESSES HE PAID $15,000 TO STATE OFFICIAL

EDITOR FAILS IN EFFORT TO MAKE CURTIS THE "GOAT"

Kansas Senator, on Stand Twice, Convinces Oil Committee He Is Not "Principal" and Did Not Have Conversations Related by Bennett.

STUPID BLUNDERING IN "COVERING UP"

McLean's Employes in Their Testimony Have Piled Up Trouble for McLean When He Testifies in Oil Inquiry.

By CHARLES G. ROSS.
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—The panicky state of mind into which Edward B. McLean has been thrown by the oil investigation has been demonstrated many times during the inquiry, but never so effectively as in the effort made by Ira E. Bennett, editor of McLean's Washington newspaper, to persuade the oil committee that the "principal" in Bennett's telegram of Jan. 29 was Senator Charles Curtis of Kansas.

This was the message in which Bennett told his employer at Palm Beach that he had seen "the principal" and added the reassuring information that there would be no rocking of the boat and no resignations.

Bennett's story caused utter amazement in the hearing room. Senator Walsh was quick to see and point out its elements of weakness—such, for instance, as the witness' assertion that the first part of the brief telegram related to the "principal," Curtis; the second part to a White House conference with newspaper men, and the third part again to Curtis, without any connecting words to indicate a change of subject.

Also, it semed strange to Walsh, as it did, undoubtedly, to nearly everybody else in the committee room, that Bennett should attempt to "cover up" the identity of Curtis under the designation of "the principal," especially as the Kansas Senator had been referred to by name in other messages passing between McLean and his retainers.

Gives Committee Ammunition.

Bennett's effort to unload the burden of the "prin... ..." the Kansas Senator did not improve the standing of McLean with the committee. Rather, it gave the committee new ammunition to shoot [illegible] when he was on the witness stand. Day by day, as his faithful employes unfold their yarns, the prospective ordeal of the publisher becomes harder. Beginning with his own yarn about finding Fall $100,000 in cash, he will have a lot to explain.

And the confidential code report of John Major to McLean saying that "Zev" (J. W. Zevely, Sinclair's attorney) doesn't think much of Walsh as a cross-examiner" is not calculated to make the examination of McLean any milder.

It is doubtful whether Bennett would subscribe to that estimate of Walsh after his experience on the stand today and yesterday. For Walsh, who yesterday forced the witness to admit that a certain code word meant Daugherty, after Bennett had said that it meant Lambert, McLean's attorney, today repeated the trick. He asked Bennett when he became acquainted with Harry Daugherty, and Bennett replied it was during the campaign of 1920.

Record Produced on Witness.

Then Walsh read from the record that Bennett had been an active associate with Daugherty in getting Banker Morse out of the Atlanta Federal Prison in 1912 during the Taft administration

REED REPUDIATED BY AN OVERWHELMING VOTE IN COUNTY CONVENTIONS

Ninety-Nine Out of 114 Counties Reject Senator's Plea for Instructed Delegates —Little Sentiment for McAdoo.

Senator Reed, an unadmitted outcast from the Democratic party in Missouri since his fight on the policies of the Wilson administration, was repudiated by the Democracy of the State yesterday for the fourth time.

His plea for delegates instructed to vote in the Democratic State convention for a delegation to the national convention pledged to him was rejected in the Democratic conventions in 99 of the 114 counties of the State. On receiving only partial, though definitely convincing, returns, the Senator, refusing to admit his repudiation, departed for Washington.

Four years ago the Democratic State convention, in refusing to permit him a seat on the Missouri delegation to the national convention, charged him with party disloyalty, a sentence which was confirmed by the national convention in a refusal to override the decision of the Missouri convention.

Refusing to accept this verdict as final, Reed sought the renomination as Senator in 1922. He won, but an analysis of the returns showed his nomination was brought about through Republican votes in the Democratic primary, virtually all the strong Democratic communities voting against him and Republican communities for him.

Again, in the 1922 general election, he won through Republican votes.

Voice of the Party Heard.

Two months ago he summoned more than 100 of his supporters to St. Louis and announced his candidacy for an instructed delegation from Missouri for the presidential nomination. The verdict on that candidacy was registered yesterday when in county conventions delegates were elected to the State Convention in Springfield, April 15.

Republicans were barred from these conventions and, as in 1920, it was the voice of the party which spoke. On a basis of reports from 108 of the 114 counties and the City of St. Louis, representing a total of 1126 of the 1152 delegates who will sit in the convention, Reed had been able to obtain instructions for only 380 delegates in St. Louis and in 15 counties. The remainder either were instructed for William G. McAdoo, were specifically instructed against Reed or were uninstructed.

2 to 1 Against Reed.

While among the uninstructed delegates there undoubtedly are a few who will vote for Reed, the vast majority are anti-Reed. None of those instructed against Reed or for McAdoo will vote for him.

The situation, as disclosed by these virtually complete returns, is:

Instructed for Reed, 380.
Instructed for McAdoo, 94.
Instructed against Reed, 441.
Uninstructed, 211.

The anti-Reed strength of the convention thus will stand approximately 746 against Reed to 380 for him, or about two to one against him.

Only 2 Districts for Reed.

On the showing in the returns, Reed will have the district delegates to the national convention from the St. Louis and Kansas City congressional districts, eight delegates in all. The remaining 24 delegates will be elected by uninstructed delegates to the State convention.

It will be possible for the state convention to instruct the Reed delegates from these four Congressional districts for some other candidate, and also to instruct the delegates from the remaining 12 districts.

In addition to these 32 delegates, the State convention will elect four delegates-at-large.

Thirteen Contesting Delegations.

There are contesting delegations in seven counties and in six wards in St. Louis, some of the county contests being by the anti-Reed Democrats and some by the Reed following. All of the St. Louis contests are by the anti-Reed forces.

In view of the fact that a majority of the members of the Democratic State Committee are opposed to Reed and the fact that the committee will make up the temporary roll of the convention, it is to be expected, as a part of practical politics, that the contesting Reed delegations will find little favor, while the contesting anti-Reed delegations will be seated in all cases in which there is any reasonable doubt as to the facts.

Instructions Against McAdoo.

In addition to showing their opposition to Reed, the conventions

CITY DEMOCRATS IN BITTER FIGHT FOR DELEGATES

Five Split Conventions Are Held in Which Contesting Slates Opposed to Reed Are Named.

SENATOR SURE OF ONLY 126 VOTES

Police Check Demonstration in 26th Ward, Where Charles M. Hay Clashes With Reed Leaders.

Reed and anti-Reed Democrats, in the Democratic ward conventions of several St. Louis wards last night, fought just as hotly as if the State result were to be determined by their action. The Reed workers did not seem to be dismayed by the apparent certainty that the Springfield convention, April 15, will be heavily against Reed.

In five wards, the Twenty-third and the Twenty-fifth to Twenty-eighth, inclusive, split conventions were held, and rival delegations were named. The Seventeenth Ward, where the committeeman, Lawler Daley, is against Reed, elected an uncontested anti-Reed delegation, it was announced at the anti-Reed headquarters. The anti-Reed forces also count the Fifteenth Ward delegation as against Reed, and as uncontested. A contesting anti-Reed delegation was named in the Nineteenth.

These eight wards have 76 delegates, out of the city's total of 202, and if a friendly convention should seat the entire 76, there will still be 126 Reed delegates from this city. No anti-Reed fight was made in the 20 other wards, and the committeemen of those wards. Reed supporters, put through the choice of Reed delegates without opposition.

Women Join in the Fray.

In the meetings in contested wards, the presence of women did not seem to mitigate the violence of the strife; in fact, some of the women were among the most vociferous of the contenders. The system of meetings in small halls, as a means of obtaining the expression of the voters of the ward, was shown to have its faults, no less than the primary system.

Leading Reed and anti-Reed workers clashed in the Twenty-eighth Ward convention, held in St. Barbara's Hall, Minerva and Hamilton avenues, which split and chose two sets of 16 delegates, after scenes of stormy contention.

The endeavor to elect a chairman split the meeting. A. L. Oliver, a Reed supporter, was temporary chairman, and in taking a vote on a motion to make him permanent chairman, he called on the Reed following to stand on one side of the room, and "those who are for McAdoo" on the other.

This way of putting the matter brought a protest from Thomas C. Hennings and Joseph T. Davis, leading the anti-Reed forces. Oliver refused to put the matter differently, but he named former Judge Hennings as one of two tellers to count the two sides.

"Repeating" Charged by Tellers.

The count got nowhere, as with more than 600 persons packed into the room, there was constant moving about, and both tellers said there was "repeating." The anti-Reed side charged that many of the Reed supporters present were from other wards, and that others were under voting age.

When Oliver declared himself chosen permanent chairman, the anti-Reed side held its meeting on one side of the hall, and chose a delegation including Curlee, Davis, Roscoe Anderson, James F. Green, John L. Duffy, Mrs. John Trigg Moss, Miss Mary Semple Scott

HEAD OF NEW YORK CENTRAL KILLED IN FALL FROM HORSE

Alfred H. Smith Plunges From Mount in Central Park When Woman's Steed Darts in Front of Him.

BEGAN AS $4-A-WEEK MESSENGER BOY

Joined Track-Laying Gang So as to Learn Business From Bottom and Rose to High Positions.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 8.—Alfred H. Smith, who started as a messenger boy with the Lake Shore Railroad in Cleveland at $4 a week and rose to the presidency of the New York Central Lines, was thrown from his horse in Central Park this afternoon as he pulled up to avoid colliding with a woman rider whose horse suddenly swerved in front of him. He died in Fifth Avenue Hospital a few minutes later of a broken neck.

With Smith had been Edward Hoopes, general freight agent of the New York Central. Hoopes said that the two were riding along the west bridle path near Sixty-seventh street when a horse, ridden by a woman, whose name was not learned, suddenly shied in front of Smith. The latter pulled his horse up sharply. In doing so he lost his seat and pitched headlong over the horse's head, landing on the side of his neck and shoulders.

Resided Alone at Hotel.

Smith was living alone at the Hotel Plaza. His wife is said to be in California and a son, Emory, who also was reported living in a ther's death and called at the hosthotel here, was notified of his fapital.

Smith's home, when his family were all here and living together, was at Orchard Hill Farm, just north of White Plains. He was 62 years old.

Modest and unassuming in private life, as in his railroad career, Smith frequently passed unnoticed among less distinguished guests at the Plaza. He spent much time in the privacy of his own apartment.

His tragic death removes at the height of his career one of the most romantic figures in an industry abounding with romance, and linked indirsolubly with the familiar story of the awards that await the poor boy of America, who, with eyes fixed upon a goal, sets out to devote all his time and energy to its attainment.

He began work at the age of 14 as a messenger boy in the offices of the Lake Shore Railroad in Cleveland. For four years young Smith, who even then began to show signs of the vision that eventually landed him in a position of pre-eminence among railroad executives, worked in the Cleveland office. At the end of four years he was a railroad clerk.

Went With Track Layers.

Many a messenger boy, getting up to the heights of a clerkship, would have stopped satisfied. Young Smith, however, saw nothing but a clerk's routine ahead and the prospect was not pleasing.

He applied for and obtained a job with the track laying and bridge construction gang. The work was hard and the pay small, but it was the only way to learn about railroading from the ties up and Smith remembered his lessons.

One of his superiors saw his possibilities and made him superintendent of a division. Promotions to the superintendencies of more important divisions followed with unfailing regularity, during which Smith earned the respect of the men under him and won their admiration as a man who "was strict but fair."

From superintendent of the Michigan division he was sent to Cleveland in 1901 and made assistant general superintendent. In the same year he became general superintendent of the Lake Shore and a year later a vice-president and general superintendent of the New York Central.

In 1913 he was advanced to the senior vice-presidency of the New York Central and Jan. 1, 1914, when William C. Brown resigned, the former messenger boy was moved up into the presidency.

Gus Nations Hurried From Kansas City to Make Raid

THE Post-Dispatch learned last night that a special investigation is under way into the manner in which Gus O. Nations, chief Federal prohibition enforcement agent in St. Louis, led the raid on the Griesedieck Brewery Feb. 21, thus "beating to it" a number of general agents, from other cities, who had been assembled in the vicinity of the brewery ready to make the raid when Nations stepped in and made it.

The general agents had been assembled in the vicinity of the brewery by C. W. Moss, new divisional chief of Prohibition Enforcement Agents. Moss was acting in concert with investigators of the Intelligence Unit specially assigned from Washington to investigate the extensive sale of "protected" beer in St. Louis. It had been determined that the Griesedieck Brewery would be raided about 11 a. m. on Feb. 21, as information had reached the special investigators that about $800 had been paid by the brewery to a State official on Feb. 20 for "protection," and that the "protected" beer would be trucked out of the brewery the following morning, Feb. 21, as had been done before without any interference.

General agents were waiting for the zero hour—11 a. m.—when they would swoop down upon the plant. But to their utter amazement and consternation, Nations and his agents, at 10 a. m., had halted a truckload of real beer in an alley a mile from the brewery. The truck driver and his helper were arrested and the truck of beer began its journey back to the brewery under guard of Nations' agents. Nations and others of his agents hastened to the brewery in automobiles and raided the plant under the noses of the general agents.

The Post-Dispatch learned at Washington last night that one of the Government agencies there has been informed that Nations was in Kansas City on Feb. 20, the day before he raided the Griesedieck Brewery, and was in conference there with State Prohibition Director DeHart, his superior officer, who has headquarters at Kansas City.

Five of Moss' general agents were in Kansas City and were needed here the following morning for the proposed Griesedieck raid. Moss placed a long-distance telephone call for his subordinate, Frank H. Rogers, who happened to be in Director DeHart's office while Nations was there. Rogers was in DeHart's office when he received telephone instructions to go to St. Louis that night and bring four other general agents with him.

Nations finished his conference with Director DeHart and departed, without informing his superior officer that he intended to come to St. Louis that night and raid the Griesedieck Brewery the following morning.

PLAN FOR ACTION AT ONCE ON TAX CUT IS ABANDONED

House Leaders Agree It Will Be Impossible to Pass Such Resolution Before March 15.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—The provision for a 25 per cent reduction in income taxes payable this year will rest on the fortunes of the revenue bill. House leaders raching a tentative agreemnt today not to attempt to remove it from the revenue measure and seek its immediate enactment in a separate resolution.

Advocates of the latter plan, including Representative Tilson, Connecticut, a Republican member of the ways and means committee, admitted it would be almost impossible to get such a resolution through by March 15, when first installments on income taxes are due. The Treasury Department had asked this in an effort to avoid the necessity of making refunds on these payments and President Coolidge indorsed the proposal.

"PRETTY BIG POLICEMAN," SO SERGEANT DIDN'T BRING HIM IN

Police Sergeant Richard Lay of the Wyoming Street District faces a charge of neglect of duty for failure to bring to the station Patrolman Oscar Kunz, who was at his home, 7805 Water street, early yesterday mroning when he should have been on his beat.

When Sergt. Lay went to the patrolman's home to find out what had happened he was met at the door by Kunz.

"I'm not going to the station and you get to hell out of here," Kunz growled.

A while later the Captain commanding asked Sergt. Lay, "Why didn't you bring him in?"

"He's a pretty big policeman," Lay replied.

Kunz tendered his resignation yesterday without comment.

GRIESEDIECKS GOT "PROTECTION" IN SALE OF REAL BEER

Official of Raided Brewery, Facing Penitentiary for Bribery, Also Involved Second Important State Official in "Telling All" to Federal Investigators.

GOV. HYDE SUMMONS ACCUSED APPOINTEES

Confession States Griesediecks Were Told Two Other Breweries Here Were Paying for Protection and "One More" Could Be Cared For—Washington Ordered Taking of Statement.

A confession that he has paid about $15,000 to a prominent Missouri State official, for "protection" in the manufacture and sale of real beer in St. Louis, was made yesterday to Federal authorities by a responsible official of the Griesedieck Brothers' Brewery, 1900 Shenandoah avenue.

The brewer's name is being withheld by Federal officials, but the Post-Dispatch learned that he "had told all" and that special investigators, at work here for two months under special instructions from Washington, anticipate that subsequent developments will be rapid and startling.

It was learned that the brewer, besides definitely implicating one important State official as the man to whom he paid money for "protection," has linked the name of a second important State official with the transactions. Also it became known that the special investigation definitely has shifted into the Federal prohibition enforcement office in St. Louis.

GOV. HYDE SUMMONS TWO APPOINTEES.

At Jefferson City last night it was learned that Gov. Hyde, since his return to Missouri Thursday night after six weeks' absence, has been exceedingly active in carrying out his announcement that he would make immediate investigation of reports that two of his appointees were under investigation by the Federal Government in the "protected" beer inquiry.

The Governor, as told exclusively in Friday's Post-Dispatch, said: "If any State official has had any part in furnishing protection to breweries, he can expect prompt action from me." The Post-Dispatch learned the Governor has summoned into conference the State official involved directly in the brewer's confession, and that a second State official is to be questioned. Resignations of at least one official, and likely of two, are not out of the question.

From an authoritative source in Washington the Post-Dispatch was informed that a shakeup is inevitable in the Federal prohibition enforcement office in St. Louis, which is headed by Gus O. Nations, brother of State Labor Commissioner Heber Nations. Gus Nations' raid on the Griesedieck Brewery on Feb. 21, it became known last night, also is under inquiry by special investigators, to determine how he "beat to it" general agents from outside the city who were waiting in the vicinity of the brewery to make the raid in the course of carrying out the special investigation of the extensive sale here of "protected" beer.

SUBSTANCE OF BREWER'S CONFESSION.

In his confession the brewer states that he paid "protection money" in the sum of $1 for each case of real beer which he sent out of the brewery under promise of the State official that there would be no interference from enforcement agencies. Altogether, the brewer added, about 15,000 cases of "protected" beer were sold by his brewery in 14 weeks, for a total of about $60,000, of which one-fourth was paid as bribe money for protection.

The brewery, as has been told, is an old offender in selling real beer, having in 1922 paid $17,000 in penalities for such manufacture and sale.

In substance the brewer, in his confession, told Federal officials that in the latter part of last April, or the early part of May, he received a telephone invitation from the State official to meet the latter at a downtown hotel to discuss "a matter of interest to him." He kept the appointment and the State official, he said, proposed that the Griesedieck Brewery enter the field of violators of the Volstead law and get some of the "big money."

This State official, the confession continues, informed the brewer that he was acting for another State official and for a St. Louisan prominent in official circles. The State official is quoted by the brewer as having said that two other breweries in St. Louis were then being "protected" and "they" had decided to "take on" one more brewery, and that the Griesedieck plant had been selected as the one.

The brewer was told he would be required to pay $1 for each case of real beer sold by the brewery, and that his operations would not be molested. "I accepted the terms proposed and began the manufacture of beer," the brewer added.

"Protection" Withdrawn for Five Months.

Continuing, the brewer stated he

Senator Curtis, on Stand Twice, Convinces Committee He Isn't "Principal"

Major Testifies McLean Had Advance Information on Fall's First Story of His $100,000

Ex-Bartender, Publisher's Confidential Man, Tells of an Atlantic City Conference and Will Be Called Again to Give More Details.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Special Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—The oil investigation produced another chapter of stirring drama today. It disclosed a United States Senator and a newspaper editor facing each other with flat and forthright contradictions of testimony. It uncovered a hidden page of the early days of the present administration, when President Coolidge was urged to drop Attorney-General Daugherty from the Cabinet. By means of a punishing cross-examination administered to John F. Major, Edward B. McLean's ex-bartender companion and bodyguard, it wove another skein of circumstance around the figures of several persons involved in the oil scandal.

More important still, perhaps, it attempted, for a flitting moment, to lift the curtain which conceals that absorbing mystery suggested by McLean's telegram referring to "certain prominent people," and "the necessity for keeping large funds on hand." But there it revealed only a lawyer standing on the ethical necessity of maintaining a client's confidence.

The Senator and the Editor.

Two outstanding figures in the drama were Senator Charles Curtis of Kansas, Republican whip, identified yesterday by Ira E. Bennett, chief editorial writer of McLean's Washington Post, as "the principal" mentioned in a telegram from Bennett to McLean, and Barrett himself. Friends a few days ago, they found themselves this morning at swords' points on a vital question of veracity.

Disregarding his senatorial prerogative, Curtis appeared before the committee and insisted upon being sworn and examined as an ordinary witness. He repeated the declarations contained in his published statement, that he had not even seen Bennett on the date named, had received from him no message from McLean and had sent none and had not discussed the political aspects of the oil industry. Bennett, shifting nervously in his chair, was only a few feet away.

As soon as Curtis had concluded, Senator Walsh asked Bennett if he had anything to say in explanation of his previous testimony.

Remarking that "Senator Curtis apparently had totally forgotten one conversation, and perhaps two, which he had with me," Bennett proceeded to reiterate his testimony of yesterday, and to supplement it with further details.

He declared that on the date in question, which was, he said, "a day or two before Jan. 29," the date of the telegram, he asked Senator Curtis for his opinion on the attitude of the Post toward the investigation. "A serious question of how we ought to handle it had come up in the office," he said, "and I wanted Senator Curtis' advice. He told me that we ought to print all the official testimony, with the exception of certain scandalous parts of it. He said other things to me, which I don' care to repeat here unless I am compelled."

"I think the witness should relate all that occurred if it has the slightest relevancy to this inquiry," said Senator Walsh, addressing the chair, "and I move that he be so directed."

"This matter about which you are reluctant to testify—does it concern the purpose of this inquiry," asked Senator Stanfield. "It has nothing to do with the oil leases, but I can't deny that it has a certain relevancy to the political aspects of the investigation," was the reply. The committee voted unanimously for an answer.

"Confining yourself to that part of the conversation which is relevant, you may go ahead," Senator Adams instructed.

"A moment ago," Bennett threw out, "you said I must tell everything. Now you apparently want me to suppress parts of it. If you have any objections to any of it I wish you would state them now."

"That remark is perfectly gratuitous and unjustified," snapped Walsh. "In view of it you may now tell everything that was said."

Bennett thereupon related that, during the course of his talk with Curtis, in the latter's office, Attorney-General Daugherty's name was brought up, and that Curtis volunteered the statement that immediately after President Harding's death, President Coolidge sent for Curtis and asked him for some advice about various problems.

"Senator Curtis told me that he gave the President the advice, and that he advised him, among other things, to get rid of a certain Cabinet member."

"Who was that Cabinet member?" Senator Dill asked. "Attorney-General Daugherty. Senator Curtis said he told the President that the appointment of Daugherty by President Harding had been a purely personal appointment, and that nobody would blame President Coolidge if he declined to keep him. He said the President replied that Mr. Daugherty had a number of important cases under way for the Government."

Curtis Reiterates Denial.

Before this testimony, Senator Curtis had left the room. The Post-Dispatch correspondent found him at a meeting of the Senate Committee on Finance, and repeated the gist of Bennett's latest statements, whereupon Curtis hastened back to the hearing, arriving there just before Bennett concluded, and asked the committee to be heard again.

He proceeded at once to reiterate his denial that any such conference had taken place. Early in December, nearly two months before the sending of the "principal" telegram, he said, Bennett had come to his office and had asked him what topic he thought should be stressed in the editorial columns of the Post.

"There were then before Congress two subjects of chief interest, the bonus and tax reduction," he said. "I told Mr. Bennett that I thought tax reduction should be stressed. Not a word was said about the Post's handling of the news in the oil investigation, which, at that time, had attracted very little interest.

"He did ask me something about Attorney-General Daugherty, and I replied that I had told the President, soon after he assumed office, that I believed he would have to get a new Attorney-General in a few months, as Mr. Daugherty was sick and his wife was also sick. Neither directly nor indirectly did I ever make any suggestion about the Post's policy in the oil investigation, nor did I say anything about political attacks arising from the oil inquiry. So far as I know, none had been made at that time."

Bennett sat near by throughout Curtis' statement, his bespectacled face growing redder and paler by turns, but he made no request to be heard again, nor did the committee ask him.

McLean's Adviser Heard.

Francis T. Homer of Baltimore was the next witness. He is a huge bearded man, with an authoritative manner which soon melted under Walsh's questioning. He identified himself as one of McLean's advisers, under the will left by McLean's father, in the administration of the vast McLean estate, including the policy of the Washington Post and the Cincinnati Enquirer.

The committee several days ago obtained possession of a telegram sent by Major to McLean, purporting to repeat a telephone conversation between Homer and Major. It said:

"Mr. Homer thinks that you should have leased wire installed, and that the Post and Enquirer should share the expense. He bases his opinion on the congressional situation, and the fact that you at all times, while the wire is open, would be in constant communication with Cincinnati and Washington. He also believes that it would give you quick and easy access to the White House."

The wire subsequently was installed, and E. W. Smithers, day telegraph operator at the White House, was placed in charge of the Washington end of it. Taking the telegram, sentence at a time, Walsh asked, first:

"What was the congressional situation that you felt warranted the installation of a leased wire?" Homer relied that McLean and Wiley, managing editor of the Enquirer, were both at Palm Beach, and in view of that fact, and the possibility that national or international questions might arise necessitating the immediate formation of editorial policies, he thought McLean and Wiley should be in constant touch with the two newspapers.

"But this says nothing about national and international policies," interjected Walsh. "It speaks of a congressional situation. Are you sure that it did not refer to disclosures before this committee?" "I didn't know then that this investigation was going on," Homer replied.

Denies Mentioning White House.

"What did you mean by quick and easy access to the White House?" "I never said anything of the kind. I can hardly imagine how my words could have been twisted into such a meaning, and I staggered for 15 minutes when I read it. I did tell Major that with Wiley at McLean's house, he also would have quick and easy access to Post and Enquirer. He must have misunderstood 'Wiley at his house' for 'the White House.' That is the only way I can explain it."

"But was Wiley at McLean's house?" "No, it now appears that he was staying at the hotel in Palm Beach." There was a laugh at that.

"As a matter of fact, however, with a leased wire open between Palm Beach and Washington 12 hours a day, it would have given McLean quick and easy access to the White House, wouldn't it? He could have sent his communications to the Washington postoffice, and members of the staff could instantly transmit them to the White House, could he not?" "I suppose he could, but that is not what I meant, and it isn't what I said," Homer returned.

Walsh then turned his attention to a telegram sent by McLean to Homer, asking whether, in Homer's opinion, the Investigation Committee could compel McLean to testify to the source from which he had obtained $100,000. It closed with the sentence: "Think over certain prominent people at that time, and you will appreciate the necessity that existed of keeping large cash funds on hand at that time."

"What does that mean?" Walsh asked. "I think it is a question of whether this was not a privileged communication between a lawyer and his client," Homer rejoined. "I am not asking you what legal advice you gave your client, you will observe," said Walsh. "I simply ask the meaning of this telegram." "Well I don't mind saying that this telegram was utterly intelligible to me. I didn't know what it meant."

"Who were the prominent people that Mr. McLean wanted you to recall?" "I have no idea."

"What was the occasion for keeping large cash funds on hand at the time referred to?" "I don't know."

"What reply did you make to this telegram?" "Now that, I am certain, comes under the head of privileged communications between lawyer and client. I will say that I sent no telegram, and wrote no letter, in reply. I did communicate with Mr. Lambert, McLean's personal attorney. What I told him I decline to state, on the ground that it is privileged."

Obviously, the committee was facing a blank wall, and notwithstanding the tempting interest of the subject, the witness was excused.

He was followed by Edward S. Rochester, publicity man for the Department of Justice, who, it has been learned, on Jan. 16, sent a telegram to McLean informing him that the committee was making inquiries to discover whether McLean had $100,000 in the bank at the time he had told Senator Walsh he gave Secretary Fall checks for that amount. Rochester's explanation furnished one of the brightest spots of the day.

"In the first place," he said, "it was a purely personal message, having nothing to do with my official duties. I worked for Mr. McLean for several years. In this case I felt that he was doing everything he could to help the committee get the facts"—here he was interrupted by a burst of laughter, to which even Walsh contributed a smile. He went on: "I felt that he should know that the inquiries were being made, because I believed he would want to direct the banks to furnish the information at once, to save the committee unnecessary trouble." Another wave of merriment swept the crowded room.

"You didn't get a suggestion from somebody in the Department of Justice to send this telegram, did you?" Walsh asked. "No, sir. From no one."

"Did you know whether Mr. McLean had $100,000 in the bank at the time mentioned?" "I did not."

"The information you sent him was just general information which you got from the press?" "That's all. I had no other source of information."

"But certainly you were aware that McLean had a large and lively staff in Washington. If all the information you had was general information, known to the press, didn't it occur to you that Mr. McLean's own staff was able to keep him adequately informed?" "I didn't think of that."

John Major Witness Again.

John Major, McLean's picturesque drinking partner, "fixer" and confidential agent, supplied an additional grist of entertainment. He had unaccountably dispensed with his chewing gum, but he smoked numerous cigarettes at a jaunty angle, frequently excusing himself while he walked around the table in search of a place to deposit the stubs.

His attention was directed to a telegram which he sent to McLean: "I have appointment with the man at the Wardman Park Hotel," he admitted the reference was to Fall.

"But why didn't you use Fall's name?" asked Senator Walsh. "Oh, I don't know—we have a habit of calling fellows around the Post by nick names," was the rejoinder. "I might say, for example, that Mr. McLean is 'the big bear,' I'm the 'little bear,' Bennett is the 'Count,' Spurgeon (managing editor), is 'the Little Giant,' Slingman is 'the Lion,' and so on. It's just a habit of using nicknames."

"But Mr. Fall wasn't an employe of the Post, was he?" Walsh inquired. "Certainly not."

"Why did you use six words in a telegram to indicate a man, when one would have served just as well?" "Well, Mr. McLean's never given his employes any instructions about cutting down expenses on telegrams."

"There must have been some reason for secrecy?" "Not a bit."

Questioned about a visit which he made to J. W. Zevely's apartment in the Wardman Park Hotel, Washington's most luxurious hostelry, Major said he met Harry Sinclair there. When asked what they talked about, he said, "We discussed horse racing, the quality of good liquor, and other things." His purpose in going there to see Zevely, he said, was to get in touch with former Attorney-General A. Mitchell Palmer, whom he understood to be Zevely's partner. McLean had instructed him to employ Palmer to present a statement to the committee.

"I hadn't been able to find Mr. Palmer's name in the telephone book, so I went to see Mr. Zevely," he said. "Later I found that I had been looking in the telephone book for Mitchell Palmer, while the name was listed as A. Mitchell Palmer. That explains why I couldn't find it."

Inspection disclosed that A. Mitchell Palmer heads the list of Palmers in the Washington Telephone Directory.

Inquiry to Palmer.

One telegram from McLean to Major directed him to ask Palmer whether McLean should make a statement to the committee in case Fall should tell the committee that he got $100,000 from McLean.

"Apparently," remarked Walsh, "McLean wasn't sure that Fall would say that he got the $100,000 from him." 'No, it seems like now he might have expected Mr. Fall to say that he got it from Mr. Doheny," Major retorted.

Walsh produced another McLean telegram instructing Major to keep all the telegrams from him. "But you destroyed them, didn't you?" he observed. "I certainly did."

"Why didn't you obey your employer's instructions;" "I don't always follow instructions."

"Perhaps you had some good reason in this case." "Sure, I thought it was nobody's business what passed between Mr. McLean and his confidential agent."

One telegram from Major assured McLean that Palmer and Zevely had told him they would be able to take care of McLean in case the committee showed a disposition to call him as a witness.

"How did they expect to take care of him?" Walsh inquired. "By acting as his attorneys, I suppose."

"But how did you understand that they proposed to carry it out?" "Just as I said—by acting as attorneys."

Major said he couldn't remember the names of the persons designated by such code signals as "Apples," "Cherries," "Apricots" and other fruits of the field.

Step by step Walsh waded through the series of Major's wires to McLean until he had established that McLean must have had advance information about the Fall statement of Dec. 27 to the committee, in which Fall said he got the $100,000 from McLean. Then emphasis was laid on the extreme caution exercised by McLean before sending his own statement to the committee to corroborate Fall. This was prepared by Palmer, submitted to Francis H. McAdoo of New York, and finally ok'd by McLean.

Discussion With Fall.

Senator Bursum (Rep., New Mexico) then cited McLean's later admission that he had not given $100,000 to Fall but only checks which were returned unused, and asked, "Did he tell the truth in the first statement or the last?" "Well," hesitated Major, "from all accounts he told the truth in the last."

"There must have been some understanding between McLean and Fall as to what the testimony of Fall would be?" asked Bursum. "Yes, there had been a discussion."

"How do you know of these discussions?" "Because Mr. McLean, Mr. Duckstein (McLean's secretary) and myself went to Atlantic City to see Mr. Fall."

Q. "Do you know whether there were any checks issued to Mr Fall?" A. "I have Mr. McLean's word for it."

Q. "How about the conflicting statements of the $100,000 loan?" A. "Well, he didn't tell me about that."

Q. "Do you distinguish between law and fact?" "Well, the law is a general term."

Q. "You do not take his statements as a matter of fact, however?" A. "Oh, sure."

Q. "Both as facts and law?" A. "You bet."

Major is to be the first witness Tuesday when his Atlantic City session will be pressed into further. He said he was not present at the conferences.

The 'Principal' Message

THIS is the famous "Principal" telegram sent to Edward B. McLean, at Palm Beach by Ira E. Bennett, which he figured prominently in the oil inquiry:

"Saw principal. Delivered message. He says really appreciates and sends regards to you and Mrs. McLean. There will be no rocking of the boat and no resignations. He expects reaction from unwarranted political attacks."

CONGRESS' DUTY IS TO LEGISLATE, COOLIDGE SAYS

President, in Talk to Correspondents, Says, Under Constitution, It Is "Supposed" to Be Legislating.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—Conviction that the American people look to the executive, judicial and legislative branches of the Government to abide by the fundamental purposes for which each was created was expressed by President Coolidge in an address tonight at the annual dinner of the White House Correspondents' Association.

Speaking informally to the men who daily report events at the White House, the President said:

"I suppose that the American people are conscious that we have a Constitution of the United States, and I know that they are attached to the defense and maintenance of that great institution. They know that we have a Government that is made up of three branches: The executive, whose duty it is to enforce and maintain the laws; the judicial, that interprets the law and administers justice between man and man, and the Congress, or the legislative branch, which is supposed under the Constitution to be engaged in legislation.

Thinks People Approve.

"I think the American people approve heartily of that kind of constitutional government, and that they want it maintained in its fundamentals."

Attorney-General Daugherty also was a guest at the dinner and in an address made reference to the move to compel his retirement from the Cabinet.

"It isn't much to give up an office," Daugherty declared. "It isn't much, when you live the span of life men ought to live, to give up your life, but to give up your honor is another question.

"When I came here as Attorney General, having to do more than any other officer in the Cabinet with the enforcement of the law, I answered all the questions of all the correspondents all the time, as you remember. Practically all inquiries made of the Attorney-General pertained to crime. Now, recently, I have refused to have anything to say for the reason that I have discovered with great accuracy that I have been charged with all the crimes ever committed, and I am inclined not to be quite so communicative."

Coolidge's Remarks.

President Coolidge discussed informally several pending national questions, including Government economy and reduction of taxes and devoted a considerable portion of his remarks to reminiscences pertaining to the field of journalism. He recalled that as a boy there were two weekly papers that come to his town and two daily papers, one published in a Vermont city and another in Boston.

"One of these daily papers, as I recall, and I don't want to do any violence to present newspapers in the thriving city of Boston," he said, "was the then very powerful and influential Boston Journal. It was partly from that and partly from inheritance that I secured my party affiliations, for the Boston Journal was the strongest Republican newspaper I think that there was in those days in New England."

The President reminded newspaper men that they and he had "mutual responsibilities," and said that he felt he was under very great obligations to the newspapers "for the success that I have had through them in informing the American people of what I have tried to adopt and put into effect as policy."

Economy in Government.

"I think every one knows that I believe in economy in government," he continued. "Not that I can see a real virtue merely in cutting down expense but a real virtue in a constructive economy that undertakes to measure the resources of our country, comparing them with the demands that are made for the expenditure of money, and as wisely as possible making a fair adjustment between those two conflicting forces.

"I had occasion to suggest to you the other day that there are many organizations just at the present time that are very vigorous, very active, in undertaking to secure appropriations from the Federal Treasury. Some of them are undoubtedly entitled to be considered as having a great deal of merit, and they will have to be adjusted in accordance with the principles of a constructive economy.

"Others of them are not so important, and they have to be dealt with in the same way, remembering that it is necessary to make the expenditures of Government as moderate as we possibly can in order that we may leave to the people the use of their own resources and the advantage of their own effort at production.

"We should always keep in mind that there is no warrant in taking from the people anything more than what public necessity requires. It is for that reason that at the present time we are undertaking to make a reduction in taxation. I think the effect on the country has been very marked. The reaction has been greater than that in favor of any other proposal that ever came under observation and I have every reason to believe that the result will be successful and that we shall have here a tax bill that will fairly meet the requirements of the situation."

McLean's Employes Pile Up Trouble When They Testify

Bennett admitted the correctness of the record on this point.

The committee was so little impressed with Bennett's story about Curtis being the "principal" that it never would have gone to the trouble of calling the Senator. But Curtis asked to be heard, and, of course, was permitted to take the stand. He bluntly repudiated Bennett's testimony as to himself.

Curtis' statement carried conviction.

Curtis, who is the assistant Republican leader of the Senate, and the whip of that side, is a conservative. He is some times called a "hard-boiled" member of the Old Guard. But Liberals and Conservatives alike respect and like him. Newspaper men of all shades of opinion regard Curtis as one of the most trustworthy in the Senate. When Curtis says a thing, it is generally believed.

And so it is believed that Curtis told the committee the exact facts about his conversations with Bennett.

After Curtis this morning had finished tearing down the structure of words that Bennett had built up, Bennett came back on the stand and reiterated that Curtis was the "principal." He said that Curtis has forgotten a conversation with the witness a day or two prior to the sending of the famous "principal" message on the 29th of January.

Bennett succeeded in riling the committee more than any other witness has done. He was at first backward about repeating this alleged conversation. Senator Walsh, deeming the matter irrelevant to the purposes of the inquiry, was bringing it out. Then the witness changed his tack, and by insinuating that the committee was "suppressing" evidence, put the committee in a position where it had to tell him to go on.

Curtis Denies Another Story.

Bennett said that he went to get some advice from Curtis about the editorial policy of the Post, and, after his tilt with the committee, added that Curtis had told him that he (Curtis) had advised Coolidge to get rid of Daugherty.

Curtis again took the stand. He declared that the conversation with Bennett was not, as Bennett had said, a day or two before Jan. 29, but back in December. He denied telling Bennett that he had advised the President to call for Daugherty's resignation. What he told the President, he said, was that he thought Daugherty would leave the cabinet in a few months, because of his own ill health and that of his wife.

He denied that Bennett had ever given him a message from McLean and denied that he had ever said or done anything that would give color to Bennett's story about his being the "principal" of the Jan. 29, message.

If Curtis is to be believed (and he is generally believed), and Bennett is also to be believed, then Bennett, on Jan. 29, sent a "rush" message to his employer based on a talk with Curtis in December.

That isn't conceivable."

If Bennett is to be believed, Curtis expressed "great appreciation" of the fact that Ned McLean had singled him out as an adviser.

That is not likely.

Senator Adams' Opinion.

Senator Adams said that he would regard any statement that Bennett might make as "immaterial"—and that seemed to be the general opinion in the committee. Adams made his meaning quite clear by the manner in which he spoke.

The plain truth of the matter is that Bennett tried to make Curtis the "goat"—and failed.

Among those who have studied the evidence, I don't believe there are three people in Washington who think that Curtis was "the principal" that Bennett had in mind that telegram of Jan. 29.

One of the most astonishing features of this whole astonishing oil probe is the stupid blundering that has marked various efforts to "cover up." McLean and his crowd are caught in the net that the millionaire publisher started to weave when he told his original falsehood about the cash loan to Fall.

It's too bad, for McLean's sake that more of his witnesses haven't the quick wit and the flashing smile of his telephone operator, Mary Quigley. Mary never would have got caught as Bennett was today.

CHARGED OIL MEN FOMENTED THE MEXICAN REVOLT

Committee Investigating Daugherty Calls Department of Justice Agents.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—The investigation of Harry M. Daugherty was shifted into the realm of international politics today when Senator Burton K. Wheeler announced that the Brookhart committee, for which he is the prosecutor, was investigating charges that the present Mexican revolution, under the leadership of De la Huerta, had been fomented by American oil interests.

In this connection, Senator Wheeler mentioned the interests of Edward L. Doheny, of Harry F. Sinclair and the name of former Secretary Albert B. Fall as having been named to his as participants in the movement.

He conceded that he as yet had no proof of the charges. But it is in relation to this that over a dozen witnesses are under subpena to appear before that committee on Monday. Several of those who have been called are former agents or secret service men of the Department of Justice.

The line of committee testimony relating to the Mexican revolution was outlined today by Senator Wheeler—referring to the half dozen subpenaes served in the Southwest, mostly upon former Department of Justice agents. He said:

"We expect to show that oil interests of the United States—former Secretary Fall and the Doheny and Sinclair interests—furthered the revolution in Mexico through violation of United States neutrality laws by the shipment of arms and ammunition to the revolutionists. We expect to prove that this was in furtherance of an agreement with the oil interests of the United States in violation of neutrality laws, and that Department of Justice agents who were working on the border seeking to prevent such violations of the law were called off by Washington."

MAN HANDCUFFED TO BED, ESCAPES AND KILLS CAPTO

Kentuckian Had Been Held Prisoner Three Days by Another, Who Was Preparing to Mutilate Him.

By the Associated Press.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., March 8.—Held prisoner for three days, handcuffed to a bed post, with a knife saw prepared in his sight as an improvised operating table upon which he was to be subjected to a major operation at the hands of his captor, William Gates, 31 years old, freed himself tonight, after the death Richard Heaton, 41, and escaped.

Mary Lee Heaton, widow of the slain man, told police, they said that she was aware her husband was holding Gates a prisoner and knew of Heaton's plan to mutilate his captive. She was quoted as having said jealousy was the motive for Heaton's action.

While on the first floor of the house in which Gates was imprisoned, she said, she heard two shots from an upstairs room. She rushed downstairs, handcuffs hanging from one wrist, told her he had shot her husband, and fled.

When police reached the bedroom they found Heaton fatally wounded by two pistol bullets, in the room was found the improvised operating table, together with surgical instruments, rubber aprons and bandages.

The scene of the imprisonment and slaying, a house in a residential district, is three or four miles from the Heaton home. The house, police said they had learned, was rented early in the week by Heaton.

REAPPORTIONMENT OF HOUSE ABANDONED FOR THIS SESSION

Committee Decides Census of 1920 Would Be Unfair Basis to Farming Sections.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—The House census committee today abandoned for this session plans to reapportion the membership of the House on the basis of the 1920 census. Several bills proposing reapportionment have been introduced.

Representative Fenn (Rep., Connecticut), moved abandonment of all action now and was supported by Representative Rankin of Mississippi, ranking Democrat on the committee. They argued that adoption of the 1920 census as a basis would seriously affect agriculture and farming sections, the population which was thinned by movement to the cities at that time.

RESCUE CHIEF ASPHYXIATED; FATE OF 175 MEN IN DOUBT

Five Other Members of Force Trying to Save Trapped Miners in Utah Are Overcome by Poisonous Fumes—Smoke and Gas Hinders Work.

HOPE THAT SOME MAY BE ALIVE

Three Explosions Occurred—Nurses and Doctors Arrived From Salt Lake City in Special Train.

By the Associated Press.

CASTLE GATE, Utah, March 8.—With one rescuer dead and excess gas and smoke hindering the work of the various rescue crews, the fate of approximately 175 men entombed today in a triple explosion in the Utah Fuel Co. mine near here, is still unknown. The only hope for the entombed miners is that those who were not killed directly by the blast were able to erect a barricade quickly enough to block off the fumes which were permeating the mine and have been pouring out of the entrances for hours. Some hope is expressed for those fortunate enough to be near the first aid station, which is about 3000 feet from the mouth of the main tunnel.

Most of the men entombed are married. Two weeks ago the company cut down the working force by laying off men who had no dependants.

Rescue Worker Killed.

George Wilson, superintendent of the coal company, was asphyxiated this afternoon while leading a rescue crew into the mine. Five of his comrades were overcome by gas but were revived. Another crew penetrated the escape way for more than 1000 feet without discovering any bodies.

No official list of the men entombed can be obtained because the rack of the mine upon which identification checks are placed was wrecked by the explosion.

The first explosion occurred shortly after 8 o'clock. It was violent and was followed by another blast. Twenty minutes later a third followed.

Nurses and doctors arrived from Salt Lake City by a special train at three o'clock. Mine rescue cars are enroute from Dawson, Butte and Phoenix. The rescue force at the mine is made up of volunteers from various other mines in the district. The Red Cross is aiding families of the entombed miners and other organizations are preparing to help care for the sufferers.

Rescuers are working to remove the debris at the main entrance as relatives of the entombed miners look on with anxiety.

Telephone and electric light poles, timber, pipes and debris that were near the main way were blown across the valley, which is nearly a mile wide. The second explosion devastated the fan house. The third completed the destruction by causing a cave-in. The office building a hundred feet from the shaft, was partly destroyed.

BREWER CONFESSES HE PAID $15,000 TO STATE OFFICIAL

operated under these terms until the middle of last July, when the State official advised him that he would have to cease making real beer, as the other "protected breweries" also would do, because there were several "under-cover men" (the vernacular for agents sent secretly into the city to investigate conditions) working here at that time. As soon as it was "safe" to resume operations he would be advised.

The brewery, for the next five months, had to content itself with production of near-beer of legal alcoholic content. But about the middle of last December, the brewer added, he was informed by the State official that the Griesedieck brewery could resume manufacture and sale of real beer on the "old terms"—$1 a case for protection. The brewer didn't know whether he wanted to resume on the "old terms," declaring $1 a case was such a high charge for "protection" that the brewery had not made any considerable amount of money, considering the danger involved in the event of arrest.

Insisted on $1 a Case.

The State official, asserts the brewer, declared he was certain he "could not shake them from that price" and advised the Griesedieck plant to resume making real beer under the "old conditions" to avoid possible trouble for the brewery.

After some consideration, the brewer continued, he decided to resume on the old basis, and, about the middle of last January, again began making and selling

Most of the men entombed are married. Two weeks ago the company cut down the working force by laying off men who had no dependants.

Rescue Worker Killed.

George Wilson, superintendent of the coal company, was asphyxiated this afternoon while leading a rescue crew into the mine. Five of his comrades were overcome by gas but were revived. Another crew penetrated the escape way for more than 1600 feet without discovering any bodies.

No official list of the men entombed can be obtained because the rack of the mine upon which identification checks are placed was wrecked by the explosion.

The first explosion occurred shortly after 8 o'clock. It was violent and was followed by another blast. Twenty minutes later a third followed.

Nurses and doctors arrived from Salt Lake City by a special train at three o'clock. Mine rescue cars are enroute from Dawson, Butte and Phoenix. The rescue force at the mine is made up of volunteers from various other mines in the district. The Red Cross is aiding families of the entombed miners and other organizations are preparing to help care for the sufferers.

Rescuers are working to remove the debris at the main entrance as relatives of the entombed miners look on with anxiety.

Telephone and electric light poles, timber, pipes and debris that were near the main way were blown across the valley, which is nearly a mile wide. The second explosion devastated the fan house. The third completed the destruction by causing a cave-in. The office building a hundred feet from the shaft, was partly destroyed.

operated under these terms until the middle of last July, when the State official advised him that he would have to cease making real beer, as the other "protected breweries" also would do, because there were several "under-cover men" (the vernacular for agents sent secretly into the city to investigate conditions) working here at that time. As soon as it was "safe" to resume operations he would be advised.

The brewery, for the next five months, had to content itself with production of near-beer of legal alcoholic content. But about the middle of last December, the brewer added, he was informed by the State official that the Griesedieck brewery could resume manufacture and sale of real beer on the "old terms"—$1 a case for protection. The brewer didn't know whether he wanted to resume on the "old terms," declaring $1 a case was such a high charge for "protection" that the brewery had not made any considerable amount of money, considering the danger involved in the event of arrest.

Insisted on $1 a Case.

The State official, asserts the brewer, declared he was certain he "could not shake them from that price" and advised the Griesedieck plant to resume making real beer under the "old conditions" to avoid possible trouble for the brewery.

After some consideration, the brewer continued, he decided to resume on the old basis, and, about the middle of last January, again began making and selling real beer and paying $1 a case for "protection." Real beer was sold by the brewery until Feb. 21, when Chief Federal Enforcement Agent Nations swooped down on the brewery with his agents, seized between 700 and 800 cases of real beer, halted a truckload of the beer a mile from the brewery, and arrested the officials and employes of the brewery to the number of 43. The brewery officials and employes were taken to the Federal Building at Eighth and Olive streets in police patrol wagons. At the building, after long waits, the majority of the employes were dismissed, but four officials and seven employes were placed under bond, charged with violation of the Volstead act.

Money Paid in Hotel Rooms.

The brewer said arrangements for conferences with the State official were made over the telephone at various times, that the official came to St. Louis from Jefferson City to collect the "graft," and that payments were made in hotel rooms, never at the brewery. Payments, he added, always were made by the brewery the day before the beer was to be sent out of the plant, and averaged $1000 a week.

Shortly after Nations made his raid on the Griesedieck Brewery Feb. 21 and arrived at the Federal Building with the Griesedieck brothers and their employes, Raymond Griesedieck, vice president of the brewery, was taken for a conference to the office of David Nolan, head of the St. Louis office of the Intelligence Unit of the Internal Revenue Department. This unit has the duty of checking up o nthe personnel and activities of Federal prohibition enforcement officers. Nolan, under special instructions from Elmer L. Irey, chief of the unit with offices in Washington, had begun an investigation here early in January into the extensive sale of "protected" beer in St. Louis bars.

What transpired at the conference between Nolan and Raymond Griesedieck has not been disclosed. Nolan, in fact, has made no statements since the inquiry began, but has forwarded reports of his progress to his superiors in Washington. Last night, when pressed for a statement concerning the brewer's confession, Nolan pointed out that the rules of his department forbid him from making any statements to any but his superior officers.

Brewer Had Hard Time Confessing.

The Post-Dispatch, however, learned that officials of the Griesedieck Brewery soon after began negotiations with the Government to make a "clean breast" of the protection graft, and throw themselves upon the mercy of the Government, which was "rattling the doors of the penitentiary" for bribery, and threatening confiscation of the brewery under penalties fixed for illegal sale of real beer.

Through their attorney officials of the Griesedieck Brewery offered to make a full statement to Assistant Attorney-General Dyott, in charge of Volstead prosecutions in St. Louis and Eastern Missouri. Dyott was indecisive. After a few days one of the brewery's attorneys hastened to Washington and began seeking "higher up" in the Government in an effort to get an instruction to Dyott to hear the brewery's full statement, or confession.

This attorney returned emptyhanded. Immediately a prominent Mossouri politician, who formerly held an important Government post, hastened to Washington, and last Friday afternoon Mrs. Mabel W. Willebrandt, the Assistant Attorney-General at Washington in charge of liquor prosecution throughout the nation, telegraphed instructions to St. Louis that the brewer's confession should be taken by Government officials here. The brewer thereupon was notified, as were his counsel, with the result that the full and complete confession, involving two State officials, was in the hands of Government officials here last night.

Inquiry Centers on Officials.

Meanwhile it is understood the special investigators of the Intelligence Unit, under Agent Nolan, are centering their attention on the two State officials involved in the confession. Conferences have been held between Gov. Hyde and the special investigators. It is understood that no warrants will be sought for the arrest of persons involved, but that the facts later will be presented to a Federal grand jury for indictments.

Eleven officials and employes of the Griesedieck brewery are under charges of violation of the Volstead act as a result of Nations' raid of Feb. 21. They are: Anton A. Griesedieck, president of the brewery; Ray Griesedieck, vice president; R. P. Griesedieck, secretary; J. E. Griesedieck, treasurer; A. J. Windler, cashier; Herman Oliges, bookkeeper; Edward Wagner, brewmaster; Charles Stoecher, Theodore Gierse, shipping clerk; Ben Schaeffer, driver of the seized truck, and Charles Manshardt, helper on the truck.

Progress of Inquiry Into Sale Here of "Protected" Beer.

Investigation into the charges of protection, for the making and sale of real beer in St. Louis, was ordered from Washington, and was carried on for six weeks before the raid of Feb. 21, as was told exclusively in the Post-Dispatch on that day. The scene of the inquiry at times moved from St. Louis to Kansas City and Jefferson City.

The investigators sent here were members of the intelligence unit of the Internal Revenue Department. This unit has the duty of checking up on the personnel and activities of the regular prohibition enforcement officers. E. L. Irey is chief of the unit in Washington, and David Nolan, a former St. Louis police sergeant, is local representative here.

As told exclusively in the Post-Dispatch Feb. 21, Nolan was summoned to Washington by Irey, the first week in January, after it became a matter of common knowledge in St. Louis that real beer, of illegal alcoholic content, was being sold by brewers here to saloons and to syndicates of individual purchasers. In the saloons where the beer was sold, customers were told that they need not fear to drink it, as it was real beer, made in one of the large St. Louis breweries, and that it was "protected" by payment of $1 a case, to permit its unhampered sale.

In the case of the sales to syndicates, delivery was made, usually in 100-case lots, at the home of some individual, who would apportion the beer to others and arrange for transporting it to their homes.

Negotiations by Phone.

When Nolan returned to St. Louis he was accompanied by five special agents, not known here. One of these investigators soon learned the method pursued by the Griesedieck Brewery in its arrangements for "protection." The investigator got his first information through overhearing a conversation of prominent politicians in a hotel lobby.

The investigators learned that the brewers' negotiations for "protection" were carried on by telephone, and that two telephone numbers, one in Kansas City and one in Jefferson City, were called by the brewers, in the course of these negotiations.

At that time, the Griesedieck officials were protesting against the price of $1 a case for "protection" as being too high. They said it did not leave them a fair profit on their product, which, with few exceptions, was bringing them $4 a case from the retailers. A case, of 24 pint bottles, retailed usually at 50 cents a bottle, or $12, making the retailer's profit $8 a case.

The investigators learned that one of the brewers was instructed to call the Kansas City telephone number on Jan. 14, or to call the Jefferson City number on the following day, Jan. 15. Nolan and three of the investigators went to Kansas City on Jan. 13, to watch that end of the negotiations.

Before they left, Nolan learned on Jan. 12, that the local Federal enforcement agents were to raid two saloons selling the beer of the brewer who had made the chief complaint against the price charged for "protection." The raids were made that day, and were at the saloons of "Buck" Keenan, 9 North Seventh street, and Joe Parisi, Grand boulevard and Hebert street. Real beer was found at both places, and prosecutions were instituted.

Telephone Wire Tapped.

In Kansas City, the investigators learned that the telephone number given to the brewers was that of a downtown office, where State officials have business. This office was watched from windows of an adjoining building, and the telephone wire leading to the office was tapped, and some conversations, in which a State official figured, were heard.

Investigators also visited Jefferson City, and it was learned that a St. Louis brewer made several attempts to get in touch with a State official, but was unsuccessful in this.

Jan. 17, one of the investigators learned that the negotiations appeared to be "off" because there was "something hot on," and that "protection" might not be available for a time. It was at this time that E. C. Yellowly, chief of general prohibition agents, was in St. Louis, having stopped here on his way to investigate the situation in Williamson County, Ill. This caused the brewers to believe that an immediate campaign against them, directed from Washington headquarters, was to begin at that time.

The unsettled conditions thus brought about lasted for several days. On Feb. 4, investigators reported that a brewer was again in communication with the State official who had figured in the previous inquiry. Arrangements were made, the investigators learned, for a meeting between the brewer and the State official at Hotel Jefferson, and the meeting took place, one of the agents reporting he saw the brewer in the company of the official.

Conferences at Hotel.

The brewer wished to "release" 1000 cases of beer on Feb. 14. The brewer and the State official again met at the Jefferson Feb. 13.

A third meeting of the two, it was learned, was to take place Feb. 20. On that day, the investigators watched the hotel, and saw the two men in the building at the same time, one coming down in an elevator some minutes after the other had gone upstairs; but the two were not actually seen together at that time.

The raid on the brewery by Nations the next morning followed, and then, after long negotiations, came the confession yesterday from an official of the brewery.

Railroad President Killed by Fall From His Horse in Central Park

ALFRED H. SMITH.

STATEMENTS BY PARTY LEADERS ON REED'S DEFEAT

Senator, Denying Rumored Truce With Klansmen, Says Hooded Society Was Interested in Opponent.

RESULTS GRATIFYING, SAYS McADOO CHIEF

"Vindication of Missouri Democracy," Is Hay's Comment—Victory for Progress, Says Long.

Statements commenting on the repudiation of Senator Reed yesterday by the Democratic county conventions in a large majority of the counties, making certain that Reed will be unable to control the Democratic State convention in Springfield April 15, were issued last night by Reed and by Charles C. Oliver, manager of the McAdoo campaign in Missouri, and Breckinridge Long and Charles M. Hay, leaders in the anti-Reed movement.

The statements were:

SENATOR REED: "I shall make no statement regarding the mass meetings or county conventions until the result is definitely known.

I may have lost—if so, I would rather be defeated fighting for principles I believe to be right than gain a victory by their abandonment.

The statement in this afternoon's St. Louis Star that there was a rumor that the Klan has ceased opposing Reed on the understanding that Reed was not opposed to the seating of Mayfield, the Texas Senator, and the further intimation that a truce had been arranged with the Klan; are just as false as anything ever written or spoken by any man who has no regard whatever for the truth.

There never was a truce, an agreement or an arrangement of any kind between myself and the Ku Klux Klan, or any of its representatives.

The truth is—that wherever the Klan's activities are known, they are found to be in the interest of Mr. McAdoo.

Views of McAdoo Manager.

C. C. OLIVER: The results reported from the township and county conventions are, of course, very gratifying. It clearly indicates that the Democracy of Missouri has expressed its second sober thought, and that thought has been recorded so plainly that "he who runs may read." The Democrats of Missouri, like the Democrats of every other state in the Union, believe in fair play. They neither condone nor approve any tactics employed in a political way that would not stand the test when measured by the standard of personal conduct.

Senator Reed said in the campaign that the issue in Missouri was between himself and Mr. McAdoo, and the Senator has long been recognized as one who is eminently qualified to sense public opinion. His analysis of the situation I assume is correct. Therefore, if the verdict of Missouri is to be taken as a criterion of the Democratic sentiment throughout the nation (as Senator Reed indicated it should be) it shows clearly and conclusively that Mr. McAdoo is the outstanding candidate in the contest today. He showed, as a public official, he is capable of doing that which the public had a right to expect; that as a private citizen, practicing his profession, he was able to command the attention that every lawyer desires.

The verdict in Missouri, briefly analyzed, is this: As a public official Mr. McAdoo has proven himself to be worthy of higher honors. The progressive sentiment demands such a candidate. In public and private life he has measured up in every way to the Jeffersonian standard of being capable, honest and efficient.

"Reed's Elimination Absolute."

CHARLES M. HAY—Vindication of Missouri Democracy is complete. Reed's elimination as a presidential candidate is absolute. His pretensions as the representative of Missouri Democracy are exposed. Missouri Democrats can now face the democracy of the nation without apology.

Reed's attempt to make this primarily a fight between himself and McAdoo was futile. The fight was at all times primarily and essentially to prevent a commitment of Missouri Democracy to the impossible and unthinkable candidacy of James A. Reed.

Under the leadership of Woodrow Wilson, we dedicated ourselves to certain principles and looked forward toward the realization of certain high hopes and ideals. We fought determinedly and perhaps bitterly against the effort to lead Missouri Democracy to a repudiation of these principles and to an abandonment of our hopes and ideal. The fight was waged by Democrats with different preferences and personal inclinations as to the standard bearer of the party to be nominated by the National Convention, but there was no difference of opinion upon the major issue.

Missouri Democracy can now move forward with calmness and dignity toward the selection of representative men and women who shall speak the best thought and aspiration of Missouri in conference with the Democracy of other states.

'Progressive Democracy Triumphs.'

BRECKINRIDGE LONG—Democrats of Missouri have spoken with a positive tone and have left no doubt as to their convictions. The decision is a sweeping victory for the principles of progressive Democracy. Clean politics and a clean government is the demand of Missouri's Democrats. A return to honesty in the national Government is the need of the hour. Corruption and intrigue must be driven from office. The administration of the Government must again find its basis in the confidence of the people.

Missourians "Resent Unjust Villification," McAdoo Leader's View.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 8.—The people of Missouri and of the United States "resent unjust villification," said a statement issued from the office of David Ladd Rockwell, chairman of the "McAdoo-for-President" campaign, tonight.

"William G. McAdoo," the statement said, "has been tendered a real tribute by the Missouri Democracy's repudiation of Reed. There is cause for exceeding gratification far more than from the standpoint of Mr. McAdoo's candidacy for the presidential nomination. Missouri Democrats have contributed much to their party. They have remained steadfast to the real ideals of integrity, honor and justice, which inspired the party during the Wilson administration and which have been defiled by Reed. Reed in his speeches said the issue was Reed or McAdoo. He was correct. It was between Reed, a political pariah, and McAdoo, the hope of Progressive Democracy. The people of the Democratic party of Missouri understood this. They decided it unhesitatingly and unequivocally."

The nationwide issue, the statement said, is progress or reaction and expressed the opinion that the people will choose "McAdoo, the hope of progressive America."

PATROLMAN DUNN'S FUNERAL

The funeral of Patrolman John Dunn, 44 years old, of 3920 South Compton avenue, who died early yesterday of penumonia, developed from a cold contracted while he was doing his extra bit in the crime cleanup, will be held from the family residence Tuesday morning.

He was taken ill Thursday after working overtime on his beat in the Central district. He had been on the force for 20 years, starting as a special officer during the World's Fair here.

Reed Is Repudiated By An Overwhelming Vote

in many instances made it clear that the McAdoo sentiment, which was widespread in Missouri prior to the Senate committee oil revelations, had largely vanished. Notwithstanding the vigorous campaign of the McAdoo managers, they were able to obtain instructions in only 10 counties which will be represented by only 94 delegates. In some of the counties specifically instructed against Reed, there also were specific instructions against McAdoo.

As a whole the conventions appeared to be intent upon eliminating the candidacies of both, in so far as Missouri was concerned.

In St. Louis uninstructed delegations were elected in the Fifteenth and Seventeenth wards, both being considered anti-Reed. Reed delegations were elected in the remaining 26 wards, but in the Nineteenth, Twenty-third, Twenty-fifth, Twenty-sixth, Twenty-seventh and Twenty-eighth, the anti-Reed forces charged unfair tactics, held separate meetings and will have contesting delegations at Springfield.

Jackson County Votes Divided.

Even in Jackson County and Kansas City, Reed's home, he failed to make a clean sweep. Wards controlled by Joseph B. Shannon, factional boss in Kansas City, who in every previous Reed contest has supported the Senator, failed to instruct for him this time. Of the 154 Jackson County delegates, 102 were instructed for Reed, 37 were uninstructed, nine are anti-Reed and six are involved in a contest.

The effect of the repudiation of Reed on Missouri politics is problematical. It is quite generally conceded that a considerable number of the Reed following, after his attitude of opposition to the Democratic ticket in 1920, voted the Republican ticket. It was a plea of some of his more active supporters in the campaign just closed that Reed should have the Missouri indorsement to make certain that his following would keep in line and to make certain the election of the Democratic ticket in Missouri next fall.

There is little reason to believe that the rejection of Reed by a large majority of the Democrats will have the effect of cementing the party, nor is there reason to believe that his success would have had that effect, the bitterness of the anti-Reed sentiment among Democrats having been demonstrated in the conventions.

St. Charles County Democrats Instruct Against Reed.

Four delegates instructed to oppose Senator Reed but otherwise left to their own devices were elected at the St. Charles County Democratic Convention yesterday at St. Charles.

The session was stormy at times, one township representative, Frank Iffrig of St. Peter's, leaving the hall. "I won't stand for that anti-Reed instruction," he shouted. There was considerable debate over the question of an uninstructed delegation against the Senator. McAdoo was discussed and termed "unavailable because of the oil scandal" by several speakers.

CITY DEMOCRATS IN BITTER FIGHT FOR DELEGATES

Miss Fannie D. Robb, Mrs. Edmund F. Brown, Mrs. Clark McAdams and Mrs. E. M. Grossman. The Reed delegation included Bennett C. Clark, Mrs. R. E. Old father, L. C. Kingsland, Oliver, John P. Leahy, Peter Barrett and W. H. Hughes.

The anti-Reed delegates said they would present themselves at Springfield not as a contesting delegation, but as the regular representatives of the ward Democracy.

The Twenty-seventh Ward convention also split, each side electing 16 delegates.

"Rump" Convention in 19th.

A "rump" meeting followed the Nineteenth Ward convention, which was held in an undertaking chapel, at 1710 North Grand boulevard, with John P. Cullinane, undertaker, as chairman. The meeting elected a pro-Reed delegation of four, but W. W. Forbes, opposing Reed, called away a group which met soon after at his home, 2219 Coleman street. Nine women and five men were at this meeting, and an anti-Reed delegation was named. Forbes displayed a mimeographed form, stating that the signers withdrew from the ward meeting because Republicans were present, and because it was held in a small hall which had been packed in advance. This appeared to be a form of which a number of copies had been made, in anticipation of such action.

The anti-Reed faction in the Twenty-third Ward held a meeting in the dark and elected eight delegates instructed against Reed, after Reed forces in control of the original session refused to call for a rising vote on a motion making D. J. McEvoy of the pro-Reed group permanent chairman. The convention was in West End Hall, Vandeventer and Finney avenues. The anti-Reed group adjourned to another room, but the lights were extinguished and the janitor refused to relight them. The 'antis' counted noses and reported that the Reed faction had 67 men, women and children, while the others had 70 men and women.

Contest in 25th Ward.

The Twenty-fifth Ward meeting, held at 4512 Manchester avenue, split into two nearly equal divisions when the temporary chairman, E. A. Feehan, refused to recognize the nomination of James C. Jones for permanent chairman. Instead, Feehan recognized a motion for declaring the nominations closed, and for choice of himself as permanent chairman. The supporters of Jones, who were against Reed, refused to vote on this motion, for which the Reed supporters had, by their own count, 156 votes. The supporters of Jones withdrew to the other side of the room, and elected a delegation of 10, which included Jones, S. B. McPheeters, W. Christy Bryan, Sidney S. May and Mrs. Fred A. Reid. It is uninstructed, but is strongly against Reed. The Reed delegation includes Sam Lazarus and Committeeman James Griffin.

Edward F. Goltra, national committeeman, and former Gov. Gardner were present, but took no sides, though the Reed men proposed that they should "count noses" to see which side was in the majority. Morton Jourdan, prominent corporation lawyer, was with the anti-Reed side, and A. M. Frumberg, an active Reed worker, coupled Jourdan, and "Sport" Brady, who also was on the anti-Reed side, in some picturesque invective.

Hay Leads Second Meeting.

In the Twenty-sixth Ward, the meeting place was a hall at the northwest corner of Easton and Marcus avenues. The Reed forces, headed by P. J. McNamara, entered the hall early, some of them by the rear entrance, and held a meeting while others were gathering outside the hall. Charles M. Hay, anti-Reed leader, and Mrs. Hay, were among those who arrived shortly after 8, and who could not get into the hall at first. At 8:15 some of the Reed men came out and announced that the meeting was over, and that nine delegates, uninstructed but favoring Reed, had been elected.

Hay and his followers pressed into the hall, and a second and larger meeting was held, which was disturbed continually by the protests of McNamara, standing in the middle of the room and shouting that the meeting had adjourned.

McNamara and Hay were the center of several demonstrations, which were checked by policemen. When Roy Hicks, a lawyer, began to read a list of anti-Reed selections for delegates, someone grabbed it from his hand and tore it up. The second meeting lasted 25 minutes, and selected nine uninstructed anti-Reed delegates.

Two Delegations Named in St. Louis County.

St. Louis County had the same result in the Reed and anti-Reed fight for delegations to the State Democratic convention that occurred in a number of city wards—it selected two delegations of 24 each, one from each faction, whose claims will have to be adjusted at the convention.

Among those named as delegates by the anti-Reed forces are: Arthur V. Lashly, former Prosecuting Attorney and reform leader; John Mooney, Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Wilfred Jones, J. C. Roberts, Miss Byrd Anne Yore, Mrs. Mellicene Smith, a State Representative, and Mrs. George Barnett. The anti-Reed faction comprises many elements that have been active in Clean Election League work. This delegation was instructed to cast its vote against anything to assist Reed.

Among those on the Reed delegation, which was instructed for the Senator, are: Maurice Cronin, chairman of the Democratic County Committee and a machine leader; Assistant Prosecuting Attorney David B. Russell, Hamp Rothwell, Mrs. Con P. Curran and Mrs. J. C. Estes.

The anti-Reed meeting wound up in a general reform discussion with condemnation of the rule of Republican Boss Essen and the suggestion by one speaker of running Lashly for Governor. The original convention broke up when the Reed man, acting as chairman, ruled out protests that three township delegations were not accredited.

Four of the five county townships sending delegations to the county convention instructed them as follows: Twenty-six delegates for Reed and 58 against him, but in the fifth township, Central, there was a split similar to that in the county gathering, with the result that there was an anti-Reed delegation of 162 claiming recognition from there, opposing a group of the same number favoring Reed. The Central Township convention was marked by extreme disorder and some fisticuffs. Deputies of Sheriff Willmann, Republican, looked on with little effort to restore order.

THOUSANDS BID MUNDELEIN AND HAYES GODSPEED

Archbishops Given Great Ovation as They Sail for Rome to Be Elevated to the Cardinalate.

DEPARTURE OF SHIP DELAYED BY CROWD

Throngs Line Streets Chanting Prayers for a Safe Journey — Bells of St. Patrick's Chime.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 8.—So many thousands tried today to bid godspeed to Archbishops Patrick J. Hayes and George W. Mundelein, as they departed for Rome to receive from Pope Pius XI the red hats designating them Cardinals and princes of the church, that other passengers of the Berengaria were unable to reach stateroom sand the ship's sailing was delayed 20 minutes.

Cheering throngs gathered outside the archiepiscopal residence hours before the time of departure. When the prelates of New York and Chicago finally appeared, ready for the journey to the pier after having said farewells to notables of the church and laity, they were greeted with such acclaim as almost to upset their dignity.

Followed by Procession.

The Archbishops and their retinue were taken to the Berengaria in 15 automobiles, guarded by mounted and motor-cycle police. The procession was joined by an organization of girl scouts, the police Glee Club, the Catholic Club, the St. Vincent de Paul Society, the Holy Name Society, the Knights of Columbus, the consulters of the archdiocese and trustees of St. Patrick's Cathedral.

Then there were marching groups of school children, students of the Cathedral College of which Archbishop Hayes once was president, and gray-haired alumni of the Christian Brothers' School on the East Side, where, as classmates in the '80's they had known the prelates as "Pat" and "Georgie."

Crowds lined the streets all the way to the pier, cheering, chanting prayers for a safe journey and waving flags—some the Stars and Stripes, others the yellow and white papal insignia. Through it all chimed the bells of St. Patrick's.

Sailing of Ship Delayed.

Mounted police deflected all wheel traffic within two blocks of the pier, but steamship and Government officials had suspended the rules compelling ship visitors to show credentials, and the crowd that followed the prelates upon the pier and aboard the Berengaria crushed everything before it, halting the embarkation of passengers and the distribution of baggage.

While the Berengaria was leaving her berth and long after she headed downstream, to disappear in a snow squall, the North River water front, pier heads, streets and windows of overlooking skyscraper office buildings were black with those who sought by waving arms, fluttering handkerchiefs and even by shouting to indicate they wished the archbishops bon voyage.

Soon after the Berengaria slipped into the squall and out of sight, reports floated about the city that she had grounded off the New Jersey coast and that she had missed accident in the form of a triple collision with the French liner Paris, which was feeling her way in from abroad, and with the Lamport and Holt liner Van Dyck, which just then was crossing the main channel, going from Hoboken to Brooklyn.

Squall Drives Ship Off Course.

The facts, as reported by Cunard and French line officials after communicating with their vessels by wireless, were that the snow squall, striking at 72 miles an hour, crowded the Paris off her course toward Ellis Island. In the midday darkness and with his vessel lurching heavily, the commander of the Paris dropped anchor.

Meantime the squall hit the Berengaria, driving her 1000 feet off her course toward the Jersey shore. Her commander reversed engines and backed out of his dangerous position, maneuvered his ship back and forth in the channel until the squall blew over, then proceeded down the bay.

It was while the Berengaria was lying in the channel fighting for position that the Van Dyck, plowing through the blinding snow, passed quite near her. A few minutes later the Paris also passed the Berengaria in the narrow channel, with only a scant 200 feet of water between them. Steamship officials declared, however, that while the situation had contained all the elements of tragedy, excellent seamanship on the part of the three commanders had kept danger at a distance.

FRENCH PUBLISH THE 'SECRET TREATY'

Document Mentioned in Alleged Lloyd George Interview Featured in 'Yellow Book."

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, March 8.—The document approved by President Wilson and the French Premier, M. Clemenceau, in the absence of the British Prime Minister, Lloyd George, on April 20, 1919, at the peace negotiations, and referred to by Lloyd George in a recent alleged interview as a "secret treaty," is one of the features of the French "yellow book" issued today.

The document as published is not signed; it comprises a text which is virtually identical with that which was finally approved and inserted in the Versailles treaty, with the exception of the important second part of paragraph 3, article 429.

The omitted paragraph is the one providing for delay in the evacuation of German territory, if, after 15 years' occupation, the guarantees against unprovoked aggression are not considered sufficient.

The yellow book shows that the document was submitted to the "Big Four" two days later, Lloyd George being present, but Premier Orlando, the Italian representative, being absent. The manner in which the document is presented and the explanation concerning it are evidently intended to explode the theory that it was a secret document.

The official text of the accord as approved by President Wilson and Clemenceau on April 20, 1919, is as follows:

"1: Between the Governments of the United States and the republic of France, it is agreed that any violation by Germany of the engagements taken by her according to the terms of the articles and the letters A, B, C of the present treaty shall be regarded as a hostile act against the signatories of the treaty and as calculated to disturb the peace of the world.

"2. A pledge is to be taken by the United States of America to come immediately to the assistance of France if any unprovoked movement of aggression against her is made by Germany.

"3. This pledge is to be subject to the approval of the executive council of the League of Nations and is to continue in force until it is agreed by the contracting Powers that the league itself affords sufficient guarantee."

ADMITS SMOTHERING HER CHILD.

Wife of College Student Held on Manslaughter Charge.

By the Associated Press.

PORTLAND, Me., March 8.—Mrs. Nettie MacLean of Tacoma, Wash., has admitted that she killed her infant daughter by smothering the child with a pillow at a hotel in Brunswick on the morning of Feb. 28, County Attorney Clement F. Robinson announced here tonight.

Mrs. MacLean and her husband, Kenneth Ross MacLean of Tacoma, Bowdoin College sophomore, are held on charges of manslaughter.

DOCTOR OPERATED 80 TIMES, BUT HAD NO LICENSE

Dr. Behagen Tells the Police He Practiced Medicine in St. Louis for 18 Months Without Permit.

ARRESTED AFTER WOMAN LOSES EYE

Complainant Charges He Picked Up Needle After Dropping It to Floor and Continued Operation.

To the numerous diplomas which Dr. Ernest Behagen says he has received from medical schools in various parts of the world, the police yesterday added a warrant charging him with practicing medicine and surgery in Missouri without a license from the State Board of Health, and with holding himself out to cure.

The warrant was issued by Prosecuting Attorney Schweitzer on complaint of Mrs. Viola Monko of 1903½ Wright street, who asserts an operation by Dr. Behagen on her "crossed eyes" resulted in her losing the sight of the right eye and possible loss of sight in her other one. She says she paid him $125 for the operation.

Dr. Behagen frankly admitted to police and reporters yesterday that he has practiced in St. Louis for the last 18 months without a license and that he has performed at least 80 operations here on the eyes and other parts of the body. The operation on Mrs. Monko, the mother of a nine-months'-old child was successful, but she disregarded his instructions and the eye became infected, he says. He insists his present predicament is the result of persecution by the local medical fraternity which he likened to a closed corporation.

An Alien, Faces Deportation.

Conviction under the charges in the warrant would result in a fine of $50 to $500 or imprisonment for 30 days to a year, or both. As an alien, being a resident of England, he also faces the possibility of being deported.

Dr. Behagen is 33 years old and has been staying at the Plaza Hotel. He says he had an office with another specialist when he came to St. Louis, but that they disagreed and since then he has been treating patients at their homes.

Following his arrest Friday, Dr. Behagen said he had graduated from Lyola College, Copenhagen, Denmark, and had taken post-graduate courses under the eminent eye specialist, Dr. Lawrence Fuchs, at Vienna, and at the Chicago Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat Hospital. Searching his baggage, police found diplomas from the latter institution and from the American School of Chiropractic, also at Chicago.

Never Applied for License.

Dr. Behagen said he is better qualified to practice than are many licensed, practitioners here and offered to match his skill in a clinic test with any eye specialist in town. Explaining his not having a license, he asserted he applied for one shortly after his arrival in St. Louis and that the State Board of Health has purposely refrained from passing on his application. This statement was contradicted by Dr. Emmett P. North of St. Louis, president of the board, who stated its records show Dr. Behagen has never applied for a license.

A warrant charging Dr. Behagen with practicing without a license in Illinois was issued at East St. Louis Dec. 6 last, but authorities were unable to serve him. The warrant followed complaint by Clara Remnecamp of 2302 Farrar street, St Louis, that Dr. Behagen treated her for neck and eye troubles at an office on Missouri avenue in East St. Louis from September to December, charging $95.

Needle Not Sterilized, Charge.

Dr. Behagen and Mrs. Monko differ as to what caused her blindness. Her story, corroborated by her mother, Mrs. Josephine Brune, who was present during the operation, is that Dr. Behagen operated on her eyes with an ordinary sewing needle and without using anesthetics and that, while in the midst of his work, he dropped the needle to the floor, picked it up and resumed operating, not having sterilized the instrument. To this alleged lack of sterilization she attributes the infection which brought on blindness.

This story is altogether untrue, Dr. Behagen says. His story is that he performed a minor operation with a sterilized surgical needle, which he did not drop, and that the operation was a success; but that Mrs. Monko, disregarding his instructions to remain inside the house and in darkness, went outside and caught cold, the eye infection and blindness following. The operation was performed Jan. 23.

Dr. Behagen has been in the United States about three years, according to his story. He says he was born in England, reared in France and served during the World War in the French army.

BOOKKEEPER WHO STOLE $3805 SAYS PROHIBITION 'DID IT'

"Wanted to Show 'Em," So He Kept on One Continual Drunk and Forged Checks to Pay the Bills.

SPENT THE REST ON TAXICABS AND WOMEN

Employe of Federal Paper Stock Co. Began Peculations Last August — 100 Checks Investigated.

When the employers of Harry J. Fowler, $175-a-month bookkeeper, discovered that he had defrauded them of $3805 by forging checks, he gave in without a murmur and started to dictate a confession as follows:

"David Charak, president, Federal Paper Stock Co., 1815 North Main street. Dear Sir: In August, 1923, I was in need of money and thought of this scheme: To forge the names of officers of the company."

He went on to detail the method of his peculations and wound up: "I do not know the exact amount I forged, but I feel certain it will not run up to $2000. Yours very truly, H. J. Fowler. "My home address is Washington Hotel."

The confession was obtained by Joseph H. Grand, attorney for the paper company. After Fowler visited the office of a bonding concern, bond furnished by which protects the company from loss, to repeat his confession yesterday, he was arrested and two warrants were issued, charging him with two particular forgeries. About 100 checks are being investigated.

Fowler's method was to sign checks with the names of President Charak and Max Kleban, secretary-treasurer. He would make the checks payable to former employes. The company has a large labor turnover and officers could not tell readily how long individual laborers remained in their employ. Then he would forgo the payees' names in indorsement, add his own indorsement and cash the checks in saloons and banks. He declared his largest forgery was for $100. To conceal the reduction of the company's bank account he added the amounts of his forgeries to the balances reported by the bank. He withheld forged checks after they were canceled.

Fowler, who is 22 years old, of dapper appearance and a neat dresser, gave himself away by reporting for work one day, evidently intoxicated. He related the cause of his downfall to reporters at Police Headquarters as follows:

"Wine, women and song—that explains it all. I've been working for this company about two and a half years for a pretty good salary. I'm a fellow who always wants something he can't get. Prohibition pounded it into my head that there was something I couldn't get, so last August I started to show 'em I could get all the booze I wanted.

"I was on one continual drunk. I'd go to the office sober, but could hardly wait for noon to get more liquor. The Washington Hotel bar was a mecca till Charlie O'Neal was killed."

Deputy Constable James Miles Jr., as is known, is being sought for the recent murder of O'Neal, proprietor of that saloon.

Fowler said that what he didn't spend on drink he spent on taxicabs and dinners for women. He boasted that his forgeries must have been pretty good, "because they went through the bank." He had $10 when arrested. That, he said, was all he had left and he saw no way of making restitution.

POLICE 'RESULTS OR RESIGN' TIME UP TOMORROW

Reports of Crime in Each District in Last 30 Days Must Be Submitted to Board Tuesday.

MORE THAN 7000 ARRESTS IN PERIOD

Members of Department Have Worked Overtime in Campaign to Clean Up "Red Hots."

Tomorrow is the last day of the 30-days probation period, set by the Police Board and the Chief of Police for "results or resignations." Reports are to be presented to the Board Tuesday by the district captains, which will include the period beginning Feb. 11 and ending tomorrow night. These reports are to show in detail all the crime occurring in each district, with the names of the precinct sergeants and their superior officers.

In the probation period now nearly finished, the police have made more than 7000 arrests, and many of those arrested have been held for the 20-hour period permitted by law. Many raids on saloons frequented by police characters have helped to swell the total of arrests. Policemen have worked 10 to 11 hours a day, and all recreation and vacation periods have been suspended.

Effect of the Campaign.

The reports to be received Tuesday are expected to show a substantial diminution of crime. Some nights during the period of especial police activity have been almost without serious crime, though in the succeeding daytime periods crimes have been committed, the criminals apparently having switched their time of activity to keep out of the way of night raiders.

Sheriff Willmann of St. Louis County complained, after 10 days of the clean-up campaign, that the police were driving the "red-hots" into the county in large numbers. POLICE 'RESULTS OR RESIGN' TIME UP TOMORROW

Reports of Crime in Each District in Last 30 Days Must Be Submitted to Board Tuesday.

MORE THAN 7000 ARRESTS IN PERIOD

Members of Department Have Worked Overtime in Campaign to Clean Up "Red Hots."

Tomorrow is the last day of the 60-days probation period, set by the Police Board and the Chief of Police for "results or resignations." Reports are to be presented to the Board Tuesday by the district captains, which will include the period beginning Feb. 11 and ending tomorrow night. These reports are to show in detail all the crime occurring in each district, with the names of the precinct sergeants and their superior officers.

In the probation period now nearly finished, the police have made more than 7000 arrests, and many of those arrested have been held for the 20-hour period permitted by law. Many raids on saloons frequented by police characters have helped to swell the total of arrests. Policemen have worked 10 to 11 hours a day, and all recreation and vacation periods have been suspended.

Effect of the Campaign.

The reports to be received Tuesday are expected to show a substantial diminution of crime. Some nights during the period of especial police activity have been almost without serious crime, though in the succeeding daytime periods crimes have been committed, the criminals apparently having switched their time of activity to keep out of the way of night raiders.

Sheriff Willmann of St. Louis County complained, after 10 days of the clean-up campaign, that the police were driving the "red-hots" into the county. The principal large-scale robbery committed hereabout within the 30-day period was the robbery of the Citizens' Bank of Maplewood, Feb. 26, in which $6093 was taken by five armed men.

The murder of Robert Kimmel, in Chain of Rocks Park, the night of Feb. 15, in an attempted holdup, was the crime which has attracted most attention in the period. It was solved by the police, who arrested four men, three of them actively concerned in the holdup, and obtained confessions.

Chief of Detectives Hoagland has prepared a series of suggestions for measures to make possible the more effective handling of criminals, with a view to the permanent lessening of crime. These suggestions are in part the outcome of his observations in the present intensive campaign of the police against criminals.

Suggestions of Hoagland.

Some of his suggestions relate to acts of policy on the part of Judges, prosecutors and others in official positions. Others would require new legislation by the State or city.

The most important of the suggestions, which Chief Hoagland will submit to the Police Board for consideration, are:

Bond should be refused in case of second charge against a person already out on bond. Second arrest should suspend the first bond, and the person should be locked up.

High bonds for those charged with felonies, having record of previous convictions, and in all concealed weapons cases. Penitentiary sentences in conceal weapons cases, including those carrying sawed-off shotguns in automobiles, such shotguns being used only for crime.

Fewer pardons and paroles, and none except for first offenders. More use of the habitual criminal act. Less sympathy and consideration for criminals under arrest. Less publicity for criminals, most of whom love notoriety.

A new and drastic vagrancy law, such as the New Orleans city ordinance on this subject, to replace present ineffective law. New Orleans ordinance applies to gamblers and loafers, whether having nominal places of residence or not, and provides for 15 to 30 days' imprisonment.

License for Soft Drink Stands.

Soft drink establishments to be licensed and kept under police supervision, with licenses revocable for violations of law.

The electric chair, to replace the gallows. Death sentences now prevented in some cases by objection of jurors to hanging, rather than to the death penalty in general. All executions in the penitentiary.

Police force should be increased, pension system established, pay increased, and a difference in pay made in favor of plainclothes men, who have more expenses than uniformed police. Bonuses should be given for exceptionally good work, such bonus to be an increase of pay for one year.

Chief Hoagland adds a discussion of moving pictures, which he says too often represent the crook as a hero and a person of superior intelligence, and make policemen and detectives appear as "clowns, brutes or dumbbells." Such representations, he believes, encourage crime. Moving picture makers would not venture to abuse the uniform of the army as they do that of police service, he declares, nor would they be permitted to do so. Such pictures, he declares, lower police morale by creating a public feeling against policemen. A State law should be enacted, he says, prohibiting such representations.

RADIO CUTS EVENING STREET-CAR TRAFFIC

Business Also Reduced by Use of Busses and Autos, Receiver Reports.

Evening street car traffic "has apparently been very materially cut down by the widespread use of radio sets in homes," according to the annual report of Rolla Wells, receiver for the United Railways, just issued for the year ending Dec. 31, 1923.

Sunday and holiday traffic has fallen off also, although the average travel for other days in the week has increased, the report states. The same trend is said to be evident in many other cities. Automobile pleasure riding is regarded as jointly responsible with the radio.

The number of revenue passengers, although seriously falling off in the latter part of the year, was the greatest in the railway's history, there being 292,671,781 revenue and 155,343,193 transfer passengers, for a 2.31 per cent increase over 1922. The net income jumped from $513,091.88 to $809,745, the increase being mainly due to the greater number of passengers.

Difficulty of operations in the congested districts, it is stated, has become more acute. The blame is placed on the parking of automobiles in these districts, "the lack of proper regulation of so-called service cars," the increasing number of automobiles and freight trucks, and "especially the permits granted by Board of Public Service to busses to operate over certain of the heaviest lines of street car traffic (Washington avenue, Grand boulevard and Delmar boulevard, etc.)" These factors, the report says, "have had a serious effect on the expense and efficiency of the service."

Fifty cars of the 777 type were added to the service during the year, and 15 cars were retired. Work has started on 50 more of the 777-type cars.

Music program direct from the Grand Central Theater—Geo. Beban, character actor; Art Lee Utt and Stuart Barrie, organists; Redemich's Concert Orchestra.

Another college concert was successfully broadcast by Radio Station K S D last night when the Glee Club Orchestra of St. Louis University gave a program in the studio. The students acquitted themselves with great credit in their presentation of an exacting list of numbers.

George Devereux, director of music at St. Louis University, was in charge of the program and conducted both the orchestra and choral numbers. The Glee Club sings with a finish that is unusual in college organizations. The orchestra also shows fine training and careful work.

A feature of the program was an address on "What the Chemist Does for Agriculture" by Dr. Gaston Du Bois. This opened a series to be broadcast by Station K S D this month and next, the speakers to be members of the American Society of Chemists.

Tonight Station K S D will broadcast the music played at the Missouri Theater, beginning the transmission at 9 o'clock.

Money Will Be Used to Finance Denver Store and Increase St. Louis Store Capital.

At a special meeting Friday of stockholders of Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney Dry Goods Co., issuance of 10,000 shares of new common stock of $100 par value was authorized. The issue has been underwritten, it is stated, but stockholders are given first call on the stock, up to 20 per cent of their present holdings, at $95 a share.

The capital stock of the company has been increased from $2,500,000 to $4,500,000, but only $1,000,000 of the new stock is to be issued at this time. The $1,000,000 is to be used, President M. L. Wilkinson stated, to finance the Denver Dry Goods Co., recently purchased, and to increase active capital for the St. Louis business.

AUSTIN W. PECK ARRESTED

He Is Accused of Fraud in Sale of Radio Set.

Austin W. Peck of 6040 Kingsbury boulevard was arrested yesterday on a charge of defrauding a resident of Jackson County Ill., who said he paid Peck $47.50 and gave him a note for $150, for a radio set which he did not receive. Peck was arrested a few days ago on a charge of obtaining $25 worth of office supplies by false pretenses. He was convicted in 1921 of embezzlement and was sentenced to a penitentiary term of five years, but was paroled because of ill health.

He is now under $500 bond on each of the new charges.

We couldn't give this old house away

Until my wife sent for the Barrett Book

OURS was an old house, built in an uninteresting period. It hadn't "grown old beautifully." Its old style roof, narrow front porch and prim pairs of windows were just like those of every other old house in town. With its appearance against it we couldn't give it away.

What my wife did

Then my wife got the bright idea of doing it over from the Barrett Book, "Better Homes from Old Houses." This book gave us some wonderful suggestions and a local builder helped us carry them all out. Before we were through we could have sold the old place for our own price.

Could have sold at a profit

But we didn't want to sell. We couldn't have built a new house that would suit us half as well. And a new house would have cost us a good deal more than this remodeling did.

BOUNCING POLICEMAN HAD CHERRY BOUNCE

His Flivver Bounced Off Another's Machine—Police Board May Do Bouncing.

There's many a bounce to this story. First the cherry bounce which Patrolman Richard Ray says a St. Louis County Deputy Sheriff gave him. Next the bounce which his superior officers say the cherry bounce gave Patrolman Ray. Then the bounce of Patrolman Ray's Ford when it hit Albert Fletcher's Essex on Russell avenue at Thirty-ninth street.

Wait—there are still more bounces. Fletcher bounced from shock and anger when he saw Patrolman Ray speed up his flivver after the accident. Patrolman Ray bounced from his seat and drew a revolver when Fletcher overtook him at Pestalozzi street and Michigan avenue. And next Tuesday the Police Board may do some bouncing. All because of that half-pint jar of red and ferocious cherry bounce.

Policeman Arrested.

After leaving the scene of an accident, as it is charged Patrolman Ray did, and threatening a citizen with his revolver, the officer was taken to the Wyoming Street Station by other patrolmen who arrested him. There policemen dragged the jar of cherry bounce from the tonneau of Ray's machine and held it up to the light.

"Taking one look, Capt. Boyle whirled upon his policeman and said accusingly, 'If you drank any of this, man, your'e drunk."

Patrolman Ray denied that he had been bounced by the cherry bounce. He hadn't even been kicked, he said.

"Send for a physician," ordered Capt. Boyle.

The police surgeon was two hours in arriving, and meanwhile the suspect had a good nap.

Examined by Doctor.

The police doctor examined Ray and shook his head. He could not pronounce Ray intoxicated, he declared, but in his opinion the patrolman had been drinking.

Fletcher, who resides at 921 Erskine avenue, St. Louis County told Capt. Boyle that he would appear as witness on the other charges.

Patrolman Ray, who has been on the force since 1913, is a champion salesman of tickets to the Police Circus and was on detached duty for this work the last few days. He told Capt. Boyle that he had been selling tickets out in St. Louis County and had met his friend, the deputy sheriff, whose name he did not know. After describing how the clowns in the Police bounced, Patrolman Ray was surprised to hear the deputy sheriff say, "Have some cherry bounce and get next to what real bouncing is. You'll feel like a whole circus."

STILLS SEIZED IN E. ST. LOUIS

East St. Louis police yesterday raided two homes there, finding liquor and stills on the premises in each case. George Loudwanzki, 917 Walter avenue, at whose home 50 gallons of whisky was found, and Mrs. George Casawoski, 1419 Lake avenue, where three gallons of whisky were seized, are under arrest for further investigation.

DAUGHERTY DEFIES HOUSE, REFUSES TO NAME ACCUSED

Offers, However, to Furnish All Evidence Bearing on Bribery Charges in His Possession.

ZIHLMAN CHEERED AFTER DISAVOWAL

Judiciary Committee Is Instructed to Recommend Course of Action to Get Information Sought.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—Attorney-General Daugherty informed the House today that he was unwilling to comply with its request, that he disclose the names of the two Representatives against whom criminal evidence is said to have been developed before a Chicago grand jury, until he is convinced of their guilt.

He offered, however, to turn over to the House all evidence bearing on the charges in the possession of the Department of Justice and to suspend further investigation until the House has had an opportunity to take action.

Refusal of the Attorney-General to comply with the resolution adopted by the House Thursday to "direct him" to transmit the names to Speaker Gillett left leaders somewhat at sea as to procedure. The Judiciary Committee was instructed to recommend a course of action, and it is expected to do so immediately.

Applaud Zihlman's Statement.

Immediately after the communication from Daugherty had been read to the House, Chair Zihlman of the Labor Committee, who has been mentioned in connection with the Chicago disclosures, addressed the House, declaring that he was innocent of any wrongdoing and demanding that if charges have been made against him a searching investigation of the whole case be undertaken by a House committee.

As on yesterday, when Chairman Langley of the Public Buildings Committee arose to defend his name, which he said had been mentioned in connection with the Chicago grand jury's findings, House members rose and applauded Zihlman after he had concluded his statement.

Several representatives took the floor to express confidence in any colleagues accused of wrongdoing, one of them Representative Clark, Democrat, Florida, launching into an attack on Attorney-General Daugherty, while another, Representative King, Republican, Illinois, bitterly assailed John W. H. Crim, special counsel who handled the Government's case before the Chicago grand jury.

Refers to Crim As "Crook."

Zihlman also referred to Crim, declaring that he had it "on the authority of men of absolute reliability and integrity" that Crim, immediately upon his return to Washington from Chicago, "telephoned the name of another distinguished member of Congress and myself all over the city."

Referring to Crim as a "crook," King said Crim had gone to Chicago "for the purpose of seeing if he could not dig up something."

"He knows," said King, "that there is a resolution pending in this House pertaining to the Department of Justice and another department.

"This man Crim is the man who sold out the Government's case against the harness grafters. After evidence was secured and everything was in order, those cases were taken up somewhere in West Virginia. It was a conspiracy case—a conspiracy between army officers and civilians to graft money off the Government. What did this man do? He indicted the civilians but failed to indict the army officers. The result was that the Government's case fell to the ground and the Government was defeated."

Clark said the reply of the Attorney-General to the House resolution was mere quibbling.

"Bring Daugherty Before Bar."

Declaring that he was in favor "of bringing the Attorney-General before the bar of this House, and punishing him for contempt because of his defiance of the order of the House," Clark said that "it is an outrage upon the dignity of the House and upon the integrity of its membership for the Attorney-General to say that he cannot give the names.

"He is a creature of ours and ought to be made to tell who these members are."

After being instructed to map out a program of procedure, the Judiciary Committee discussed the situation for an hour or more, then appointed a subcommittee to determine a policy. Members said it would be determined by Monday whether the Attorney-General would be called upon to turn over evidence to a committee for an investigation of the charges, as Daugherty expressed a willingness to do, or whether the situation should be approached from some other angle.

A meeting of the Judiciary Committee has been called for Monday morning to consider the report of the subcommittee, which failed at a session late today to arrive at any decision.

LUTHERANS REPUDIATE ATTACK ON THE FRANC

President Says American Church in No Way Sponsors the Move.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 8.—L. H. Knubel, president of the United Lutheran Church in America, and A. Morehead, executive director of the National Lutheran Council, issued statements today, asserting the Lutheran Church had in no way authorized or sponsored the letter sent to Lutheran clergy and parishioners by Edwin E. Popcke, in which Popcke advocated that French francs be sold as a means of crippling France.

"It must be clear to any thoughtful mind," President Knubel said, "that the Lutheran church does not advocate financial speculation or promote the business interests of any individuals. She is wholly opposed to the preaching of religious hatreds. For these and other reasons she condemns what is contained in the letter as an appeal to Lutherans. She repudiates the actions of those who involved her in this matter."

Dr. Morehead said it was assumed "that the Lutheran church will understand churches of other conditions in taking."

LUTHERANS REPUDIATE ATTACK ON THE FRANC

President Says American Church in No Way Sponsors the Move.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 8.—L. H. Knubel, president of the United Lutheran Church in America, and A. Morehead, executive director of the National Lutheran Council, issued statements today, asserting the Lutheran Church had in no way authorized or sponsored the letter sent to Lutheran clergy and parishioners by Edwin E. Popcke, in which Popcke advocated that French francs be sold as a means of crippling France.

"It must be clear to any thoughtful mind," President Knubel said, "that the Lutheran church does not advocate financial speculation or promote the business interests of any individuals. She is wholly opposed to the preaching of religious hatreds. For these and other reasons she condemns what is considered in the letter as an appeal to Lutherans. She repudiates the actions of those who involved her in this matter."

Dr. Morehead said it was assumed "that people everywhere will understand that the Lutheran churches of America can under no conditions indorse such an undertaking."

"The effort to involve the Lutheran church," the statement continued, "in the promotion of speculation, religious antagonism, national hatred and conflict between friendly nations is abominable."

Popcke's letter, sent out through Morgan, Harwood & Co., Inc., investment security brokers, said the "selling of the franc short would constitute an economic weapon to crush French arrogance."

A circular accompanying the letter indicated the brokers would accept a 25 per cent margin, but that all transactions would be subject to private contract. An order slip was enclosed. Popcke is the son of a Lutheran clergyman.

A flood of selling orders again overwhelmed the French franc today, forcing it to sell for the first time below 3½ cents. Establishment of a new low quotation of 3.40° cents represented a net loss of 31¼ points for the day. Belgian francs receded 20 points to 3.15½, another record low, and caused a two-point break in demand sterling to 4.26¼. While the source of the selling has been chiefly from Amsterdam and European cities other than Paris, many of the offerings are said to have been for speculative French accounts.

A $6,000,000.00 sale of electricity

CAHOKIA SHOULDERS THE LARGEST INDUSTRIAL POWER CONTRACT EVER MADE IN THE UNITED STATES

So far as this company has been able to determine, the contract signed last week between Union Electric Light and Power Co. and the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. establishes a record.

It calls for delivery of $600,000 of Cahokia's output every year for 10 years to the Pittsburgh company's plant at Crystal City, Mo., 35 miles south of St. Louis. The amount of electricity to be delivered is equal to the combined use of all the residences in the city of St. Louis.

The Pittsburgh Company signed the contract because studies of disinterested engineers proved that it could buy cheaper from Cahokia than it could generate itself, even if it should build a completely new power plant. The reason, of course, is that a super power plant of tremendous volume like Cahokia has lower costs than any private plant, however large. And the Pittsburgh company would have required a plant of capacity sufficient to supply all the needs of a city of 100,000.

In the last four years, 150 industries in St. Louis likewise have abandoned operation of their individual plants and have substituted Union Electric service because it was cheaper. In fact, this company gives to St. Louis the lowest average electric rates among the 15 large cities of the country.

Cahokia's new power contract is an example of the fast-increasing demand of the St. Louis district for electricity, which made the building of this super-power plant imperative. The demand of industries upon this company has multiplied 20 times in the last 15 years. Similarly, the residence demand has multiplied 20 times.

Cahokia is behind the switches of all users of electricity in St. Louis. Users well might let it also stand behind their investment. Cahokia Preferred Stock is like a bond in the safety of its dividends. And it will earn more for you than a majority of the sound bonds on the market today. The price is par, $100 a share.

FIELD THE LARGEST FOR PAST 25 YEARS

Eastern and Western Owners Strongly Represented in Annual Struggle for Coveted Prize.

By the Associated Press.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., March 3.—One hundred and fifty-two three-year-olds, the largest number in 25 years, have been nominated for the fiftieth running of the Kentucky Derby, according to the list made public today by M. J. Winn, general manager of the Kentucky Jockey Club. The largest previous number since 1899 was 145 in both 1905 and 1923.

The golden anniversary of probably the richest fixture in America, will be run at Churchill Downs May 17. The distance is at a mile and a quarter, for a purse of carrying $50,000 in added money and a gold trophy for the winner.

Every stake-winning two-year-old of last year has been nominated and every leading turfman in America is represented in the list of nominations.

Among them are George D. Widener's St. James, winner of the Belmont Futurity with $89,358 to his credit; J. S. Ward's Wise Counsellor, winner of the Kentucky Jockey Club Stakes and $60,610; E. R. Bradley's Beau Butler, winner of the Pimlico Futurity and $57,980; Mrs. W. M. Jefford's Diogenes, winner of the Hopeful Stakes and $48,725; Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt II, is represented by the unbeaten Sarazen, 10 times first and winner of $37,880; J. S. Cosden by Lord Baltimore II, winner of $26,305; V. Vivadou by Peter King, winner of $21,832; J. S. Ward by Worthmore, winner of $21,599; Mrs. R. M. Hoots by Black Gold, winner of $19,162; H. F. Sinclair by Bracadale, winner of $17,690, and Stanwix, winner of $12,975.

Once More East Meets West.

The race, as in other years, is largely the East against the West with an international tinge through the nomination of six imported thoroughbreds.

The East is represented by such owners as August Belmont, Harry Payne Whitney, the only owner to have a filly (Regret) win the Derby; Mrs. Payne Whitney, racing under the nom de course of the Greentree Stable; Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, George D. Widener, H. F. Sinclair, whose stable ties that of Mrs. Whitney with nine, the largest number of individual nominees; James Butler, Robert L. Gerry, Mr. and Mrs. Walter M. Jeffords, Frank J. Farrell, Frederick Johnson, R. T. Wilson Jr., J. S. Cosden, C. J. Ryan, Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, George W. Loft, A. Cochran, Walter J. Salmon, E. B. McLean, William Woodward, Max Hirsch, Benjamin Block, whose Morvich won in 1922, and J. K. L. Ross.

Among the Western owners who have named the stars of their stables are J. N. Camden, Arthur B. Hancock, Simms and Thraves, J. E. Madden, Montford and B. B. Jones, J. S. Ware, E. R. Bradley, who won both first and second money in the 1921 Kentucky Derby with Behave Yourself and Black Servant; Bruce Head, Harned Brothers, Bud Fisher, the cartoonist; P. Coyne, Arthur Board, Phil Chinn, W. C. Goodloe, J. C. Milam, Jefferson Livingston, for many years a consistent derby contender; H. M. Howard, Hal Price Headley, also a long time aspirant for derby winning honors, and J. Hal Woodford.

Imported Colts Entered.

The international aspect is due to the nomination of William Woodward's three colts, Sunshot by Sunstar out of Mitylene; Spear Point by Spearmint out of Forget Me Not, and Gay Ronald by Gay Crusader out of Port Sunlight, and A. B. Hancock's two imported colts, Dustoff and Corinth, the first by Friar Marcus out of Paloma and the second by Corcyra out of Santoi's Sweetheart, while Walter J. Salmon is represented by Help At Law, sired by Son In Law—Lady Portland.

By the terms of the race the fees are $25 to nominate and $500 additional to start, which with 20 starters and $50,000 in added money, would make the gross value of the stakes $60,000, of which $6000 will go to the place and $3000 to the third horse, with $1000 to the fourth horse. The net value to the winner, deducting the nominating

LOUISVILLE, Ky., March 8.—One hundred and fifty-two three-year-olds, the largest number in 25 years, have been nominated for the fiftieth running of the Kentucky Derby, according to the list made public today by M. J. Winn, general manager of the Kentucky Jockey Club. The largest previous number since 1899 was 145 in both 1905 and 1923.

The golden anniversary of probably the richest fixture in America, will be run at Churchill Downs May 17. The distance is at a mile and a quarter, for a purse of carrying $50,000 in added money and a gold trophy for the winner.

Every stake-winning two-year-old of last year has been nominated and every leading turfman in America is represented in the list of nominations.

Among them are George D. Widener's St. James, winner of the Belmont Futurity with $89,358 to his credit; J. S. Ward's Wise Counsellor, winner of the Kentucky Jockey Club Stakes and $60,610; E. R. Bradley's Beau Butler, winner of the Pimlico Futurity and $57,980; Mrs. W. M. Jefford's Diogenes, winner of the Hopeful Stakes and $48,725; Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt II, is represented by the unbeaten Sarazen, 10 times first and winner of $37,880; J. S. Cosden by Lord Baltimore II, winner of $26,305; V. Vivadou by Peter King, winner of $21,832; J. S. Ward by Worthmore, winner of $21,599; Mrs. R. M. Hoots by Black Gold, winner of $19,163; H. F. Sinclair by Bracadale, winner of $17,690, and Stanwix, winner of $12,075.

Once More East Meets West.

The race, as in other years, is largely the East against the West with an international tinge through the nomination of six imported thoroughbreds.

The East is represented by such owners as August Belmont, Harry Payne Whitney, the only owner to have a filly (Regret) win the Derby; Mrs. Payne Whitney, racing under the nom de course of the Greentree Stable; Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, George D. Widener, H. F. Sinclair, whose stable ties that of Mrs. Whitney with nine, the largest number of individual nominees; James Butler, Robert L. Gerry, Mr. and Mrs. Walter M. Jeffords, Frank J. Farrell, Frederick Johnson, R. T. Wilson Jr., J. S. Cosden, C. J. Ryan, Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, George W. Loft, A. Cochran, Walter J. Salmon, E. B. McLean, William Woodward, Max Hirsch, Benjamin Block, whose Morvich won in 1922, and J. K. L. Ross.

Among the Western owners who have named the stars of their stables are J. N. Camden, Arthur B. Hancock, Simms and Thraves, J. E. Madden, Montford and E. B. Jones, J. S. Ware, E. R. Bradley, who won both first and second money in the 1921 Kentucky Derby with Behave Yourself and Black Servant; Bruce Head, Harned Brothers, Bud Fisher, the cartoonist; P. Coyne, Arthur Board, Phil Chinn, W. C. Goodloe, J. C. Milam, Jefferson Livingston, for many years a consistent derby contender; H. M. Howard, Hal Price Headley, also a long time aspirant for derby winning honors, and J. Bill Woodford.

Imported Colts Entered.

The international aspect is due to the nomination of William Woodward's three colts, Sunshot by Sunstar out of Mitylene; Spear Point by Spearmint out of Forget Me Not, and Gay Ronald by Gay Crusader out of Port Sunlight, and A. B. Hancock's two imported colts, Tourist and Corinth, the first by Friar Marcus out of Paloma and the second by Coreyra out of Santoi's sweetheart, while Walter J. Salmon is represented by Heir At Law, sired by Son In Law—Lady Portland.

By the terms of the race the fees are $25 to nominate and $500 additional to start, which with 20 starters and $50,000 in added money, would make the gross value of the stake $82,500, of which $6000 will go to the place and $3000 to the show horse, with $1000 to the fourth horse. The net value to the winner, deducting the nominating

Wise Counsellor and Sarazen Favored in Early Derby Betting

EARLY prices on probable derby nominations, issued here last night, made it plain that there will be two and probably three strong favorites for the $63,000 Jubilee Kentucky Derby to be run at Churchill Downs May 17.

Tom Kearney, a local turf authority, yesterday told the Post-Dispatch that in view of the 1923 records of Wise Counsellor and the unbeaten Sarazen, and the present probability of both in the Kentucky classic, the future book price against each of these two nominations would be 6 to 1 to win, 2 to 1 to place and even money to show.

He said the field, on the records of last season, showed three horses outstanding, the third being St. James, quoted at 10 to 1 to win. St. James has been announced by his owners as a probable starter in the Preakness Stakes at Pimlico, which will be run one week before the Derby.

Prices on other noted eligibles quoted were: Mad Play, a son of Fair Play, sire of Man o' War, 15 to 1; Mr. Mutt, Bud Fisher's main reliance, 20 to 1; Black Gold, one of the favorites for the Louisiana Derby, 20 to 1; Bracadale and Stanwix, two reliances of Harry Sinclair of the oil disturbance, 20 to 1; Lord Baltimore, 30 to 1; Thorndale, another Louisiana Derby favorite, 30 to 1; Happy Thoughts, 30 to 1, and Diogenes, 30 to 1.

Cards' Regulars Slam Pfeffer For Six Runs in Third Inning; Haines and Doak in Good Form

Veterans Overwhelm Yannigans, 9 to 2, With Hornsby Taking a Day Off—Jim Bottomley, Newly Arrived, Fans Wildly in His Two Visits to the Plate.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

BRADENTOWN, Fla., March 8.—In a nine-inning game here today, a team of near-regular Cardinal complexion easily defeated one made up, in the main of recruits, but besprinkled here and there with veterans. The final count was 9—2.

It was the first time the Rickeymen had been put through the full session and they played at encouraging sped throughout.

Some real hurling was done by the winning pitchers, Doak, Haines, Frankhouse and Berry. For the losers, Stone and Delaney did well, while Pfeffer was rather roughly handled in one frame.

Doak and Pfeffer started and each got by the first inning without trouble. For the Yannigans, in the second, Myers was safe on an error by Ellis. Holm took a good third strike, but Thevenow singled to left. When Ellis shot a hard triple to the same garden, Myers and Thevenow scored. Ellis tried for the circuit but was nailed at the plate.

Pfeffer Hit for 6 Runs.

Pfeffer was again supreme in the second but was hammered for six scores in the third. Lavan started it with a hit and Vick walked. Dyer, batting for Doak, filled the bases when he bunted safely, and Flack's single scored Lavan and Vick. Smith followed with a hit and Dyer tallied. Toporcer sacrificed and Mueller was safe on a boot. Bell singled to center to tally Flack and Smith and Mueller registered. Frigau hit safely. That finished the inning and Pfeffer at the same time.

Haines worked a single inning for the regulars and was not scored upon, after which Frankhouse, the promising pitcher now owned by Syracuse but coveted by the Cardinals, went three innings, all of them scoreless. Stone, succeeding Pfeffer, was unfortunate in errors made behind him and permitted a pair of runs in the fourth but then sailed through three beautiful blanks.

With Frankhouse and Stone going well, there was a cessation of fire, the batters being unable to get the range of either. Lanky Berry threw the final three sessions for the regulars ,allowing but a single safety in that time.

Bell's Hit Scores a Run.

Delaney was the third pitcher for the Yannigans and he also showed plenty of stuff, a base on balls, a steal both by Toporcer, followed by Bell's hit counting the ninth and final run.

On the regulars' roster were

Pikers Defeat Illinois Tank Team, 39-29

Capt. Helbing Wins 100 and 220-Yard Events—Illini Take Two Firsts.

Washington University's swimming team added to its list of conquests by defeating the Illinois U. team at Wilson Pool last night. The point score was 39 to 29.

The high individual point winner was Capt. Helbing of Washington who won 10 points with a first place in the 220 free style and in the 100-yard free style. Gilbert of Washington was tied with Chadsey of Illinois for second honors with 8 points each.

Washington's next competition here is in the Missouri Valley meet at Wilson Pool March 21 and 22.

Bennett Hits Homer With Bases Full; Rice Plays Well at Third

Browns' Manager Leads Team to Victory Over Austinites—Leader Pleased With Showing of His Younger Players.

By J. Roy Stockton,
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

MOBILE, Ala., March 8.—Third base and first are the points of interest for spectators who journey to the Mobile baseball park to see the Brownies train. In today's practice game, in which the team led by Sisler defeated the Austins, 10 to 7, there were many things to encourage Brownie followers.

McManus Signs and Departs With Gerber For Brownie Camp

MARTY McMANUS, Browns' second baseman, yesterday signed his 1924 contract and will depart this morning for the training camp at Mobile. McManus had been a holdout and although no announcement was made by Business Manager Bill Friel, it is believed that the player was granted a substantial raise.

Another one of Manager Sisler's problems will be removed with the arrival at camp tomorrow of Walter Gerber, who will accompany McManus. Gerber obtained leave of absence because of the illness of his wife and she is now fully recovered.

McManus appears to be in excellent physical condition and expressed a keen desire to get to work immediately. The presence of McManus and Gerber on either side of second base leaves Sisler and Austin with only third base to worry about and there are five candidates for that job, including Ezzell, Ellerbe, Rice, Robertson, and Simon.

Sisler must develop reliable guardian of third base and he must either play first himself or find a substitute of quality. Today Harry Rice, being groomed for the third base job, displayed a readiness to learn and marked improvement over his fielding of previous days. Several times he knocked down hot wallops without fielding them cleanly. That's the big test for the young infielder. When the ball is fielded cleanly, he takes his time and makes a good throw to first base. But when he fails to hold the grounder he usually scurries to retrieve it and then hurries his throw.

Rice played like a veteran today. When he knocked down a drive he picked it up, set himself for the throw and then pegged the ball straight into the hands of the first sacker. He soon learned that accuracy was far more important than speed and before the game was three innings old he was performing with the confidence and skill of a veteran. It was the first demonstration of the value of the course of instruction through which Sisler and Jimmy Austin have been putting the youngsters.

Sisler Giving Rice Real Chance.

It is not a certainty that Rice will be at third base for the Browns when the season opens, but that apparently is Sisler's wish.

And if Rice continues to perform at third as he did this afternoon, nobody will beat him out of the job. In the very first inning, Joe Evans sent a hop wallop down the third base line. Rice knocked it down and threw out the runner by two steps. Jimmy Austin began yelling instructions as soon as the ball was hit.

"Take your time now. Steady. Lots of time. Make the throw good." And Rice listened and heeded. After that it was easy. He had his chance to learn the lesson early. Rice had half a dozen difficult chances but not a throw went wild, which is splendid work this early in the season.

Rice Makes a Three-Bagger.

Besides fielding brilliantly, Rice hit the longest drive of the game. He caught one of Vangilder's fast ones and sent it on the line to the flagpole in center field. He made three bases on the drive, but it was a much harder hit ball than the home runs which cleared the fence.

Sisler enjoyed another good afternoon, though he did not hit the ball as hard as in previous practice sessions. He singled to center, scratched a single to left and beat out a slow roller to the right of the pitching box. Once he flew to left and the last time at bat popped to shortstop. However, his fielding was perfect. He fielded bunts and hot grounders without a slip.

The Browns are convinced to the man that the only thing that can keep George out of the lineup when the season starts is a recurrence of the illness which caused his vision impairment. He is good enough now to be a star, the players believe, and apparently he is improving daily. This is especially noticeable in his fielding. His throwing to the bases is all that could be desired and he takes throws from all angles without any apparent difficulty.

George was caught off first base today, but he attributed that to George Blaeholder's trick motion, rather than to himself.

Bennett is Batting Hero.

Herschel Bennett was the batting hero of the day. George has been giving Bennett pointers on batting, suggesting changes in his stance at the plate and his swing. Bennett indicated that he was profiting by the lessons. He hit over the right field fence, in the second inning, with the bases filled; singled in the fourth, doubled in the sixth and drew a pass in the eighth.

Joe Evans showed a punch at the plate, getting two singles in five chances.

Olen Voight, a recruit pitcher from Denver, showed a batting

Witters Roll 2873 Take 7th Place In A. B. C. Tourney

Ameling Rolls Best Individual Score of High Five With Count of 615.

LAMBERTS TOTAL 2826

Other Local Teams Fail to Reach 2700 Mark—Webers Bowl 2656.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, March 8.—The Witter Razz team of St. Louis with games of 841, 1012 and 980 smashed its way into seventh place in the five-man even of the American Bowling Congress Tourney here tonight with a total of 2873.

The Mound City pin tumblers got away to a poor start, five errors in their initial game holding down the count. H. Bippen had three errors chalked against him while Harry Rood with three splits and two errors pulled up with a mark of 137 in his first game. The Witters ran into seven splits in the first game.

The second game showed the visitors doing their real stuff. Smith pounded out a mark of 227 and was backed up by Jerry Ameling who had 226.

Bippen, leading off, hit the double century mark on the head. One miss was all the team had in its second game, Jerry Ameling missing the No. 10 pin, making up for it however, when he struck out from the sixth frame.

The final game was errorless, but seven splits, one of which was cut down by Harry Rood, held the St. Louis pin topplers to a count of 980. Two of the railroads came in the tenth frame.

Lamberts Roll Consistently.

The Wooster Lamberts with games of 864, 957 and 905 rolled into the money division in the big pin classic with a count of 2826. O. Oberbeck was the only member of the team to hit over the 600 mark, he counted 684. The rest of the Wooster pin topplers rolled a consistent series. Oscar Whitehead got away to a nice start counting 223 in his initial game, but ran into two splits, one in the second and the other in the fifth in his second game and counted 164. He wound up with a mark of 193 for a 580 total.

None of the other St. Louis lineups hit over the 2700 mark. The Budweisers were third high among the remaining clubs with a 2698 total.

FRENCH OLYMPIC BOXERS WIN FROM DUTCH TEAM

PARIS, March 8.—The French Olympic boxing team has defeated the Dutch amateur champions in six out of eight classes, Holland winning only in the featherweight and heavyweight classes. Jules Savingeau, lightweight, and Paguillhan, light heavyweight, France's most promising Olympic hopes, won their bouts by knockouts.

The results of these preliminary matches have caused Dupont to be replaced as featherweight on the French team by Henri Raymond, who occupied the top ring in the same class on France's second team.

The Newest Knockout King

Berlenbach recently scored his 23d successive knockout victory. His opponent was Jimmy Darcy, a fairly good lightheavyweight. Jack Delaney of Bridgeport, Conn., is scheduled to be his next victim in a bout at Madison Square Garden.

Municipal Elevens In Eliminations

First Round Contests for Soccer Championship Will Be Played This Afternoon.

The first round of elimination games in the Municipal Soccer League will be played at Fairground and Carondelet Parks this afternoon. Two games will be played at Fairground and one at Carondelet.

The St. Matthew team, which won the championship of the association last year and captured first place in the No. 4 group at Fairground this season, will meet the De Paul team at Fairground No. 2, with Pat Kelly officiating. The De Paul team is the winner in the Lemp's Park Division.

At Fairground No. 4 the St. Leo team will play the Hense eleven with M. J. Byrne acting as referee. The Leos were first in the Fairground No. 2 group while the Hense team won the title in the Sherman Park Division.

The other game will be played by the St. Malachy and Kenrick Council teams at Carondelet Park with J. H. Cradock calling the plays. The winner in the Forest Park Division, while the Kenrick Council team won the first place honors in the No. 3 Fairground group.

All of the three games will consist of 45-minute halves and extra periods in case of tied scores at the end of the regular playing time. All games are set for 2:30 p. m.

The Schumacher team, winner of the Carondelet championship, will be idle in this round, having drawn the bye.

Already widespread interest has been indicated in the fiftieth running of the Churchill Downs turf classic. A number of hotel reservations have already been made for visitors whose number is expected to exceed that of any previous year.

Advance form indicates, so the experts say, that Sarazen and Wise Counsellor will be the popular choices in the winter books, with St. James next best.

Berlenbach Bout On, Says Rickard

Injunction Efforts of Newark Officials Will Not Stop Match With Delaney.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 8. — Despite efforts of the National Sportsman's Club of Newark to prevent by injunction the middleweight match at Madison Square Garden next Friday night between Paul Berlenbach of New York and Jack Delaney of Bridgeport, Conn., the contest will be held as scheduled, Tex Rickard said tonight.

Due to a prior contract signed for Berlenbach's appearance against Jackie Clark, Allentown, Pa., middleweight, in Newark on March 17, the Newark promoters contend that his match with Delaney will be a violation of the New Jersey boxing laws which stipulate that 72 hours must elapse between matches for fighters. Despite the fact that virtually three days elapse between the two matches, Newark officials claim that 72 hours actually will not elapse between the time Berlenbach leaves the New York ring and steps into the Newark ring.

Rickard said that the match with Delaney had been sanctioned by the State Athletic Commission and also by Platt Adams, chief inspector of the New Jersey Boxing Commission.

The Newark promoters said they would hold their card in the afternoon if necessary to force Berlenbach to withdraw from Friday's match with Delaney.

California Man On U. S. Olympic Coaching Staff

Authority Divided for First Time, Robertson Sharing Honors.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 8.—Appointment of a staff of eight track and field coaches, designation of nine official sectional tryouts in various parts of the country and action barring player writers from the Olympic team were principal steps taken today at a meeting of the executive Olympic committee which put into definite shape the reorganization and plans for America's participation in the 1924 international games at Paris.

For the first time in American Olympic history, no single head coach will direct the destinies of the track and field squad, this year's task being put jointly in the hands of Lawson Robertson of the University of Pennsylvania as head track coach and Walter Christie, of the University of California, as head field coach.

While Robertson and Christie, whose California teams have captured the I. C. A. A. championship for the past three years, will share authority, a special committee will be appointed by the Olympic body to act as a final court of authority in track matters. This committee will include one member of the coaching staff.

To Divide Work.

In addition, work among the coaches will be so apportioned that each will have chiefly to do with the specialty or specialties with which he is most familiar. Thus Robertson will have charge of the men in the 100 and 200 meter sprints and the 400 meter relay, while Christie will handle the Yankee competitors in the shot put, hammer throw, discus and javelin.

Charles A. Dean of the Illinois Athletic Club, Chicago, was appointed manager of the track and field team, replacing Matt Halpin of the New York A. C., who held the position in the last four Olympics.

The effect of the ruling against player-writers on probable members of the tennis team was a topic of considerable discussion. The United States Lawn Tennis Association has acted to bar player-writers as amateurs after Jan. 1, 1925, but several stars, including William T. Tilden and Vincent Richards, are understood to have contracts for newspaper work this year.

Both of these players are likely Olympic players, according to a report made today by J. S. Myrick of the U. S. L. T. A., who also said that the women's team would include Mrs. George W. Wightman, of Boston, Miss Eleanor Goss of New York and probably Miss Helen Wills of Berkeley, Cal., national champion.

Nine Tryout Meets.

Nine official sectional tryouts will be held in May and June, instead of eight, as originally planned, to select candidates for the final trials to be held June 13 and 14 at the Harvard Stadium. The midwestern district was split into two sections with tryouts scheduled May 31 at both Iowa City, Ia., and Lawrence, Kan. The former will cover the territory of North and South Dakota, Wyoming, Nebraska and Iowa, while the latter will comprise representatives from Missouri, Kansas, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Colorado.

The other seven tryouts will be held as originally planned, on the following dates:

New York City, June 7; Atlanta, Ga., June 7; Ann Arbor, Mich., May 31; New Orleans, May 30-31; Los Angeles, May 24; Palo Alto, Cal., May 17, and Portland, Ore., on a date yet to be selected.

These tryouts will be in addition to the preliminary trials held by the Army, Navy and various college organizations which will qualify athletes for the finals without further testing. In such events as the pentathlon, decathlon, cross-country, 10,000-meter walk and steeplechase, contestants may participate in the finals without entering any preliminary events.

American Rhodes scholars at Oxford would be eligible for team membership under a decision giving the Olympic selection committees authority to recommend athletes not able to take part in the final trials. It was pointed out this would permit selection of S. Harrison Thomson, all-around star and former Princeton man.

PHILADELPHIA, March 8. — The Colgate boxing team today defeated the University of Pennsylvania, five bouts to two.

Training in Trick Shots Hurts Kirkwood's Game, Sarazen Says

Golf Wizard Can Play Any Conceivable Shot, but His Judgment in Approach Shots Keeps Him Out of National Title, Writes Champion.

By Gene Sarazen,
American Professional Golf Champion.
(Copyright, 1924.)

One of the mysteries of this game of golf is the failure of Joe Kirkwood to win a big tournament in this country. "Why is it," they ask, "that a fellow who can perform so many tricks with golf clubs cannot win the National Open or some other worth-while title?"

Well, no man can do two things well at one and the same time, although Kirkwood is certainly making a fine effort in this respect. His exhibition of trick shots, which requires considerable time and practice, is a first-class show, and yet he manages to find time to finish well up front in most of the tournaments in which he competes. Recently in Texas he won four tournaments in succession, which is quite a feat, and he has proved on other occasions he has the game to win in tournament play.

Nevertheless there is no doubt but that his trick shots have to a certain degree handicapped his regular game. Joe himself admits this. However, he can make more money with his trick shots, and he would be rather a poor business man to give them up while he can make them pay.

The average golfer or the spectator, of course, in seeing Kirkwood do his stunts can see no reason why he shouldn't be able to play a full spoon shot up to the green without fail on every attempt. That is because they do not know the inside of shot-making.

Troubled With Slice.

Now the hardest shot in golf is a straight ball. And while it is helpful at times to be able to hook or to slice a shot, a player could do without these twists if he were sure he could bring off a straight shot on every occasion.

In golf, though, probably more so than in any other game, atmospheric conditions play an important part. When a strong wind is blowing at cross angles it is much more difficult to keep a ball straight than when there is no breeze. That is why so many fellows play a hook or slice, depending on the direction of the wind. It is easier to bring off this kind of shot and play it into the wind than it is to keep the ball straight in spite of the gale.

But to return to Kirkwood's game. In obtaining trick shots Kirkwood is compelled to cut or slice the ball somewhat. Then, after he has given a number of exhibitions he finds difficulty in ridding himself of slicing.

Here is something else to consider. It is one thing to slice or to hook a ball in practice or exhibition work. It is another when you are struggling against a field of stars to stand out on the green and make you a putt for a birdie. If you don't hit the green you are struggling for your par, and any time a player is in this mood he can be counted out. Good scores come easily, and you will notice that the fellow who is scoring well is hitting the greens regularly with his second shots.

Has Accomplished a Lot.

That is Kirkwood's chief difficulty as I see it—deciding on the kind of shot he should play to the green. In his exhibitions he doesn't have to figure the amount of roll he will get on a hooked shot and he hasn't been calculating the distance of the slice. Fellows like Hagen and Hutchison, who are playing straight golf constantly, have their shots figured as closely as if they had used some kind of electrical apparatus in timing the speed and flight of the ball.

They know pretty well just how far the ball will roll after they have played an iron or mashie. They can determine quickly how high and how far to pitch the ball to get close to the pin, and, if they miss, it is because they have miscalculated the distance or because they are badly off form—not because they have missed the shot. A first-class golfer doesn't miss more than three shots a round. If he did, he wouldn't be a champion.

Years of study and competitive golf have given these fellows a golf intuition that can be obtained in no other way. Both Walter and Jock are constantly reasoning out new methods of hitting the ball and endeavoring to develop complete control over their shots. Kirkwood spends more of his time developing his tricks. And because he does, it is really remarkable that he scores so well in tournament play.

Olympic Committee Names St. Louisan as Soccer Team Leader

NEW YORK, March 8.

THE American Olympic Executive Committee at its meeting this afternoon, approved the selection of George Burford, athletic director of the Pennsylvania Railroad Y. M. C. A., with headquarters at Philadelphia, as trainer for the American Olympic Soccer team and of T. W. Cahill of St. Louis, secretary of the U. S. F. A. as team manager. President Peter J. Peel of Chicago goes as American deputy.

Inasmuch as it would be practically a hopeless task for a European country to handle an Olympiad unless it were from the gate receipts at the soccer matches, these appointments have been eagerly awaited in France as a guarantee the U. S. would actually send a team.

RAY WINS IN 2 CITIES

Captures Mile Event in New York and Wins in Philadelphia in Same Evening.

By Loren Murchison,
National Sprint Champion.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., March 8. —The Quaker City track fans who came out to the first annual Penn A. C. Meet tonight, saw one of the greatest indoor track contests ever staged in this city. The crowd was not large and the track was not very fast but the competition and resulting races were a treat for the real fans.

As it happened, I had the good fortune to share the limelight with my former teammate Joie Ray.

As it was advertised Ray ran in New York early in the evening, winning a mile race in 4 minutes 19 seconds. Joie jumped a rattler and got to the Penn A. C. contests about half-past eleven. When he raced away from Lloyd Hahn and Schuyler Enck in the feature mile Ray showed that if he had gone back the going was mighty slow. Ray's time for the second race was 4 minutes 25 seconds.

Enck and Ray fought hard but the sprint of Joie would have taken anything before him. Hahn, by a marvelous pull in the last lap, passed Enck in the last 10 yards.

Two records were equaled. In the 40-yard invitation, "Boots" Lever and myself raced to the taps in fast figures. I beat "Boots" by about a foot with the watches at 4 2-5 seconds, which equaled the world's record. The mark was held by W. D. Eaton of Boston, Mass., and was made back in 1905. Without a doubt the race was the fastest I have run this winter. "Boots" was so close that he must have also been within the record time. "Boots" remarked after the race that he ran faster than he had ever run in his life.

The other mark to be equaled was in the 45-yard hurdle race. Here three men ran the distance in the record time of 6 seconds flat. Ivan Reilly of the Illinois A. C. won the final in the record time. Cryp Moore of Penn. State, who was second, made the time in winning a sime-final, and Carl Christenson, the Newark A. C. star, also turned in the fast time in a heat.

Osborn Jumps Well.

There was some question about the start in the final for Reilly got off like a flash and seemed to beat the gun. Moore picked up, but was unable to catch the Westerner. The crowd showed its disapproval when the decision was announced.

Harold Osborn, the high jumper from the West who has showed them all his stuff this year, came through with a fine leap in his event. Harold sailed over the bar at 6 feet 5 inches. The all-around champion was in rare form but he could not get over 6 feet 6 inches which would have given him a new world's record.

Beside the invitation 40-yard dash there was also a handicap event. In this I also had the luck to beat Lever to the tape in the good time of 4 2-5 seconds. This race served as a good way to warm up for the later contest.

Fred Wachimuth, the Glencoe runner, who holds the Junior National cross country championship, showed lots of stuff in taking the three-mile run. Fred took the lead at the two-mile mark and opened quite a bit of distance over Johnnie Gray of the Enterprise Catholic Club. Biondie Romig of Penn State also started in the contest but dropped out at the half-way mark, when he was taken with a stitch.

The summaries:

40-YARD DASH (HANDICAP)—Won by Loren Murchison, Newark A. C.; second, Harold "Boots" Lever, Philadelphia, scratch; third, C. Hunt, Mid-Valley, Washington (5 feet). Time, 4 2-5s.

45-YARD HIGH HURDLES—Won by Ivan H. Reilly, Illinois A. C.; second, C. M. Moore, Pennsylvania State; third, Herbert Mayer, Newark A. C. Time, 6s.

RUNNING HIGH JUMP (Handicap)—Won by Osborne, Illinois A. C. (scratch); height ft. 2 in.; second, Charles Hubbard, University of Pennsylvania (3 inches); height ft. 5 in.; third, Brooks, University of Pennsylvania (3 inches); height ft. 5 in.

ONE MILE SPECIAL—Won by Joie W. Ray, Illinois A. C.; second, Lloyd Hahn, Boston A. A.; third, Schuyler Enck, Illinois A. C. Time, 4:25 1-5.

ONE-MILE RELAY (Handicap)—Won by Penn Relay Club (Andrews, Fetzing, Kennedy and Decker). Time, 3m. 35 2-5s.

ONE-MILE RACE—Won by Newark A. C. (Burns, Malvehill, Maguire and Tierney); second, Newark; third, Boston. Time, 3m. 33s.

By the Associated Press.

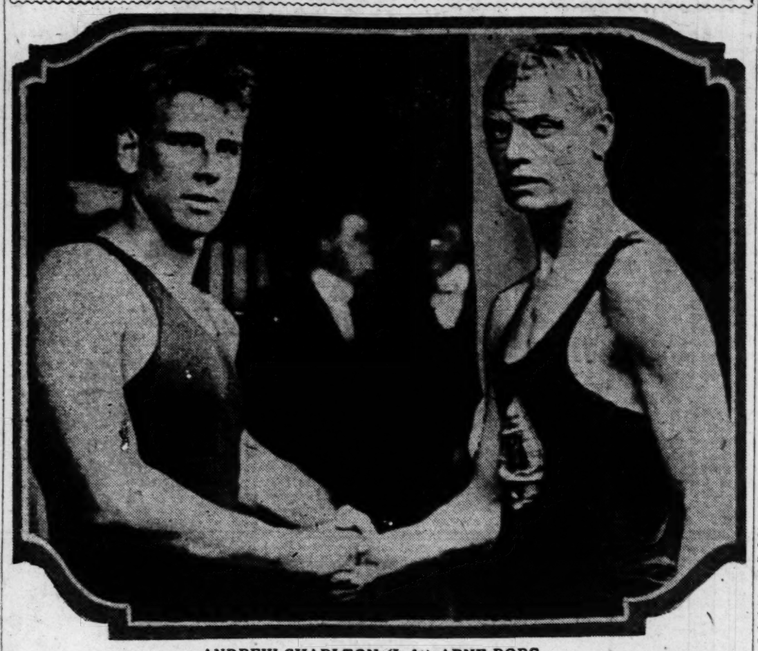
Weissmuller's Rival; Man He Beat



ANDREW CHARLTON (Left.) ARNE BORG.

Charlton, Australia's greatest swimmer, is shown receiving the congratulations of Arne Borg, whom he had just beaten. Charlton is destined to meet Weissmueller in the Olympic games and many believe the Australian will beat the American at 440 yards, his best distance.

No Intermission In Stecher Bout

Londos and Gardini to Insist on Letter of Joe's Two Hour Agreement.

Jim Londos, heavyweight wrestler, reported in St. Louis yesterday to begin training for the headline event of next Wednesday night's mat show at the Coliseum, which will feature Londos and Renato Gardini in a double bout with Joe Stecher, former heavyweight champion. Stecher has agreed to throw both men within two hours.

Promoter Tom Packs announced last night that he would have his preliminary so arranged that the main attraction will start at 9:30 p. m. Stecher will be allotted only two hours in which to fulfill his terms of the challenge. This means that he will not be allowed to take time out for intermission or any other purposes. If he throws his first oponent he will have to take on the next man immediately after the fall. In the event he decides to rest for a few minutes, this time will be counted as part of the period of actual competition. Londos and Gardini will probably toss for the right to face Stecher last.

Dick Daviscourt and Josef Gurkewicz, a pair of heavyweight performers, have been matched to wrestle on fall to a finish in the semiwindup. Their match will be limited to one hour. Another preliminary event to be scheduled as the curtain-raiser will be limited to 30 minutes, starting at 8 o'clock.

JUDGES ARE SELECTED FOR BENCH SHOW OF VALLEY KENNEL CLUB

Col. E. Leslie Jones, U. S. Army, Washington, D. C., Joseph Dain of Moline, Ill., and Vinton Breeze of Caldwell, N. J., have been selected to judge dogs entered in the bench show of the Mississippi Valley Kennel Club which will take place at the Coliseum April 4, 5 and 6, according to announcement made by Louis M. Hall, president, yesterday.

Col. Jones will judge beagles, bloodhounds, foxhounds, greyhounds and other hound classes. Dain will judge all terrier classes except Bostons. Breeze will judge all classes not handled by Jones and Dain.

Hall also announced an important change in the manner of selecting the champion dog of all classes, the so-called "best dog in the show." For this competition all dogs will be divided into five groups, sporting, nonsporting, workers, terriers and toys. The judges will first select the champion dog of each of the five groups. Then the five group champions will be brought into the ring for final competition for the title of "Champion of the Show." In this way six championships will be decided. The winner of the championship in each group will be given a blue ribbon and a special prize. A handsome piece of plate will go with the all-around championship of the show.

The competition for "best dog in the show" was discontinued under the rules of the American Kennel Club in 1922-23, but has been restored as set forth above for the show of 1923-24.

Entries will close on March 19, with Gerald B. O'Reilly, secretary, Maryland Hotel, or 723 Chestnut street. Secretary O'Reilly said that the special prize list for the 1924 show exceeded in number of prizes and total value all previous lists.

Dartmouth Beats Yale.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
HANOVER, N. H., March 8.—Dartmouth defeated Yale 23-22 in basketball here tonight. During the first 13 minutes neither team was able to score a field goal. Pile was the high scorer with twelve points. Dartmouth's poor work at the foul lines netted five points out of 16 tries, while Yale made 12 out of 13.

Yale led 6-1 when Safler made the first field goal. Dartmouth went to the fore at 10-9 but Yale caught up and ended the half 13-10.

The lead was increased to 15-10, but Dartmouth came up to the lead at 17-16 after a spectacular shot by Dooley. This advantage was held until the game ended 23-22.

CARDS' REGULARS SLAM PFEFFER FOR SIX RUNS IN THIRD INNING

Freigau, Toporcer, Lavan and Bell in the infield; Flack, Smith and Mueller in the outer works; Vick and Farwell behind the bat. The rookies battle-front showed: Hy Myers, Douthit and Holm in the outfield; Ellis, Kane, Thevenow and Blades on the infield; Thomsen and Neibergall receiving. Four errors were charged to each of the contending teams.

Hornsby, now almost in playing condition, was allowed the afternoon off, but this was balanced by the appearance in the late innings of the scrap of Jim Bottomley. To make it more "intrickit" for Jim, Stone and Delaney threw the first-stacker nothing but slow curves. This being so, Jim fanned furiously both times up.

Bell Has Good Day.

The work of Bell at third was closely watched and the record shows that he handled seven out of eight chances, his lone error being on a tough grounder. Bell and Freigau, each with two hits, led the regulars at bat. No one of the opposing team made more than one safety.

This Frankhouse person has all the earmarks of a pitcher, including "stuff," poise and polish. He should be heard from. The players will have a day of rest tomorrow. They are rounding to form in fine fashion and will meet Brooklyn in the first real test of strength, here, next Tuesday.

It is probable that young Kane, the infielder, will go to the Houston club of the Texas League. Manager Hunter Hill of Texas club is here and likes the actions of the boy; as there is little chance for Kane to break in against such candidates as Lester Bell, Howard Freigau and George Toporcer, the deal may be made with, however, an optional string on the prospect.

Thevenow, another shortfield candidate, will, it is believed, be given a season in Syracuse. There is little doubt that this lad is one of the most brilliant fielders to come up in several years. There seems to be some doubt of his ability to hit and he needs the experience to be gained in a season in fast minor league company.

Barfoot and North may be forced to stage quite a battle to see which will be retained for work in relief roles this season. Two years ago, North was a wonderful reliever; last year he was bad, thoroughly bad. Whichever of the two is lopped off the Cardinal roll will be headed for Houston to join the colony of ex-Cardinals down there.

The first real exhibition game will be played here Tuesday with Brooklyn opposing the Cardinals.

Vespers to Use New Player Today

Joe Hand of Gillespie at Center Halfback Against Ben Millers.

Harry McCarthy's Vespers, the team which will represent St. Louis in the Western final of the national soccer championship competition next Sunday, will oppse the Ben Millers in the first game of the St. Louis Soccer League double-header at High School Field this afternoon.

The Scullins, former national champions, will meet the fast Hoover team in the second game.

With a view to keeping his team in the running for the cup next season, Manager McCarthy is already strengthening his team. Today he will use at center Halfback Joe Hand, late of the Gillespie, Ill., club. Hand, although a youngster, has played fine football at forward and fullback. He played a few games last season at outside right for Willie Foley's Hoovers. He is a Scotchman by birth and he will make the third foreign-born athlete on McCarthy's team—Tom Harris, forward; Tom Scott, fullback and Hand.

In his last league game, Manager Ratican of the Ben Millers used two new fullbacks. The strengthened backfield may serve to hold off the Buicks, who are good getters.

punch in the eighth inning when he batted for Pruett and hit the ball over the left field fence.

Schliebner collected two hits, a single and a home run. Williams made the day enjoyable by hitting one over the right field fence against Shocker. Only two hits were made off Urban during his two innings on the mound, and both were four-baggers, Williams getting one and Schliebner the other.

Lyons in Fine Form.

Eight pitchers were used during the game. Blaeholder, Wilson, Danforth, Pruett, Shocker, Lyons, Vangilder and Voight each toiled two innings. Lyons showed the best form, retiring Austin's men without a hit or a run in two frames. He struck out Kenny Williams and the slugger complained bitterly of the fact that Lyons was putting too much stuff on the ball, so early in the season.

Evans, Bennett and Mizeur were in the outfield on Sisler's team. George played first base, Ezzell second, Simon short and Ellerbe third, with Collins and Schulte doing the catching.

Tobin, Williams and Jacobson formed the other outfield, with Schliebner at first, Robertson at second, Austin at short and Rice at third base. Rego and Simmons were the catchers. Rego and Simmons were off form in the throwing.

Sisler and the Browns are very well satisfied with the development of the team during the two weeks of training. The pitchers are gradually rounding into form and there are no sore arms. Monday Walter Gerber and Marty McManus will join the squad.

Tomorrow the Browns will have a holiday. It will be the last day of rest, as next Sunday the Browns will oppose the Mobile team in the first exhibition game of the season.

Landis Makes Award.

DALLAS, Tex., March 8—Bill Matlock, former Southwestern University baseball star, has been awarded to the Dallas Texas League club by Commissioner K. M. Landis, local officials have been advised. Matlock, an infielder, inadvertently made terms with both Dallas and the Cincinnati Nationals, an agreement having been reached with the local club before he was notified of Cincinnati's acceptance.

Keeble First In Valley Hurdles; Blanchard Third

Mitchell of Washington Wins Pole Vault at 11 Feet 6 Inches.

By the Associated Press.
KANSAS CITY, March 8.—Missouri ran away with the Missouri Valley Conference indoor track and field championship tonight and smashed two meet records along the route.

Missouri athletes scored 39⅓ points, Nebraska was second with 21½, and Kansas third, with 17. Others finished as follows: Ames, 13; Kansas Aggies, 11½; Washington, 8⅓; Grinnell 6, and Drake 4. Oklahoma did not score a single point, although it had several men entered.

Keeble Sets Record.

McCullough Keeble, star Missouri hurdler, clipped the record in the 50-yard high hurdles, running the high sticks in 6m. 5-10s. The meet record was 6 3-5 seconds. He appeared far off the form he exhibited 10 days ago when he established a new world's record at 6 seconds flat for the event.

Coming from behind a large field, Pittinger, Tiger captain, lowered the meet record in the mile run when he finished in 4 m. 28. 1-10s. The old record was 3m. 29s. He finished a full 20 yards ahead of Kimport of the Kansas Aggies.

Getting a slow start in the 50-yard low hurdles, Keeble barely nosed out Wier of Nebraska in a race that from the stands looked as if Wier had won. Blanchard, meet record holder in the event, was nosed out by Simpson of Missouri in a semifinal heat. Keeble was high point man with 10.

The mile relay, won by Kansas in time that equalled the meet record of 4 minutes 49 2-5 seconds, was run in four sections as dual events, times determining the winner.

In the dual events Grinnell defeated Oklahoma, Ames defeated Drake, Missouri defeated the Kansas Aggies and Kansas defeated Nebraska. Nebraska in all probability would have placed second but was disqualified when Crites failed to touch off Layton, Nebraska anchor.

Following were the results:
ONE-MILE RUN—Won by Pittinger, Missouri; Biermann, Ames, second; Kimport, Kansas Aggies, third; Lewis, Nebraska, fourth. Time, 4m. 28 1-10s. (New record for meet.)
50-YARD HIGH HURDLES—Won by Irwin, Kansas Aggies; Lake, Nebraska, second; Young, Drake, third; Graham, Kansas, fourth. Time, 5 5-10s.
50-YARD HIGH HURDLES—Won by Keeble, Missouri; Wier, Nebraska, second; Blanchard, Washington, third; Morgan, Drake, fourth. Time, 5 2-5s.
880-YARD RUN—Won by Hammerly, Ames; Trowbright, Missouri, second; Mellrath, third; Moulder, Missouri, fourth. Time, 2m 2 3-5s.
50-YARD LOW HURDLES—Won by Keeble, Missouri; Wier, Nebraska, second; Green, Grinnell, third; Simpson, Missouri, fourth. Time, 6 1-10s.
HIGH JUMP—Won by Poer, Kansas; Bransford, Missouri, second; Graham, Kansas, and Hagerman, Washington, tied for third. Height, 6 ft. 3 in.
TWO-MILE RUN — Won by Poage, Missouri; Balzar, Kansas Aggies, second; Myer, Grinnell, third; Griffith, Ames, fourth. Time, 9m 58 4-10s.
16-POUND SHOTPUT—Won by Richerson, Missouri; Hartman, Nebraska, second; Etter, Missouri, third; Mounce, Ames, fourth. Distance, 43 ft. 6 in.
ONE-MILE RELAY—Won by Kansas (Watson, Griffin, Firebaugh, Fisher); Ames, second; Missouri, third; Drake, fourth. Time, 3m. 29 5-8s. (equals meet record).
POLE VAULT—Won by Mitchell, Washington, Donohue (Missouri), Dillenbeck (Kansas), Carter (Kansas Aggies and Davis (Nebraska) tied for second. Height, 11 ft. 6 in.
ONE-MILE RELAY—Won by Kansas (Watson, Griffin, Firebaugh, Fisher); Ames, second; Missouri, third; Drake, fourth. Time, 3m. 29 2-5s (equals meet record).
440-YARD RUN—Won by Crites, Nebraska; Firebaugh, Kansas, second; Layton, Nebraska, third; Morgan, Drake, fourth. Time, 52 2-5s.

A Sure Way To End Dandruff

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

Firpo Plans to Fight Twice Or Three Times a Week When He Returns From Argentina

Pampas Bull Says He Wants to Establish Beyond Question His Right to a Second Match With Jack Dempsey—Believes Program Hazardous.

This is the second of a series of articles prepared by Firpo, telling of his plans for the future and of his preparation for a second battle with Dempsey, which he hopes will be held this Summer.

By Luis Angel Firpo.
(Copyright, 1924.)

I am coming back to the United States and I am going to fight with every pugilist that they place in front of me, as long as I can keep on my feet.

I want to measure myself with all the fighters they can find and that is why I was greatly interested in meeting Harry Wills—to see whether I really have a right to meet Dempsey in a comeback fight.

I know well that I will earn 50 per cent less money in a fight with Wills than with Dempsey, and I know, too, that I could have a fight with Dempsey without a fight with Wills, but I want this fight in order not to deceive any of the boxing followers.

If I am beaten by Wills, they can be sure that I will never claim a come-back fight with the champion.

Those critics who maintain that I do not fight with sporting enthusiasm are mistaken. My golden dream is to hold two, if possible three, fights a week until my physical condition demands a rest.

About the Dempsey Fight.

In my last article I said in discussing "my next match with Dempsey"—"if it comes, because it yet remains to see whether the public really demands that I have another chance." Now I want to say something more about this subject.

A fighter in order to have the right to the championship, must necessarily fight with every serious pugilist who has a good record, provided the match has the moral support of the followers of the fine sport of self-defense.

This is the idea that prompted me to make another tour of United States and fight with all the pugilists who have a right to face me. By meeting them all, the public can judge whether I deserve another fight with the champion.

Many experts believe that the trip may be injurious to me, but, in my opinion, those who think so are mistaken, for the larger the number of different pugilists with whom I measure myself, the more science of the ring I will acquire.

I know that some of these men whom I am going to meet on my next trip may give me a knockout blow and on these fights I am running the risk of losing the chance of meeting the champion. I know, too, that I can fight with Dempsey now without any preliminary bouts, because of the offers that have been made to me; but, first to set my conscience at ease, I wish to make sure that I am qualified.

I recall that when they were going to make Fred Fulton fight with Willard in 1917, Fulton a few weeks before the bout, fought with Carl Morris and lost by a foul in the fifth round. On this account he lost all the prestige on which he counted for his fight with Willard, who at that time was the world's champion.

This again confirms my belief that the trip as I have planned it, is from a certain point of view, contrary to my interests, but I want to convince myself, beyond the shadow of a doubt that I am the logical contender for the world's championship of all weights.

NEWARK CLUB ASKS HERZOG'S RESIGNATION "FOR BUSINESS REASONS"

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, March 8.—Affairs of the Newark International League baseball club, which have been a storm center in the circuit for some time, came to the front today with a series of new developments which culminated in an announcement from President John Conway Toole that a special meeting of the league magnates would be held here March 12 to consider the Newark situation.

On top of this, President Michael McTighe of the Newark club announced he had asked for the resignation of Charles (Buck) Herzog, vice president and manager, "for business reasons."

Zuna Sets New Marathon Mark In Olympic Test

Millrose A. C. Star Beats Old Time for Baltimore Course Nearly 7 Minutes.

By the Associated Press.
BALTIMORE, Md., March 8.—Frank Zuna of the Millrose A. A., New York City, not only won the Laurel-to-Baltimore marathon today but also established a new American record for the distance of 26 miles 385 yards. His time was two hours 41 minutes 39 2-5 seconds. This betters the old record of two hours 48 minutes 23 4-5 seconds held by Albert Michelson, of the Cygnet A. C., East Portchester, N. Y., by six minutes 44 2-5 seconds. Michelson finished second today in two hours 45 minutes 47 1-5 seconds beating the mark he made at the Yankee Stadium last May.

Demar Is Third.

Clarence H. Demar of Melrose Hillside, Mass., winner of the Boston marathon of 1922 and 1923, finished third; Frank E. Wendling of Buffalo was fourth, and Harvey Frick, Glencoe A. C., New York, fifth. The Millrose A. A. won the team trophy and the Cygnet A. C. was second.

The race was recognized by the American Olympic Committee as an official tryout for the Eastern States. Lawson Robertson, University of Pennsylvania, American Olympic track and field coach, was the referee.

The field was brilliant, with every leading contender for a place on the American Olympic marathon team entered and in fine fettle. Thirty-six runners survived the gruelling test out of an entry of 56 men who answered the crack of the gun at Laurel.

The record breaking feat by Zuna was remarkable. The race was run over a hard course laid out in rolling country and for a large part of the grind a strong wind blew directly into the faces of the contestants.

Winner Strong at Finish.

Zuna was not looked upon as a winner until the men reached the outskirts of Baltimore.

A mile and a half from the finish, Zuna forged ahead of his rivals and breezed away from Michelson, who was tiring rapidly. Zuna finished apparently fresh, holding a margin of several city blocks. Delmar was never a serious contender in the race. He drew up into third position about 11 miles from the finish and remained there until the end.

Fire Boy Is Entered in the Derby; Undoubtedly He'll Either Burn Up the Track or His Owner's Money

Stake Me, Parke Up, Loses By a Head at 20 to 1

New Orleans Crowd Protests When Pathan's Number Is Placed First.

GOOD NIGHT A SURPRISE

Beats Favorite East Indian in Frank Silvers Purse Over Derby Route.

By FRED DIGBY,
Sports Editor of the New Orleans Item.

NEW ORLEANS, La., March 8.—Good Night! There were no few patrons of racing who so soliloquized, grabbed taxies and started on their way back to the hotel. Good night!

Good Night won the Frank Silvers purse, the mile and a half feature on the Jefferson card today and when he did, he dug the last two-bits out of the pockets of the form players.

For East Indian was the first good-looking favorite of the day and he finished second in this race. The players had been given a good drubbing in the three preceding contests and they looked to East Indian and Parke for redemption. But there was none. Good Night was winging it at the end and East Indian was a half dozen lengths in front of Freezy Sneezy. But the finish meant nothing, for Good Night was not played straight, and it was impossible to get a place price on East Indian.

Good Night equaled the track record of 2:35 4-5 in winning the race.

Fast Track Suits Mudders.

They say that mudders run well on a fast track at Jefferson. Surely, they must. Tanson, which next to eating oats, would like nothing better than a trip around a sloppy oval, won the third race, and Escarpolette, another mud racer, finished second. Royal Duck got the short end of the purse. He's a mudder, too.

The well-known deceptive angle entered into the second race. Stake Me, a 20 to 1 shot and ridden by Ivan Parke, came like a bolt in the middle of the track and to nearly everyone in the grand stand appeared to have won the contest by a good head over Pathan.

But the judges, who occupy the vantage point right on a line with the finish, gave it to Pathan and that settled it. A few of the disgruntled howled but they didn't cash their tickets. Queen Charming, the favorite, was third.

Honor Man's Hopes Ruined.

Following the running of the second race, Starter Snyder announced that Recommegdation had jumped into the air and fallen over Honor Man, just as the latter was about to break, interfering with him and killing his chances in that event.

Chalking up his third consecutive victory, including his maiden triumph of about three weeks ago, El Astro, T. H. Bernhardt's Star Shoot gelding, relieved the layers of some of the change they acquired during the first four races when he stepped down in front. With the fancy odds of 15 to 1 against his chances, he came down the middle of the track like a bolt and won, going away without being urged. Whale Bone and Idle Thoughts followed him to the wire.

Parke Asked to Explain.

Following the contest, the stewards announced they would investigate the dull performance of Lorena Marcella, 6 to 5 choice, in the race. Parke, who had the leg on Lorena, was called up to explain what he knew of the poor showing.

R. L. Carter has been denied the privileges of the Jefferson race track for alleged unbecoming remarks following the official placing of the second race winner. Carter is said to have protested loudly and in unbecoming manner the posting of Pathan's number over that of Stake Me.

Carter is a horseman and was advised to take his string away from the Shrewsbury Course.

They left here early this morning. Only five of the regular members of the Leacock team will make the trip but the team will be reinforced by three members of other teams. The men who will represent this city in the tournament are Deal, Cummins, Goeddel, Lubbe and Russell of the Leacock team, while Reinhardt of the Hyatts and Moriarty and Cussens of the Paullans have been added to fill out the team. Johnson, Wilson and Thumser were unable to make the trip. William F. Yorger, Superintendent of Recreation, will make the trip with the team.

Parke Graduates as Apprentice Jockey; Loses His Allowance

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW ORLEANS, La., March 8.—When Ivan Parke resumed riding Monday afternoon at Jefferson Park, he'll be minus his "bug." Today was the last day of his apprenticeship. Apprentice jockeys lose the five pounds allowance one year after the day they ride their first winner, and the Western youth graduated from the "maiden" ranks March 8, 1923, at Tia Juana. The last mount Ivan rode as an apprentice was Lorena Macellia in the fifth race.

Since piloting this first winner, Parke has brought home 273 winners, including races of Saturday. During 1923, he was successful 178 times to top the list of American riders, while he was jumped into a good lead for the honors for 1924, piling up 96 winners since Jan. 1. At the Fair Grounds meeting, Parke rode 91 winners and Jefferson he has returned the winner four times."

Yanks and Giants To Win Once More

New York Fans Think Three-Time Rivals Will Meet Again This Fall.

NEW YORK, March 8.—Summing up the baseball situation at the present time, Harry Gross says: New Yorkers cling to the feeling that both the Yankees and Giants will again win pennants and thus continue the storm of protest which comes from other baseball communities concerning the so-called pennant monopoly now conducted by the two clubs in this city.

Even the bitterest enemies of the Yankees are not backward in assuming that the world's champions are pretty sure to win the American League pennant again, making it four in a row, which will make still another momentous record over which Manhattan fans may gloat.

Giants' Task No Sinecure.

The reign of the Giants seems to be in more danger than their American League rivals. At Sarasota, Fla., where the team has settled down to the serious business of training, Manager McGraw faces the difficult task of rebuilding his pitching staff.

He has several veterans who did not make a particularly brilliant showing last season and has also gathered the biggest collection of rookie flingers that the Giants have ever taken South.

The pitching staff of the Cincinnati and Pittsburg clubs are well and healthy to an alarming degree. The Giants must do a bit of experimenting with their new pitching talent while the above mentioned clubs are already set with box men of worth and experience.

McGraw's leadership has pulled the Giants through some tight situations before and he may be able to whip his new talent together in time to start the season off on the right pedal.

OHIO STATE ADDS TO ITS COACHING STAFF

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., March 8.—The addition of Howard Yerges, for several years football coach at Rice Institute, Houston, Tex., and Charles Seddon, line coach at the University of Texas, as members of Ohio State's football coaching staff next fall was announced today. Both men are Buckeye graduates and residents of Columbus.

With the announcement of the addition of the two, a partial reorganization of State's football forces for next fall was made known. Another feature of the enlarged program will be increased emphasis on the training of freshman material along varsity lines.

CARPENTIER PREPARING FOR A MATCH WITH DEMPSEY IN JUNE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 8.—Word from London may start Georges Carpentier is being prepared for another meeting with Jack Dempsey champion of the world, sometime Europe, but it is probably a remote only. It may have been inspired from the fact that Charles Cochran, the London promoter, who recently started the ball rolling for a Dempsey-Carpentier match several years ago, has sailed for the other side. The chances are that Mr. Cochran is on theatrical business only, but he declared last year that he was practically through with the fight game.

A Dempsey-Carpentier match at Wembley Stadium in London would doubtless be a winner, the huge arena seat 280,000 people and at reasonable prices would draw a tremendous gate. Time alone will tell, but it does not seem favorable for such a match.

BECH TO PLAY FIRST FOR ST. PAUL

By the Associated Press.

ST. PAUL, Minn., March 8.—Joe Beck, first baseman with the Memphis club of the American Association last season, will play that position again this season, it was announced today, when efforts of the Boston management to land a player from other major leagues fell through.

"Sit in, Brother"

Join the Great Fraternity of pipe smokers who are tasting new tobacco delight through the Humidor Sampler—Sent anywhere—on 10 days' approval

A new idea for Pipe-Smokers: 12 famous tobaccos, packed in a handsome Humidor—shipped to you direct to help you find the soul-mate for your pipe.

GUARANTEED BY The American Tobacco Co

HAVE you ever noticed, in the movies, that if the hero is a smoker, he usually smokes a pipe! And in the books and plays, if they want to portray a real, lovable, two-fisted man they usually stick a Briar in his mouth!

So, too, it is in real life. Nothing mellows a man more than the comforting palship of a good pipe. Salesmen often say they like to do business with a pipe-smoker—he's so easy to get along with.

Old Bulwer Lytton knew what he was talking about when he remarked that the pipe-smoker thinks like a sage and acts like a Samaritan.

It is because pipe-smokers are sage thinkers—and quick thinkers—that they have given such instant and tremendous recognition to the Humidor Sampler.

Here is the pipe-smokers' millennium come true! A handsome red lacquered Humidor, containing the twelve regal blends of all blends—the flower of the tobacco fields of all nations.

Obviously, you can't "try" every brand of tobacco on the market. If you should attempt it, you'd be as old as Methuselah and as poor as Job's turkey before you got through.

But the Humidor Sampler makes it easy for you to try all of the best—all in one night, if you choose—and it'll cost you less than the price of a theatre ticket!

Nature intended every man to have a perfect tobacco of his own—mated to his taste. Yours is in the Humidor Sampler. It may be one of the twelve tobaccos in its original blend; or it may be your own mixture of two or three.

Ten-Day Approval Offer

Superlatively fine things are always their own best salesmen. So we ask no man to buy the Humidor Sampler sight unseen—and delight unseen. Simply sign and mail the coupon and we'll send this Presidential Cabinet of fine tobaccos forward to you at double-quick time.

When the postman brings the Humidor, pay him $1.50, plus postage. Then smoke up—to your heart's content. Try them all—each tobacco individually, or your own special mixture of any of the twelve. If you don't feel that the Humidor Sampler is the best tobacco "buy" you ever made, return it and get your money back—pronto.

A Test of the "12 Best" for only $1.50
If you were to try all 12 of these tobaccos in full size packages, the cost would be:

True Life Story of Woodrow Wilson

By David Lawrence

Herewith is the fourteenth instalment of a history of the life of the late President Woodrow Wilson. The writer, David Lawrence, a Washington correspondent who, during his student days at Princeton, was a student under Mr. Wilson, was very close to him during his eight years in the White House and was cognizant of the important phases of Mr. Wilson's career. He tells the story of the great War President frankly and fairly, pointing out his weaknesses as well as his greatness. This history, chapters of which appear in the Post-Dispatch from day to day until it is concluded, will rank as a notable contribution to the varied Wilson biographies that are certain to follow his death.

CARPENTIER PREPARING FOR A MATCH WITH DEMPSEY IN EUROPE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 8.—Reports from London say that Georges Carpentier is being prepared for another meeting with Jack Dempsey, champion of the world, this time in Europe, but it is probably a rumor only. It may have been started from the fact that Charles B. Cochran, the London promoter, who really started the ball rolling for a Dempsey-Carpentier match three years ago, has sailed for the States. The chances are that Mr. Cochran is on theatrical business only, as he declared last year that he was practically through with the boxers.

A Dempsey-Carpentier fight at Wembley Stadium in London would doubtless be a winner, for it will seat 200,000 people and at cheap prices would draw a tremendous gate. Time alone will tell, but it does not seem favorable just now for such a match.

True Life Story of Woodrow Wilson

By David Lawrence

Herewith is the fourteenth installment of a history of the life of the late President Woodrow Wilson. The writer, David Lawrence, a Washington correspondent who, during his student days at Princeton, was a student under Mr. Wilson, was very close to him during his eight years in the White House and was cognizant of the important phases of Mr. Wilson's career. He tells the story of the great War President frankly and fairly, pointing out his weaknesses as well as his greatness. This history, chapters of which appear in the Post-Dispatch from day to day until it is concluded, will rank as a notable contribution to the varied Wilson biographies that are certain to follow his death.

CHAPTER XIV.

Why Mr. Wilson Chose Bryan as Secretary of State—The Beginning of Currency Legislation.

IT was while Mr. Wilson was in Bermuda that he encountered his first bit of world diplomacy. The British Government maintains at Bermuda a Governor-General who was instructed on that occasion to extend every hospitality to the President-elect. Just what instructions beyond that were given him is a matter which is known only, of course, to the British Government, but in any event the Governor-General took occasion during one of his social chats with Mr. Wilson to discuss the status of the Panama Canal tolls controversy, pointing out the hope of Great Britain that Mr. Wilson might be able to bring about a reversal of the action of Congress in exempting American vessels from the payment of Panama Canal tolls and thus discriminating against British vessels which had been guaranteed equal treatment under the Hay-Pauncefote treaty.

Woodrow Wilson had an opportunity to discuss the same question with Ambassador James Bryce before the latter left for England. He had a profound admiration for Mr. Bryce, begun in Princeton days when the noted Ambassador had visited there.

Mr. Wilson was cognizant of the value of British support as opposed to British hostility in world affairs, but he was much more impressed by the fact that the Hay-Pauncefote treaty seemed to give Great Britain rights which the act of Congress had taken away. Mr. Wilson knew also that the slightest indication of American friendship for Great Britain would irritate the Irish-Americans and would cause Germany to look askance at American policy, a reflex of which might be German-American opposition. Indeed Mr. Wilson's fears were fully confirmed on these two points a few months later when he asked Congress to repeal the law that had been passed in a previous session by which American vessels had been exempted from the payment of tolls. Count von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador, realized that a victory for President Wilson in the circumstances would be construed abroad as the growth of an entente between the United States and Great Britain. He worked tooth and nail to defeat the purposes of Mr. Wilson.

Importance of the Controversy.

As it happened, the President-elect little dreamed while he was in Bermuda of the far-reaching importance of the Panama Canal tolls controversy on world diplomacy. His decision to make the appeal in behalf of Great Britain on the ground that a treaty had been violated was a momentous one, as will appear in subsequent expositions of the Wilson foreign policy.

But even though Mr. Wilson realized and feared that he would be confronted with important questions of foreign policy, he did not think they would become paramount. His mind was fixed during the Bermuda vacation on the all-absorbing task of picking a Cabinet.

Should its members be political leaders chosen for their influence in Congress or should they be trusted personal friends of proved competence and administrative talent? He frankly discussed the two theories, but gave no indication at the time as to which he preferred. Circumstances, he realized, would control the ultimate decision and he was enough of a student of practical politics to realize that he must give weight to political considerations if he expected to win the necessary support for a legislative program in Congress.

To all the talk that there would be friction between himself and Champ Clark, the Speaker of the House, or Oscar W. Underwood, the majority leader, there came from Mr. Wilson unequivocal predictions to the contrary. He scented mischief-makers, but gave evidence that he would go more than half way to meet the wishes of Congressional leaders.

Possibly nobody in America realized better than Woodrow Wilson the difficulties that might ensue if he failed to select William Jennings Bryan for a portfolio in the Cabinet. No one, on the other hand, had been as keenly aware of Mr. Bryan's temperamental fondness for the stump and public speaking rather than the involuntary silence and seclusion imposed by tradition upon a Secretary of State. Mr. Wilson felt from the start that Mr. Bryan's position as a leader of the Democratic party in three separate campaigns entitled him to the ranking position in the Cabinet of a Democratic administration.

House's Tact Admired.

One of the first things Mr. Wilson did on his return from Bermuda early in December, 1912, was to offer the secretaryship of State to Mr. Bryan and the latter accepted. The tender was made verbally and was kept a secret for many weeks. Col. Edwin M. House, who had become identified with the Wilson preconvention campaign, began at once to enlist Mr. Wilson's interest in currency reform, on which he had spent many years of study. The President-elect sanctioned a trip by Col. House to Florida to let Mr. Bryan know in a general way of the plans for currency legislation and to win his support. It was Col. House's tact and skill on this mission that prompted the President-elect to rely more and more on the judgment of his new-found adviser.

The Colonel had the happy idea that John Bassett Moore, America's most eminent authority on international law, could be persuaded to accept the position of Counselor of the Department of State, and that the team of Bryan and Moore would satisfy public opinion, especially that part of it which did not believe Mr. Bryan would follow a conventional policy in handling foreign affairs.

Looking back on the hopefulness with which that plan was launched one cannot help feeling that it was a splendid example of the kind of thing which looks well on paper but never works in actual practice. It was a good political move but bred its disappointments later on. Mr. Moore was a stickler for traditional precedents—he is now one of the Judges on the Court of International Justice at The Hague. Mr. Wilson respected tradition and precedent only in so far as they presented an opportunity to create a new precedent. Mr. Bryan, whose heart was as big as the world itself, felt that precedent and law were compelling only in so far as they conformed to principles of Christian morality and the broader faith of civilization itself.

As a Secretary of State Mr. Bryan surprised Mr. Wilson by his zealous advancement of certain fundamentals of foreign policy and, though the President and Mr. Bryan disagreed on the use of physical force, instead of moral force, in issues with Germany, there is no doubt that the Bryan-Wilson combination was closer than either man had dreamed it would be in the days of 1912. Their emotions frequently were aroused in the same way—their sympathies stimulated by identical circumstances. Points of difference were many, but the decision to take Mr. Bryan into the Cabinet was a plunge into the dark by Mr. Wilson—it was simply a conviction that the Democratic party should be kept united and that Mr. Bryan had earned first place in the Cabinet.

Beginning of Currency Reform.

While the Cabinet problem, of course, was the principal work upon which Mr. Wilson was engaged when he returned from Bermuda, he began a series of conferences with congressional leaders on prospective legislation. It was in the little cottage at Princeton that Col. House and Representative Carter Glass, chairman of the House Committee on Banking and Currency, first laid before Mr. Wilson the essentials of the plan which in time gave to the United States the Federal Reserve act now on the statute books, substituting for an antiquated currency system a structure in keeping with the business expansion of the country.

The bold and outspoken manner in which Mr. Wilson as President-elect discussed what he intended to do as President on the major issues, mainly the tariff and currency reform, gave many of those about him the impression that he was overconfident. Mr. Wilson, however, had a sublime faith in the power of public opinion. Neither the tariff act nor the Federal Reserve act as finally written into law was actually what Mr. Wilson wanted, but their fundamentals were what he had sought from the beginning. He believed public opinion was behind him and that a chief executive who could marshal public opinion would compel Congress to abandon filibusters and dilatory tactics and enact constructive measures.

(Tomorrow's chapter describes how Wilson the theoretical gave way to Wilson the practical, in dealing with appointments to office.)

We take pleasure in announcing that on and after Monday, March 10th, we will be located in new and spacious offices on the third floor of the First National Bank Building.

The growth of our business and the increase in clientele have made it necessary for us to move to larger space upon the third floor of the building, in which we have been located for the past three years.

The new and spacious quarters will enable us to extend to investors an exclusive and more personal investment service in quiet, pleasant surroundings. The concentration of our various departments on one floor, devoted solely to the handling of investment securities, will permit us to transact all business more quickly and efficiently and many new conveniences and facilities will be provided.

The new office may be reached easily and quickly (just ten seconds from the first floor) by three elevators: Two located in the Mercantile Library Entrance off Locust street, and one in the main lobby of the First National Bank in the northeast corner, beside the Broadway entrance.

A small office for information and general emergency service will be continued at our old location in the west lobby of the First National Bank—and a branch of our Government Bond Department will be maintained, as heretofore, at windows 38 and 39 on the main banking floor.

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 8.—The Evening Post, in its weekly copyrighted financial review, says:

"Irregularity in the markets and 'spottiness' in business conditions have continued to be the leading features of the situation. The stock market still gives the impression of having a distinctly moderate speculative following, which is fairly well divided. The bears are unable to provoke liquidation, which the bulls cannot secure a public following on the buying side. The chief characteristic of the market in the past week was in fact its tendency to lapse back into extreme stagnation, both the public and the professionals seem to be growing bored with the oil investigation, which is degenerating into the lower phases of political maneuvre, and with the ordinular prognostications of prominent speculators, which all too obviously are tinged with human fallibility and personal interest.

"Notwithstanding the reversion to caution during the past three weeks, the heavy industries keep up their high rate of activity. Iron and steel production grew during February and manufacturers are reported to be planning to increase rather than to curtail their operations. Railroad buying of steel admittedly is heavy, while contracting for equipment is showing a distinct improvement. Building operations are going ahead apace. Automobile makers are increasing their schedules. Car loadings are setting new high records for the season of the year. Forward contracting still is comparatively light, but with the general spirit of caution now being displayed are a cause for gratification.

"Irregularity runs all through the commercial and financial fabric. Some industries are booming, while others are struggling with severe problems of readjustment. Commodity prices are irregular, with some groups advancing and others receding rather sharply. Stock prices furnish many examples of coincident advances and reactions. It is worth noting, however, that the sum of the irregularity in commodity prices is stability—a rather remarkable stability extending back over a considerable period of months, and the sum total of the irregularity in industry is a high volume of production, practically full employment and a substantial increase in the country's wealth.

Break in France.

"A fresh break in French francs to a new low furnished the most striking feature of the week. Efforts to dispose of the reaction as being due merely to a 'foreign offensive' are futile. The argument based on an assertion that the French foreign trade balance is making allowance for invisible exports, 'favorable.' Granting that such is the case, the 'foreign offensive' conclusion by no means is unavoidable. When a country's money or credit are being inflated part of its inhabitants always convert their funds to more stable foreign currencies. The increase in French note circulation has been moderate, but the increase in the Government's domestic loans has been persistently large. At the present moment the treasury is confronted with the problem of handling a huge floating debt and an unbalanced budget. This is the condition which makes the franc susceptible to both foreign and domestic selling.

"Nevertheless, the French difficulties and the depreciation of the franc probably have been exaggerated. Although the drawbacks involved in the fiscal policy of the past two years now have culminated in an embarrassing fashion, the chances for a correction of the fundamental situation are much brighter than in several years. France is aroused to the need for reduced expenditure and increased taxation. The Dawes committee seems about to bring in a practicable plan for stabilization of finances in Germany and for a settlement of reparations. France and Germany seem likely to accept this plan. Once the reparations have been settled, France then can count on a greatly improved sentiment at home and abroad, and, probably on foreign financial assistance. It is quite possible, therefore, that the franc may be approaching its bottom; short sales of it certainly are becoming more hazardous in proportion to the chances for a settlement of the long drawn out reparations dispute."

Franc At 3.49¼ Cents.

"Another sharp drop in French francs was the outstanding feature in the financial markets. In stocks, acute lethargy with considerable irregularity in prices marked the early trading, but during the closing hour some stimulus was derived from the announcement of an advance of 25 cents a barrel in the price of Midcontinent crude oil. Buying of large blocks of a number of the oil shares and a slump in two or three specialties, such as Colorado Fuel and Iron and Associated Dry Goods, which crossed par for the first time, furnished the only diversion to an otherwise dull session. Advances in the oils, however, brought improvement to other parts of the list and the markets were steady at the close. Bonds were quiet with the tone unsteady, the feature being weakness in French issues, which made new lows on the present movement.

"What amounted virtually to devastation in the foreign exchange markets Saturday attended another perpendicular drop in French francs. A flood of selling orders, mostly from European sources, poured into the market at the opening and continued throughout the trading, forcing the price down to 3.49⅛ cents, for a loss of over 25 points from the previous close. In a little over a week francs have lost nearly a full cent, the selling movement gaining momentum, naturally enough, as the price broke through levels which the market had believed would prove to be rallying points. While the sharpness of the drop within the past three days undoubtedly has been due to considerable short selling and panicky liquidation, the fundamental reason for the decline in the franc is to be found in the unsatisfactory condition of French Government finances. Other European rates sold off sharply in sympathy with the franc, sterling 1¾ cents at 4.26½ and Belgian francs dropping 17 points. Italian lire also were weak, giving up 7¼ points.

"In the commodity markets cotton was called upon to absorb heavy liquidation in the early trading as a result of a sharp decline at Liverpool, which carried prices off nearly 50 points. When selling pressure slackened, however, a rally set in, principally on covering of shorts and prices came back to about their previous closing levels. At a late price of 28.10 cents, the May future was 4 points lower.

"The grain market made little response to the news of the increase in the tariff on wheat and continued to be a rather listless trading affair. May wheat throughout the greater part of the session sold within a small fraction of its previous closing price of $1.11½.

"A decrease of $558,590 in surplus reserve, bringing that item to $21,438,920, is shown by the weekly statement of the Clearing House. Loans and discounts fell off $52,887,000, while demand deposits decreased $66,736,000. Circulation was slightly lower."

SEES INDICATION OF LARGE FUTURE CAPITAL ISSUES

Questions of Possible Inflation and Future Movement of French Franc Discussed in London Review.

Special Wireless to New York Evening Post.

LONDON, March 8. — Arthur W. Kiddy, editor of Bankers' Magazine and financial editor of the London Morning Post, in review today says:

"Current firmness in stagnant markets is explained largely by the fact that while investment resources are considerable and holders of securities are disinclined to sell, the large capitalists and financiers have not the same blind confidence in stock as the public, simply because they see more behind the scenes and recognize the magnitude of the political and economic problems which still are pressing for solution.

Demands on America.

"Time, of course, may show that the League of Nations ultimately will be able to insure international peace and international confidence; but progress in the direction inevitably will be indefinitely slower than it would have been the case, for example, with an American, British and French understanding compelling others to follow suit. Moreover, it is impossible as yet to say whether France and England will be drawn closer together and then will compel their views to be accepted by Europe or whether negotiations end with a political and financial debacle. With France so distinctly declining German promises and Britain too ready to trust them, it is difficult to see how the deadlock will be ended. Moreover, the fact that both countries do not desire a break in the Entente tends to prolong the deadlock.

"To sum up the situation generally, nothing seems yet to have occurred materially to lessen Europe's economic and financial bondage to America, especially when the French and Italian war debts to you are remembered. This, however, is a position so unprecedented and so full of both political and economic possibilities that the ablest business and financial experts are unable to see far ahead until the reparation crisis finally is settled, and probably until France brings in a stabilizing plan. It is feared that the franc must fall further, thus adding to economic confusion.

Problem of Infection.

"Assuming that international politics improve and that the betterment is followed by a revival of international trade, it is difficult to see how a certain amount of inflation can be avoided if the new trade is to be financed. Financial activities already are considerable, with constant fresh developments. British financial concerns are becoming interested in German and other foreign companies, making Amsterdam the temporary center of their working operations. Moreover, there are indications that capital flotations here will be on a large scale during the next few months."

Wall Street ... and Comment

—SPECIAL DAILY—

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 8.—In spite of the upward movement of several individual issues in a generally uneven stock market today, there was no indication that the speculative position had been changed for the better. Oil shares gained ground following the announcement of other mid-continent crude prices. Motors were taken up for a time and recovery occurred in other directions, but the ordinary industrial leaders were still hesitating and the list as a whole showed no disposition to get out of a rut.

Early in the trading some of the motor shares were bid up, notably Hudson Motors and Maxwell Motors A, but their advance was checked. Hudson got to a new high. Studebaker was sluggish until the second and last hour, and then became more active above 107.

The continued advance in Colorado Fuel and Iron was a noteworthy incident. The stock had gone up 2¾ points to 31¼ at the close on Friday and at its highest today was selling more than five points above yesterday's low of 28¾. The 1923 earnings statement of the company showed $1.67 a share on the common against a deficit in 1922.

The domestic oil shares responded immediately to the advance of 10 to 25 cents a barrel in mid-continent crude, and the best prices were made toward the close. Coaden, Producers and Reducers, Skelly, Phillips, Marland, Houston and other members of the group were somewhat higher but it seemed that the increase in mid-continent crude had been pretty well discounted. United States Rubber stocks went up on short covering in anticipation of the first report to come out Monday. General Electric was higher.

Profit taking made itself felt throughout the list toward the close and in some instances reversed selling by professionals for decline was noticeable. The rails which had run up sharply in the first hour for special causes fell back and there was continued selling in United States Steel, Baldwin Locomotive, American Can and in the last half hour in Studebaker.

The Bond Market.

Further selling of French Government bonds was the feature of today's market coinciding with the persistent decline in French francs. Adding to the loss of about a point Friday, French 8s and 7½s were offered in large volume, but with a good market on the way down. The loss in realty was not large compared with the slump in the exchanges. French provincial and municipal issues were likewise lower. On the week all these bonds are down from three to four points. The balance of the foreign list was not greatly affected although heaviness was still noticeable in United Kingdom 5½s of 1937.

Speculation continued today in the short term St. Paul junior bonds but fluctuations were not as large as Friday and the day before. At the high of the week these bonds have made a net gain since last Saturday of six and a half points. The rise was due to the report that negotiations had been begun for refunding the issue, which report, however, it was reported, could not be confirmed. Next in interest were the securities of the Missouri Pacific, whose general 4s are up nearly three points on the week and the 6s almost as much.

In the high grade investment list, changes on the week are small. Bonds have been steady but except in a few isolated cases have shown no tendency to go higher.

Liberties and United States Government loans were higher today, continuing the recovery begun late yesterday. On the week, however, changes are small and mostly lower.

It was reported that the Treasury Department was planning an offering early next week of long terms as well as an issue of certificates of indebtedness. The amount of the new financing was estimated at $500,000,000, of which $200,000,000 may be offered in long term bonds. The rate of interest on the bonds was expected to be 4¼ per cent, the report said, and on the certificates four per cent. There was no confirmation of the details.

New offerings for the week have been the smallest of the year to date with the exception of the week of the new year's holiday. The total amount is only around $28,000,000.

Foreign Exchange

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 8.—The Evening Post in its weekly copyrighted foreign exchange review, says:

"French exchange stood out as the chief feature of the trading in the foreign list, starting with a display of strength on Monday, when the franc touched 7.30 cents, the highest figure in history. The increase in French cents notes to a huge volume was an open force helping along this movement, but it was generally understood in banking circles that prior to a settlement of the German reparations problem, French francs would yield to no such rapid advance, an abrupt break, however, as occurred this week, was not expected, as an enormous large short account had been created in the recent trading.

"Belgian francs also made a new low record, selling yesterday at 3.28. In the last few days other continental currencies began to crumble, a factor in the trading being offerings from institutions in Italy and other continental sources. Spanish, which has been under pressure for some time, continued its downward movement, now low for the year being made yesterday when pesetas sold at 12.08. Scandinavians were fairly well held, although declines occurred in those exchanges after irregular fluctuations in the earlier trading. Greek exchange dropped over 10 points to 1.66, also new low for the year. Hungarian exchange yielded from .0025 to .0019, also a new low record.

"Japanese exchange was heavy during the greater part of the week, yen checks yielding to 44.30. Indian exchange, after being heavy for several days, developed strength on Thursday and Friday and made a substantial advance. Sterling acted independently of the continental exchanges during the first part of the week, demand holding close to $4.36, but yesterday and today weakened, yielding over 2 cents to $4.27⅝.

"What amounted virtually to demoralization in the foreign exchange market Saturday attended another perpendicular drop in French francs. A floor of selling orders, mostly from European sources, was poured into the market at the opening and continued throughout the morning, forcing the price down to 3.49½ cents, for a loss of over 25 points from the previous week's close. France would have just nearly a full cent. Other European rates sold off sharply Saturday in sympathy with the fall in sterling 15 cents at 4.26½ and Belgian francs dropping 17 points. Italian lire also were weak, giving up 7 points.

Dollar Worth 27.60 Francs.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, March 8.—The pound, on unofficial quotation, reached 117.60 francs today. According to bourse circles, is caused in part by the covering by French importers who sold pounds sterling short some months ago to assure themselves against anticipation reactions in favor of the franc. The resistance in the Senate to the Government's measures for new taxes and economies is also charged with a large measure of responsibility.

The dollar reaches 27.60 today, which is the equivalent of 3.62c for the franc.

CORN CLOSES HIGHER ON LOCAL MARKET

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, March 8.—Corn closed higher, after an early lower trend on weather conditions. Shorts covered late. Wheat was affected by corn trend and closed steady.

In the local cash grain market selections of soft wheat were poor, demand light and prices slightly easier. Hard was quiet and steady. Corn was steady to 1c higher. Demand was good. Oats were steady to ¼c higher. Demand was good.

The early range of both wheat and corn was downward, though the movement was not beyond a half cent. Liverpool closed unchanged to ¼d higher. Other news in the market included the increase of 12 cents a barrel in the tariff rate on wheat and discussion of the possible action by the Senate on a certain measure having to do with gambling. Such an abrupt break, however, as occurred this week, was not expected, as an enormous large short account had been created in the recent trading.

"Belgian francs also made a new low record, selling yesterday at 3.28. In the last few days other continental currencies began to crumble, a factor in the trading being offerings from institutions in Italy and other continental sources. Dollar Worth 27.60 Francs.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, March 8.—The pound, on unofficial quotation, reached 117.60 francs today. According to bourse circles, is caused in part by the covering by French importers who sold pounds sterling short some months ago to assure themselves against anticipation reactions in favor of the franc. The resistance in the Senate to the Government's measures for new taxes and economies is also charged with a large measure of responsibility.

The dollar reaches 27.60 today, which is the equivalent of 3.62c for the franc.

IF BACK HURTS BEGIN ON SALTS

Flush Your Kidneys Occasionally by Drinking Quarts of Good Water.

No man or woman can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Too much rich food creates acids which clog the kidney pores so that they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood. Then you get sick. Rheumatism, headache, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders often come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, begin to drink soft water in quantities; also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to help neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer cause irritation, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everyone can take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby often preventing serious kidney complications. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

REPLIES TO POLICE CRITICISM OF COURTS

Judge Wilson A. Taylor Takes Fling at President of the Board.

The testimonial dinner to Federal Judge Charles B. Davis at Alhambra Grotto last night was enlivened by a few words from Circuit Judge Wilson A. Taylor on how the Police Department and the Circuit Attorney ought to behave towards the courts, and how they would be made to behave if all judges were like Judge Davis.

"President Brockman of the Police Board recently made a speech in which he said the police were hampered by lack of co-operation from the courts," Judge Taylor began.

There were smiles, as Brockman, himself, sat at a table not far away.

Brockman's Suggestion Criticised.

"I wonder what Mr. Brockman expects the judges of our courts to do?" the Judge went on. "Now under Mr. Brockman's plan it would be best if the Judge and the Prosecuting Attorney and the police witnesses got together in a room before the trial and conferred. They would say to each other, 'What's the best way to get this bird?' But such conferences would be a travesty on justice. The courts cannot co-operate with the police by any such term of co-operation as Mr. Brockman has hinted at."

Having said so much Taylor looked over to Circuit Attorney Howard Sidener, who sat not far away, and near Prosecuting Attorney Albert Schweitzer.

"If all judges adhered to the Constitution as closely as Judge Davis does," he declared, "there would be no talk of a $25,000 minimum on bonds for release of prisoners. What judge in this room will say that such a pronouncement from a circuit attorney could in justice be upheld in his court? Judges have no right to deprive men of liberty before trial. All they can ask is that sufficient guarantee be made that the accused will appear in court when his case is called."

Slap at Bond Arrangement.

This was taken as a direct slap at the recent arrangement between police and the Circuit Attorney's office by which Sidener agreed to demand $25,000 bonds for police characters charged with major crimes. Two such prisoners have been held, recently, on such a demand.

Chief of Police O'Brien and other police officials heard Taylor's defense of the prevalent judicial attitude here.

The dinner, attended by 500 persons, was arranged by the Twenty-Fourth Ward Republican Club. Federal Judge Davis began his political career as a "two-mile man" in this ward, whose duty it was to line up the boys in a territory so measured.

Mayor Kiel, Walter J. G. Neun, president of the Board of Aldermen; Louis J. Becker, chairman of the Republican City Committee; Charles M. Hay, Willard T. Smith and Kenneth G. Bellairs were the speakers. The guest of honor was presented with a shotgun by his admirers. He made a short speech of thanks.

BEQUEATHS $500 FOR BIBLES AS SUNDAY-SCHOOL PRIZES

Mrs. Elizabeth McBride Strebeck Had Taught at One Church for 55 Years.

A $500 fund for the distribution of free Bibles as prizes to members of the Sunday school of St. John's Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is provided in the will of Mrs. Elizabeth McBride Strebeck, who died March 4 after teaching for 55 years in the Sunday school of St. John's Church.

The will provides that the income from the fund be used each year to purchase Bibles to be given pupils who obtain the most new members and to teachers whose classes have the best attendance records. The St. Louis Union Trust Co. will be trustee.

The bulk of Mrs. Strebeck's estate is to be divided among four sisters. She was 80 years old and became a teacher at St. John's Sunday school when it was organized in 1869 and continued until two weeks before her death. She lived at 5106 Westminster place.

FULL CASH BONUS OPTION REJECTED BY COMMITTEE

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—The House Ways and Means Committee rejected today a proposal to make full payments an option of the soldier bonus bill and directed a subcommittee to draft a measure providing for paid-up life insurance policies with an option of cash payments to veterans not entitled to more than $50.

The motion to provide for full cash payments of adjusted compensation, made by Representative Crowther (Rep.), New York, was lost, 13 to 12, the 11 Democrats of the committee supporting Crowther.

Proponents of the proposal immediately served notice that they would carry their fight to the floor of the House and seek amendment of the bill when it is reported to include this provision. Indorsement of the full cash payment feature with an option of the paid-up insurance policies was given before the committee at public hearings by several Republicans of the House and the committee of veterans named by the House Democratic conference to outline bonus legislation.

Chairman Green announced he would select before Monday the subcommittee to draft the bill, and predicted a report on the measure would be made to the House by the middle of next week.

The New ESSEX

What Experts Here and Abroad Say About It:

"Hudson has produced a super Essex . . . . It looks like the proverbial knockout." —From Automobile Topics.

"The New Essex is a revelation of performance, ease of riding and of smoothness." —From Motor Age.

"Steers easily, even on loose gravel at 50 miles per hour." —From Motor World.

"A wonderful value — a car of which Hudson engineers have a right to be proud." —From Motor Life.

"Possesses qualities I didn't believe could be incorporated in a closed car at $975." —H. A. Tarantous, in Motor (U. S. A.)

and "MOTOR" of London, England Says:

"For a very considerable time the Essex car has been one of the most popular American productions marketed in this country, and has won an enviable name for reliability and road performance. Good as the four-cylinder model has proved to be in service, however, the manufacturers have superseded it in favor of a six-cylinder model. It represents a very great advance in design on the old car, and is one of the most interesting American vehicles that has ever been imported here, chiefly on account of the fact that the engine is only just over two litres capacity.

"Outstanding features are the splayed rear semi-elliptic suspension, the sturdy frame, accessible power unit and components, oil system of chassis lubrication, general finish of chassis and bodywork, and the remarkably low price.

"So much for the details of the chassis. A short run on the road proved to our satisfaction that the car did not belie its appearance. The engine is vibrationless and will take the car along at so slow a speed as 2½ miles per hour without a tremor from the transmission. From even this low speed a ready pick-up can be obtained without changing down. For a 2-litre power unit the acceleration on second is terrific; in fact, it is one of the most lively cars in which we have ridden. Thirty miles an hour or over seems but 10 or 12, so smooth is the engine, while ordinary main-road gradients can be surmounted in excess of 45 miles per hour.

"The steering is particularly light for an American production, very accurate, and an ample lock is provided. The brakes, both hand and foot, could not be better, for they are very smooth, progressive and powerful in action. The transmission is noiseless, and in every way the new Essex six-cylinder can be put down as a real delight to drive."

"Even better than my former ESSEX" say Thousands of Owners

It is the most talked of car ever brought out by Essex. Old owners say it duplicates the pep and dash of the former Essex up to 50 miles an hour, while far surpassing it in smoothness and riding ease.

Thousands who examine and ride in it daily are proclaiming qualities never expected in a car of its price. They call it the easiest riding car they ever knew. Safe, comfortable and steady on all roads at all speeds. A special design that will interest you accounts for that. It starts instantly in any weather. Steers easily as a bicycle. Gears shift noiselessly at a touch. Even those who keep but casual track of gasoline and oil mileage, are astonished at its economy in those respects. And the minimum service cost policy, continues these economies in inexpensive maintenance throughout all the years it serves you. Ask your dealer for the parts price list.

And take a 30-minute ride to learn the facts.

Unique and Implacable Foe of Privilege

Nebraskan Has Despaired in Fight, but People Insist He Carry On

He Tells Clark McAdams Situation Is Better Than He Ever Has Seen It, but He Has No Faith in the Outcome, for the "Interests Have a Perfect System of Rewards."

Clark McAdams, author of "Just a Minute," and D. R. Their interview with Senator Norris appears below, and will be followed by interviews with Senators Shipstead and Walsh.

By CLARK McADAMS.

FOR 20 years Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska has been down at Washington shouting "Stop thief!" His friends have not always been sure that there was a thief to be stopped, but recent revelations have given color to his career.

They have also decided him to run again in the Nebraska primaries this spring, and one of the current beliefs in Washington is that he is one of the few men on the Republican side of the Senate who has a ghost of a chance to be re-elected.

Senator Norris did not intend to run again. He had said that his fight was lost, and that there was no use trying to pass legislation for the people. He thought 20 years was long enough for any man to hurl himself against the stone wall of privilege with no more consequence than a bloody head. He likened himself to the fabled Sisyphus, whose torture it was to roll uphill a great stone which always got away from him just as he reached the top. Two years ago, when his farm bill went down in the Senate in a battle in which he expended every ounce of his strength, he collapsed in his seat and for days hovered between life and death.

One could not go to Washington in search of picturesque figures in public life and omit this unique man. He was sitting at his desk as we entered his office, a full man-size and thick-bodied stalwart, with white hair, heavy black eyebrows, a face seamed by tireless conflict and only dully lighted by tired eyes. He smoked a long-stemmed cob pipe, and there were other similar pipes on the mantel behind him.

Somehow we people in the Western country know very little of Senator Norris, whose struggle against injustice epitomizes our own as almost no other public man's life does. We have perhaps never seen a senatorial race in which there were not a great many men, not one of them fit to hold the office, pursuing it like so many hounds after a fox. We have been loath to believe that the office anywhere seeks the man. Yet this is precisely the case with Senator Norris. He does not want to run, but his constituents will have it.

"Must Bow to People's Wishes"

"It is like this," he said. "I am tired of serving in the Senate. I have shouted my head off at people making off with almost everything we hold dear, and I want to give up and go home. I am disgusted, and I am in despair. It is the people of Nebraska who want me to stay here and fight on. I don't want to do it. I feel it is useless, but since they were kind enough to send me here in the first place and have been loyal enough to keep me here for 20 years I feel that I must bow to their wishes."

From a demagogue this would sound like the veriest twaddle, but no man has ever seriously called Senator Norris a demagogue. Independence of party and professional politics has always characterized his career. His unfailing courage and big, booming voice have always been for the people. Always a thorn in the side of the Republicans, and always scornful of every effort to bind and control him, he led the fight in which Cannonism was dethroned in the House. It was for this service to popular government that Nebraska sent him to the Senate. He sits in the Senate that same rebel he was in the House. His fairness has won him the respect even of his enemies. His steadfastness in the public interest has been an inspiration to other men. It is an axiom among the Progressives that if there were 96 men like Norris in the Senate the country would be 100 per cent what its founders designed it to be.

There is a reason why most of us have not known this. It is because there is about Norris nothing of the showman. Hand in glove with La Follette and implacable enemy with him of the old guard, there is in Norris none of the brilliance of the Wisconsin leader, none of the picturesqueness of his attack. La Follette is a better educated man than Norris. His background is greater, and his strategy is finer. The one man is an immovable rock, the other a flaming sword. It is La Follette who leads Norris. Norris is the gyroscope maintaining the balance of La Follette. It is a striking scene when the Nebraskan sits down in the Senate beside the insurgent captain, the two grown white-haired and old and grizzled in opposition to the steady march of privilege, each affectionately patting the hand of the other, and both smiling in the companionship of a service which has sometimes counted upon its side these two and no more.

"I suppose I ought to find encouragement in the appearance here of more men who will not do the bidding of big business and whose numbers have finally given us a balance of power in both Houses of Congress," he said. "I wish I could feel encouraged, for the situation is better than I have ever seen it. Perhaps if I had not been beaten down for 20 years and had not been flattened out so many times while the country was carried off bodily I might share the confidence and optimism of men who believe that the people have finally turned upon their oppressors. I will go on with them, but without faith in the outcome. I know better than they do the power of those we fight, their resourcefulness and their reserves. Privilege is an indefatigable and an indestructible thing. It works while we sleep. You can count the victories of the people upon the fingers of your hand, but the victories of privilege are as the hair of your head."

In which we have the difference between the two veteran insurgents—Norris despairing, La Follette ever believing.

Good Fortune of the Lame Ducks

"We have for the popular service only humiliation and defeat, but in the service of privilege there is a perfect system of rewards," Senator Norris continued. "Let us take the case of the lame ducks. They are all swimming in good fortune. The people of Minnesota repudiated Frank Kellogg, and he is now basking in the smiles of the Court of St. James. The people of Indiana repudiated Harry New, and he is now Postmaster-General. The people of Wyoming repudiated Harry Mondell, and he is now a member of the War Finance Corporation at $10,000 a year. The people of Washington repudiated Miles Poindexter, and he is now our Minister at the Court of the Incas in Peru. I could extend this list indefinitely, but these will suffice to show how privilege rewards those who serve her. We have deprived the people of their sole means of punishing an unfaithful servant."

Favors Two Government Railroads

Senator Norris voted against the declaration of war against Germany. He did not believe in it, and thinks now we only made a bad matter worse. He was one of the willful 12. He believed we should forgive Europe her debts rather than plunge her into bankruptcy. He has been spied upon, persecuted, made to suffer the torment of death. No more intense man ever sat in the Senate. His moods have been terrible. He serves his conscience alone, and more than once the profoundness of his feeling and his black despair at finding himself battling almost single-handed have occasioned the greatest alarm for him upon the part of his friends. Norris came out of the war much as Ulysses returned from his wanderings. He had been through hell. It is a question whether even La Follette suffered deeper humiliation or emerged from that black hole of the spirit more soul-seared than Norris. It was something more than a coincidence to those who knew them that both were re-elected by their own people after the war.

Humane causes readily find a champion in this unusual man. He led the fight to have Mrs. Lerner admitted to this country. He made the fight for Shantung a cause to which he gave himself utterly. He considered it a test of our Christian civilization. His sympathies have always been with the struggling people of every beleaguered country. He believes we should recognize the soviet government of Russia, and his sympathies have steadily been with the revolution against absolutism and disinheritance in Mexico. There is no imperialism, be it in Hawaii or the Philippines, that does not encounter the thunderous protests of Norris. No more tireless foe of the emprises of dollar diplomacy lifts his voice in the national councils.

His own life story explains this. He was born in Ohio, 63 years ago. His father died when he was a child. His mother lived on a farm, and she could maintain her family only by working for the wives of neighboring farmers. He worked his own way through schools and colleges. He was a school teacher, a penniless young lawyer—always at grips with the battle of life. He went to Nebraska to practice his profession. He was a Prosecuting Attorney, a District Judge, finally a

INTIMATE TALKS WITH LENINE REVEALED BY HIS FRIEND, GORKI

Perfect Incarnation of Will Directed at Aim No One Before Him Had Dared—A Monstrous, Fairylike Man, Who Swam in Laughter and Feared Music Would Make Him Soft.

VLADIMIR LENINE is dead. Many people, even among those who belong to the enemy's camp, admit with honesty that in the person of Lenine the world has lost a man who personified genius more brilliantly than did all the other great men of his time.

A German bourgeois paper, the Praeger Tageblatt, published an article on Lenine penetrated with a respectful amazement provoked by his colossal figure, and ended the article with the words: "Great, unapproachable and terrible Lenine appears even unto his death."

It is clear from the tone of the article that it has not been inspired by the physiological satisfaction cynically expressed in the aphorism: "The corpse of the enemy always has a good smell," not the joy experienced by people when a great, restless man gets out of their way—no, it is the man's pride over man which rings out loudly in that last testimonial made to him.

The press of the Russian emigres did not find the power or the tact to adopt in regard to Lenine's death the same respect which has been displayed by European papers in the estimation of the personality of one of the most vivid representatives of Russian vital energy and the fearlessness of Russian reason.

"Hero Out of a Legend."

For me, personally, Lenine is not merely a marvelously perfect incarnation of will directed at an aim which no one before him dared to face; for me he is one of these miraculous personalities, one of those monstrous, fairylike and unexpected men in Russian history, men of will and genius, as was before him Peter the Great, Michael Lermonosov, Tolstoy and others of that kind. I think that such people are possible only in Russia, whose history always reminds me of Sodom and Gomorrah.

Lenine for me is the hero out of a legend, a man who has wrenched his burning heart from his breast in order to light up with its fire the path leading away from the chaos of actuality, from the bloody and perforated morass of corrupted "statesmanship."

It is hard to make a picture of him: Lenine—outwardly—is buried in words like a fish in its scales. He was simple and straight as all that he ever uttered.

His heroism is almost entirely lacking in outward brilliancy, his heroism is the modest, ascetic martyrdom rare in Russia, of an honest Russian revolutionary of the intelligentsia, sincerely believing in the possibility of justice on earth, the heroism of a man who has sacrificed all the joys of this world to the hard task of obtaining happiness for all people.

Feared Effect of Music.

One evening in Moscow in the flat of E. Peshkova, Lenine, listening to a Beethoven sonata played by Dobroven, said to me: "I know nothing that could equal the 'Appassionata.' I am ready to hear it played every day. A marvelous, a supernatural music. When I hear it I always think, maybe with a naive, childish pride: what wonders people are capable of accomplishing!"

And smiling with half-closed eyes he added, merrily:

"But I can't listen to music too often, it gets on my nerves, rouses the desire to say charming nonsense and stroke the heads of the people who, in spite of living in a dirty hell, are able to create such beauty. And today one can't allow one's self the luxury of stroking people on the head—they would bite your hand off—one should hit them on the head, hit mercilessly—although, an ideal we are against all violence over men. Hm—hm—the job is not an easy one."

The task of honest leaders of men is an inhumanly hard one. It is impossible to find the leader who would not be a tyrant in a certain degree. Probably more men have perished under Lenine than they did under Taylor, Thomas Muentzer, Garibaldi. But it should be noted that the resistance to the revolution accomplished by Lenine was organized more broadly, more powerfully. One should also take into consideration that with the development of "civilization" the value of human life clearly decreases, which is irrefutably proved by the development of technical methods for the annihilation of men in modern Europe and the taste which is being revealed for this task.

Stupidity the Victor.

Oh, there is no doubt, of course, that one feels sorry for people—not for all, however. And, of course, it is disgusting to kill even those whom one is not sorry for and who like, for instance, all political swindlers, deserve to be placed under strict isolation in lunatic asylums.

But speaking in full conscience: do you not think it out of place and repulsively hypocritical on the part of "moralists" to speak of the "bloodthirstiness" of the Russian revolution after having during four years of a shameful all-European slaughter not only had no compassion for the millions of exterminated people, but tried in every way to keep up this degrading war until "final victory"?

As a result, culture is in danger, the cultured nations are exhausted and are becoming primitive—and the victory remains on the side of universal stupidity; its strong ropes are strangling people until this day.

A man of remarkably strong will, Lenine was in all other points a typical member of the Russian intelligentsia. He possessed in the highest degree the quality characteristic of the Russian intelligentsia—a self-restraint, often reaching self-chastisement, self mutilation—the denial of art, the logic of one of Leonide Andreyev's heroes:

"People live sordidly—therefore, I must also live like that."

"Silly and Unpleasant"

In the hard year 1919, in the worst days of hunger, Lenine was ashamed to eat the good things which were being sent to him by peasants and soldiers from the provinces. When parcels were brought to his uncomfortable rooms he frowned, became confused and hastened to distribute the flour, sugar and butter among the sick or the underfed comrades. One day, asking me to come and dine with him, he said:

"I will give you some smoked fish I got from Astrakhan."

And puckering his forehead of a Socrates and squinting with his all-seeing eyes, he added:

"They all send me things as though I were a landlord. How is one to prevent them from doing it? I can't refuse to accept—it would offend them. And here are people suffering from hunger. * * * It's all very silly and unpleasant."

Unpretentious, lacking all taste for wine and tobacco, busy from morning till night with the complex and hard work he had assigned himself, he entirely ignored all thought about his person, although he watched the life of all his comrades with a vigilant eye. His solicitude in regard to them rose to a degree of tenderness accessible only to a woman—every minute he gave up to others—leaving not a moment's rest to himself.

Saw Peasant in Tolstoy.

He is sitting at his table in the working room writing very fast and speaks to me without lifting the pen from the paper:

"Good morning. How are you? . . . Wait a moment, I'm just finishing this. . . . It is to a comrade in the province. He is a bit spleeny—tired, most probably. One must give him a helping hand. The state of mind is no small matter."

I see a volume of "War and Peace" lying on the table.

"Yes, Tolstoy. I wanted to read over again the scene of the hunt, when I remembered I had to write this man. I have no time to read at all. Only this night I managed to read your book on Tolstoy." * * *

Smiling, with half-closed eyes, he stretched himself out with relish in his armchair and, lowering his voice, continued:

"What a rock, eh? What a colossal figure! That is an artist for you! And you know what else is marvelous in him? It is his peasant's mentality—the real peasant hidden in him. Up to this Count, we had no real peasant in our literature. Not one."

Then, looking at me with his Asiatic little eyes, he asked:

"Whom can one place on a level with him in Europe?"

And answering himself:

"No one!"

He rubbed his hands and laughed, looking very pleased and blinking like a cat that basks in the sun.

Joyful Love for People.

I often noticed in him the pride in Russia, Russians, Russian art. Sometimes this trait seemed to me incompatible with Lenine, almost naive, but with time I learned to hear in it a bashful echo of a deep, joyful love of his people. In Capri, watching how carefully the fishermen disentangle the nets, torn by the shark, he remarked:

"Our men work with more spirit!"

And when I expressed some doubts on that question, he said, not without irritation:

"Hh—hm—don't you think you will forget all about Russia, living on this knob of a place?"

V. Dessnitzky told me that he was traveling one day with Lenine in Sweden and that they were examining a monograph on Durer in the train. Some Germans sat in the same compartment and wanted to know what the book was about. It developed that they had never before heard anything about their great artist. This made Lenine go into raptures, and twice he repeated to Dessnitzky:

"They don't know about their own people and we do!"

Laughed Like Honest Man.

I cannot imagine any other man who, standing so high above people, knew so well how to protect himself from the temptations of ambition and did not lose the vital interest in "simple" folk. He possessed a certain magnetic force which attracted the hearts and the sympathies of the working people. He did not speak Italian, but the Capri fishermen who had seen Chaliapine and many other eminent Russian men, by a miraculous instinct assigned a special place for Lenine in their hearts.

Wonderfully attractive was his laugh, the "hearty" laugh of a man who, although knowing well the clumsiness of human stupidity and the acrobatic devices of reason, could at the same time find delight in the childish ingenuousness of the people of a "simple soul." The old Italian fisherman, Giovanni Spadarro, said about him:

"Only an honest man can laugh like that."

Finger His Fishing Rod.

Lying in the boat, on a blue wave, transparent as the sky, Lenine learned how to fish "with the finger, without a rod. The fishermen explained to him that one should cut down when the finger feels the tremor of the fish line.

"Cosi: drin-drin! Capsce?"

He instantly cut down the fish, trailed it along and cried with the delight of a child, the keenness of a hunter:

"Aha! Drin-drin!"

The fishermen roared with laughter, joyfully, also like children, and gave him the nickname:

"Signor Drin-drin."

And when he left Capri they kept on asking me:

"How is Signor Drin-drin? The Czar will not get hold of him, no?"

In 1907, in London, several workmen who had seen Lenine for the first time spoke of his behavior at the Congress. One of them said, very cryptically: "I don't know—perhaps the workmen here in Europe have another man as clever as this one. Bebel or somebody else of that kind. But that they should have anyone so lovable I do not believe."

"Lenine Is Our Comrade."

Another workman added, smiling:

"He is one of us. A man who knows what he wants."

Someone riposted:

"Why, Plekhanoff is ours, too!"

And I heard, then, the answer:

"Plekhanoff is our teacher, our master—Lenine is our comrade."

A friend of mine, a Sormoff workman, a man with a soft heart, complained of the hard work in the Tcheka. I told him:

"I, too, think that this is not a job for you."

He agreed, sadly:

"Yes, it does not suit me at all. But when

A Plea for the Bonus.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I AM a convert to the idea of a bonus, but not a recent convert. Its beginnings date back to the end of the war, when I was discharged with a disability which will end only when I die and give up this world.

I have suffered untold hardships since my discharge. I have a wife and one child to support, and am totally disabled, and, like many others, I have no means on which to live. I have truthfully suffered for food, clothing, coal and other necessities which we are compelled to have if we continue to live. Not only this, but I have suffered for lack of medical aid. My wife, who has stood by me every day, has managed to wash for a few pennies, which has kept our bodies hanging together. While the Veterans' Bureau has got rid of a billion and a half dollars, I am not the only one. There are many, and I find there are 90 per cent of the ex-service men feel as I do about the matter. The Government duly owes us; it is our money, and not a donation, as some would have you believe.

I would give these men a decent adjustment of compensation, not as a charity nor as a reward, but as an act of simple justice. I would not do it because we have no right to cause unhappiness to the wives and mothers of the soldiers; I would do it because my own sense of justice says the Government owes a debt which should have been paid years ago.

Let no one tell me that the voters of this country are against the bonus. I know better. Even the politicians have unanimously pledged themselves to it.

Canada gave $600 per man; Great Britain was generous; Australia and New Zealand gave over $400 per capita; France and Belgium did not forget their victims.

Should not rich America do something? AN EX-SERVICE MAN.

Questions.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

"PARADOXICAL ANIMALS," as explained in connection with East St. Louis Ku Klux Klan activities on your editorial page is a very interesting article. Can the Blue Lodge of the Masonic Order allow that noble organization to become linked with the Ku Klux Klan or its allies in any way? If they should, could it be possible for the Masonic order to retain its standing as a fraternal American institution? What, if any, organization can a Ku Klux Klansman hold membership in and consistently live up to its ritual? What article or section of the Constitution of the United States does the Ku Klux Klansman swear allegiance to? In what way and by what action do they intend to prove that they are entitled to call themselves representatives of the white Protestants of the United States? It is the opinion of all respectable Americans that the Ku Klux Klan represents an invisible empire that forever will remain invisible, so far as the United States of America is concerned. So far as the religious end of it is concerned, it may be a good disorderly band for any preacher to join who is short of funds. MIDWEST.

Advice to Republicans.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE fourth year of Harrison's administration witnessed a period of depression which the Republicans could not get under control before the election. This helped to put Cleveland in office. But the people soon saw that they had made a big mistake, for things quickly went from bad to worse.

After four years of exceptionally hard times, McKinley took the reins of office, and a period of unprecedented prosperity followed. The little panic under Roosevelt was not the fault of the party in power. Fortunately, the Republicans had time to straighten matters before the next election, thereby insuring victory for Taft. Things now continued to run smoothly, but a split in the ranks of the Republicans caused the defeat of Taft four years later.

What gave the Democrats their chance. But they were not equal to the occasion. During the first 16 months of Wilson's administration, unemployment became general. Then came the war, and with it work and high wages. To say that Wilson gave the country work and high wages is ridiculous. Neither would he have been re-elected, had not Roosevelt induced Hughes to favor intervention in Europe. Even at that, Wilson won only by a narrow margin.

The mistake the Republicans made in 1920 was to elect a Wall street man. Now, to save the country from hard times and European entanglements, we Republicans will have to get together, rid our party of its crooks, and nominate a man with a clean slate. To form a new party at the present time would be disastrous. FOR UNITY.

THE SCANDAL'S COST.

It is impossible to compute the costs to the American people of the oil scandal that has agitated the public mind the last two months. That the people's civic morale has been seriously lowered cannot be questioned, and that is an unfortunate and costly thing. Whether the leasing of the oil reserves to private interests through the base, secretive negotiations of Albert B. Fall has jeopardized the nation's independence by incapacitating the navy in some far-away emergency which those reserves were designed to meet may be debatable. Men of consequence have asserted this to be the fact, but the fact, if fact it is, will be encountered in a remote future which need not be considered in present calculations. We do not have to look to tomorrow to appreciate the enormous costs of the official faithlessness of the Harding administration. We can get a convincing result from the data of today.

In his first message to Congress, on Dec. 6 of last year, which made such a favorable impression, Mr. Coolidge unequivocally informed Congress that its first duty was revenue legislation. He said:

To reduce war taxes is to give every home a better chance. Of all services which Congress can render to the country I have no hesitation in declaring this one to be paramount.

The country was ready for that declaration. It had been prepared for it by the Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Mellon, whose communication to Chairman Green of the Ways and Means Committee explained that the excess of revenues over expenses permitted substantial relief from the war taxes that were pressing so heavily upon us all and proposed a scale of tax reduction which the experts of his department had prepared from their comprehensive knowledge of the country's conditions and resources.

Whether that schedule, known as the Mellon plan, was the best possible scale of reduction that could be devised from the standpoint of the people's welfare is just now beside the point. But it is undeniable that the public interest in the Mellon plan was extraordinary.

But the oil scandal intervened. Public interest in the paramount necessity of sound revenue legislation was diverted by the infamous leasing of the oil reserves which has blasted and blighted reputations, engaged the energy of public servants who should have been at work on the revenue bill, issued a moral challenge to President Coolidge which he has not had the courage to meet, impaired the confidence of the people in the character of officialdom. In the destraction of public interest, there is no telling what kind of revenue bill will eventually be passed.

The moral is plain. The American voter has a duty to perform when he goes to the polls that must be performed intelligently. We must scrutinize the record of men who present themselves as candidates for high office. A party certificate may mean much or nothing, and it is our business to find out which. Engaging personal qualities are delightful assets, of rare value in many relations of life, but the public business calls for sterner stuff, and we should see to it that men intrusted with executive responsibility, are fitted for it.

That is not an easy solution, but it is the only solution. If we are going to have capable government at Washington we must ourselves be capable citizens. We must exercise our right of franchise with judgment and with the fullest information possible. So long as a majority of us blindly follow any party label so long shall we have inefficiency, periodical dishonesty and scandal and their appalling costs.

The President's nose for corruption, when it involves members of Congress—is notably sharper than when it involved a member of the Harding Cabinet.

A JUNKER DREAM.

Chief Magistrate William McAdoo of New York City would solve the crime problem by locking up all vagrants, including idlers with visible means of support, and keeping them in "an immense custodial institution out in the country, self-supporting through manual labor, where these people will be kept and looked after physically—mentally in many cases—during the term of their natural lives."

If human liberties are of any consideration at all it might be asked where the police would draw the line between legal vagrants and illegal vagrants. One prospect is certain: Such an "extension" of the vagrancy law would be an ideal instrument in our big cities to arrest, confine and bedevil strikers, radicals and all others whose views might not comport with those of the established order. What a junker dream to stifle free expression! What a perfect plan to make America 100 per cent Russian!

THE MEIKLEJOHN "ISSUE."

One of the pronouncements of Dr. Alexander Meiklejohn in his recent St. Louis address was that "the one unforgivable sin is dullness." Nothing could have substantiated this assertion more fully than the comments of his critics. Dr. Meiklejohn is no longer an issue at Amherst. But his personality and teaching have become an issue throughout the field of higher education.

There is something paradoxical in Dr. Meiklejohn's becoming an issue. He is so gentle. This fact, however, is in entire consonance with history. We need but recall the names of Christ, Socrates, Lincoln, Gandhi, to be reminded that the gentlest persons may stir the bitterest contentions which shake mankind and turn the currents of history. It is his critics that have made a controversy of Meiklejohn. And the reason for this is not the Meiklejohn teaching, but the failure to understand him.

Dr. Meiklejohn is amiably critical, but not of the principles on which our fundamental institutions are based. He is, in all respects, democratic and hopes democracy in government will work. He makes no optimistic prophecies of the immediate future. He realizes that the struggle, if successful, will be a long one and that it is better to build soundly than to cherish illusions. His sole mission is the fertilization of the human mind, wherever and whenever it may be reached, with intelligence, discrimination, taste, capacity for spiritual and intellectual achievement.

Meiklejohn looks far to the future, seeking to aid his generation to a higher and unshackled frame of mind. He offers no set program, no dogma, no panacea, no revolution. He is one of the public figures of his day who is not moved by a cheap expediency. Ignorant denunciation of men who have looked ahead of their time has been a popular—and perilous—pastime of the ages.

When the Republican leaders begin to "point with pride" it will be rather interesting to note in just what direction they will be pointing.

THE DONKEY'S EARS.

Secretary Mellon says that the Government's revenues will stand a 25-per-cent reduction in taxes on personal incomes for the past year and due in part on the 15th of this month. He favors such a reduction. The pending revenue bill carries such a reduction. But the bill carries other provisions which have tied it up in factional disputes against all possibility of enactment before the 15th inst.

The Treasury Department further bears witness that payers of these taxes are holding back their returns and payments in prospect of such a reduction. So the Senate Finance Committee proposes by joint resolution to lift this immediate-reduction provision from the bill and pass it at once. It will end the present intolerable confusion. It will give the relief to taxpayers which they have a right to, which they have been promised and which cannot now be denied to them without trouble for those responsible.

Now come reports that some Democrats in Congress are talking opposition merely to embarrass President Coolidge and hold him to a veto of immediate tax reduction should he be minded to veto the pending revenue bill on account of other provisions.

This would be peanut politics. It would be politics of the most dangerous sort to those who undertake to play it. Such Democrats, if there are any, are as much in favor of the proposition on its merits as Secretary Mellon or all the rest of Congress. Whoever of that party, if anybody, is so advising, he counsels as the traditional symbol of his party. We should hear no more of it.

PANETELA.

No. Luella,
Public office
Is not doing
Worth a whoop;
Looks as if
There isn't any Depth to which
We wouldn't stoop.
Once acclaimed
And much applauded
By us as
A public trust,
What it has Become is something
That as well
Would be discussed.

In the good
Old days behind us,
When the thing
Was being tried,
Men regarded Public service
With considerable Pride.
Like the army
And the navy,
Or say service
For the Lord,
Public office
Was regarded Widely
As its own reward.

It is from
That great ideal,
High above
The dread abyss
Of the opposite
Conception,
That at length
We come to this.
What was once
A prized specific
For the young
Republic's health,
Came at last
To be regarded As a stepping
Stone to wealth.

So we have it,
Little girlie;
In the sordid
Rush for tin,
Some cash in
Their chips on quitting,
Others while
They still are in.
Where for long
Men who had served us
Left content
With only fame,
Nowadays
The public service
Is a money-making
Game.

There are some mighty thankless tasks upon this troubled earth today, among them that of Gen. Leonard Wood. His predicament is as old as the history of empire, and it is no happier than that of other men sent out to rule a captive people. The difference in his case is that he is trying to do it when it is the deadest thing in the world. This was not so when some of the men went out from Rome to rule over Britain, or when Spain sent her Viceroys out to rule over Latin-America. The world had never known any happier lot than that, and the resistance it offered was no more than man has always offered to those depriving him of freedom. It is another world in which we live today. There is something better than empire afoot in it, and it is only by blushing for our very inconsistency that we can deny the Filipinos liberty. Mr. Coolidge must have looked like a spring sunset when he denied the petition presented a few days ago, as each one of us must blush to think of the sophistry with which we reject the pleas of those people to be free. If Gen. Wood is not popular in the Philippines, and if the Filipinos want to get rid of him, it may be said in all fairness to him that the idea he represents is no more popular either there or anywhere else. There is just one virtue in our delaying to free the Philippines. If we keep up our play-acting and they keep right after us for a few more years, we will not merely have introduced Western civilization among them, but will have made them all humorists.

There is an occasional robin these spring-like days, but since the groundhog has done so well to date we are going to believe that winter will end on the 15th inst. That ends the period of six weeks, and you know as well as we do what the first four weeks have been like. There is so little consistency anywhere today that we feel like rewarding this particular exhibition of it with our own faith. The groundhog took a long shot, and he has not hedged on it. His explanation or attempt to get out of it is not among the numerous explanations and attempts to get out of it which fill the public prints. He went down, and he is staying down. There is no McAdooing, Daughertying, Burnsianing, Dohenying or Sinclairing there. It is therefore as a shining exception that we give him hail and predict two weeks more of winter.

(Sikeston, Mo., Standard.)

This is getting to be a tame world in its wild places. The head hunters of Luzon are selling souvenir postal cards and are learning to play croquet. The cannibals of the Solomon Islands are drinking tea and playing the mandolin. Up in the polar North the Eskimos are listening to the radio and taking boxes of gumdrops to their sweethearts. If one would see wild life it is necessary to take a trip to one of the movie studios, or go on the streets of St. Louis after dark.

Cold weather in the Gulf coast regions, according to a report received by the United States Department of Agriculture, has apparently resulted in high mortality among some of the semitropical forms of truck-crop insects, such as the belted cucumber beetle, the Australian tomato weevil and the sweet-potato weevil. However, all our bugs up this way are doing well, and there is just as little liberty as ever.

The MIRROR OF PUBLIC OPINION

This column is designed to reflect without bias the latest comment by leading publicists, newspapers and periodicals on the questions of the day.

THE FIRST BLUE LAW.

From the South Bend (Ind.) News-Times.

RIGHT off-hand, when would you say the following lines were written?

"The art of prohibition was received with open mutterings from the people and silent though deeply rooted opposition in high places. As time went on the law was broken more and more frequently. Large quantities of forbidden goods were secreted in hidden places. Soon the matter became a public scandal, for it was found that even high officials in the Government had come into band in their possession and kept it for daily use. The Government in its efforts to enforce the law, appointed large corps of inspectors, endowing them with extraordinary powers of search and seizure. At last no home was safe from intrusion and punishment became more severe."

You are wrong. According to the New York Times, they are a translation of an ancient manuscript, recording events that happened in the years 213 to 204 B. C., or 2100 years ago. The prohibition referred to was the suppression of books, not booze. The penalty for violation of the law was death. Some 460 scholars were beheaded. The bootlegger of that day was the fellow who surreptitiously tried to duplicate the tons of manuscript which were burned by the Emperor, who wanted ignorance, not temperance. The world has traveled a long distance since that early Chinese day, but human nature remains much the same. This Emperor who thought that learning was a public evil, stimulated education. He made education attractive by prohibiting it. Forbidding any act is quite sure to foster an appeal that is stronger than mere mending it. Nearly everyone wants to discover what there is in the thing that is terrible to be evil.

THE MISSING LINK.

GLEN FRANK in March Century.

OUR geographical isolation from European affairs has meant, for the most part, that of Americans, an intellectual isolation as well. That is to say, the rank and file of Americans do not keep in touch with world affairs. The Missourian knows what is going on in Iowa, but he is not disposed to be as well informed on what is going on in Czecho-Slovakia or Bulgaria, although what is happening there may more decisively affect his future than what is going on in Iowa. For the average American to have a keen interest in German politics is as easy as for the Missourian to be interested in what is happening in Iowa. No plan can, in the long run, be effective unless it has back of it an informed, interested, well-determined public opinion. And, in view of the difficulty the average American has in keeping in touch with what is happening on the other side of the world, there can be no continuous and intelligent support of a far-sighted American foreign policy. Always ways and means are devised for a continuous education of the American people in world affairs.

I think that Illitch, too, much often had to hold back the wings of his soul and I feel ashamed of my weakness."

I knew and know many workmen who are forced to "hold their souls by the wings" with clenched teeth and to violate their organic social idealism for the sake of the cause which they are serving. Did Lenine, too, have to "hold his soul by the wing?"

He paid too little attention to himself to be able to talk about himself with other people. Like no one else did he know how to keep silent the secret storms raging in his soul. But one day, in Gorki, caressing some children, he said:

"Those youngsters will live better than we. They will not have to go through the things which fell to our lot. Their life will not be so cruel."

And, looking in the distance, where the village had firmly settled down, he added, thoughtfully:

Hated Unhappiness.

"All the same, I don't envy them. Our generation has succeeded in accomplishing a task marvelous in its historical importance. The compulsory cruelty of our lives will be understood and justified one day. Everything shall be made clear, everything!"

He caressed the children with great caution, touching them with light, gentle hands.

Maybe Lenine understood the drama of existence under a simplified light and considered it to be easily averted, as easily as the outward filth and slovenliness of Russian life can be averted.

But—no matter! What I appreciate in him so greatly is exactly this feeling of inexhaustible, irreconcilled hatred of all unhappiness, his glaring faith that this unhappiness is not a necessary foundation of life, but litter which ought to be swept away from it.

I would like to call this basic trait in his character a belligerent optimism and note that it was not a Russian trait. It was the one which mostly attracted my soul to this Man, a man with a big M.

Until 1918, until the mean attempt at killing Lenine took place, I did not come together with him in Russia, and did not even see him casually from afar. I came to him when he still used his arm with difficulty and could hardly move his injured neck. In answer to my expressions of indignation, he answered, unwillingly, in the way with which one speaks of boring, tedious matters:

"It's a fight. There's nothing to do against it. Every man acts as he thinks best."

His Ironical "Hm!"

We met in a friendly way, but, of course, the piercing, all-seeing eyes of dear Illitch looked at me with evident compassion, as one looks at an "erring soul." That glance is one I am used to—for 30 years people have been looking at me like that. I expect with confidence that the same glance will follow me to my grave. One should not try to find any conceit in this conviction. I do not want to hint that "erring souls" always discover new ways and Americas. But, I find it easier to agree with people out of respect for them, even out of politeness, than out of a necessity clear to them, but unclear to me. A few moments later Lenine was saying, with great enthusiasm:

"Whoever is not with us is against us. It is a foolish phantasy to imagine that there are people independent of history. Even if one were to admit that there were such people in the past, now they don't exist any more—they can't. They are of no use. Everybody up to the last man is involved in the whirl of reality, entangled as it never has been before."

"You say I simplify life too much? That this simplification threatens to ruin culture, yes?"

And then comes the ironical, the characteristic:

"Hm! Hm!"

Supernatural Worker.

The piercing glance grows sharper, and, lowering his voice, Lenine goes on:

"Well, what about the millions of peasants armed with guns? Are they not a threat to culture, to your mind—no? Do you think that the Constituent Assembly would have known how to tackle their anarchism? You who make such a fuss—and quite rightly, too—about peasant anarchism, ought to know better than anybody else what work we are accomplishing. The Russian masses ought to be confronted with something very simple, very accessible to their reason. Soviets and communism are simple!"

But it is not my object to speak of Vladimir Lenine, the politician. It is Lenine, the man, who is very dear and very close to me.

I admired greatly the will power and the active hatred of all the meannesses of life, which were so strongly expressed in him; I looked on with rapture at the youthful and bold enthusiasm which he put into all he did. I was amazed at his supernatural working capacity. Bold enthusiasm was a characteristic of his nature, but it was not the covetous, hamardous, boldness of a gambler; it only revealed to me Lenine the exceptional energy of spirit, which is characteristic only of a man of an unshatterable faith in his calling, a man deeply and many-sidedly conscious of his link with the world, and realizing unto the end his part in the world's chaos—the part of an enemy of chaos.

Swam in Laughter.

He could play chess, examine a "History of Costumes," lead a discussion with various comrades, fish, go for long walks along the stony paths of Capri, warmed by an hot-but southern sun, admire the golden

Intimate Talks With Lenine Revealed by Gorki

I was amazed at the supernatural working capacity. Swam in Laughter.

He could play chess, examine a "History of Costumes," lead a discussion with various comrades, fish, go for long walks along the stony paths of Capri, warmed by an honest southern sun, admire the golden flowers of the furze and the swarthy children of the fishermen—all with the same excitement. And in the long evenings, listening to tales used to sigh enviously:

"How little I know of Russia! Simbirsk—Kazan, Petersburg—the exile—that is about all!"

He loved the humorous and used to laugh, shaking with all his body, actually "swimming" in laughter, often until tears stood out in his eyes. His short characteristic ejaculation: "Hm, hm——" acquired a scale of infinite shades of expression from a stinging irony to a cautious dubiousness, and often a sharp sense of humor sounded in that "hm, hm"—a humor accessible only to a very vigilant man, well aware of all the satanic absurdities of life.

Skull of a Socrates.

Stolid and square, with the skull of a Socrates and the all-seeing eyes of the great and crafty sage, he often stood in the strange and somewhat comical posture, his head thrown back, slightly inclining on the shoulder, his fingers hidden under the arms, behind the vest. There was something wonderfully charming and funny in that pose, something of a triumphant cocksuredness, so to say. At such moments he used to sparkle with gaiety, that great child of a cursed world, that splendid man who needed to bring himself as a sacrifice to hatred and hostility, for the sake of the cause of love and beauty realized.

His movements were light, agile, and his rare and strong gestures were in harmony with his manner of speech, also made up of few words, but abundant in thoughts. And his piercing eyes of an inexhaustible persecutor of lies and misery shone and sparkled on his Mongol face; they sparkled half-closed, blinking, smiling ironically, flashing with anger. The light of those eyes rendered his speech still more biting, still more uncannily clear. It seemed sometimes that the indomitable energy of his spirit shot sparks out of his eyes, and that the words, saturated with it, glittered in the ether. His speech always roused a physical sensation of an irresistible truth, and, although this truth often was unacceptable to me, I could not mistake its power.

Words Like Iron Filings.

It was uncommon and curious to see Lenine walking in the park of Gorki—his image was so tightly linked with the picture of a man sitting at the end of a long table, smiling and flashing with his vigilant eyes of a helmsman, and cleverly, aptly directing the discussions of his comrades; or else, standing on an elevation, his head thrown back, flinging clear, definite words into the silenced crowd, into the hungry eyes of people crying for truth. Those words always reminded me of the cold gleam of iron filings. The clear, artistic figure of truth arose from those words with a remarkable simplicity.

A lot has been written and said of Lenine's cruelty. I will not indulge, of course, in the ridiculous tactlessness of protecting him from calumny and lies. I know that calumny and lies are a legalized method of politics, the usual means of struggle with an enemy. Among all the great men of this world not one is to be found whom one has not attempted to splash with mud. That is a thing known to all.

Apart from this all people are possessed with the desire not only to lower an exceptional man to the level of their understanding, but also to throw him down to their feet, into the sticky, poisonous mud, which, after having created it, they have called "every-day life."

This evil desire of disfiguring all things of exceptional beauty has the same source as the mean aspiration at all costs to caluminate every exclusive personality. All things exceptional prevent people from leading the life they want to lead. People aspire—if they aspire at all—not at all to a basical alteration of their social habits—merely to an expansion of them. The fundamental groaning and supplication of the majority is: "Do not come interfering with our customary way of living!"

Defense of Cruelty.

Vladimir Lenine was a man who succeeded in preventing people from living according to their acquired habits more brilliantly than anyone else succeeded before him.

I do not know what it was he roused more—love or hatred. The hatred he provoked is nakedly and repulsively obvious—its blue, pestilent stains shine brilliantly everywhere. But I fear that the love itself for Lenine was, with many, merely the dark faith of exhausted and despairing people in a miracle worker, the love which expects a miracle but does nothing to incarnate its power into the body of a life almost numb with the suffering that has been provoked by the spirit of greed among some—a monstrous stupidity among others.

I often had the occasion to speak with Lenine of the cruelty of revolutionary tactics and methods.

"What do you expect?" he asked, amazed and angry. "Is humaneness possible in such an unusually fierce battle? Where is there place for soft-heartedness and generosity? We are blockaded by Europe, we are deprived of the expected support from the European proletariat from all sides, counter-revolution crawls onto us like a bear, and we—what are we to do? Are we not in the right to fight and offer resistance? Well—no—forgive me, we are no fools! We know that what we want no one can accomplish but ourselves. Is it possible that you can believe that if I were convinced of the opposite I would have remained here?"

Traitors Out of "Cowardice."

"In what measure do you consider the blows dealt in a fight necessary—or superfluous?" he once asked me after a hot discussion. To this simple question I could answer only lyrically? "I doubt whether there is another answer to it."

I often approached him with various petitions and felt that my intercessions roused compassion, almost contempt, for me in Lenine. He asked me:

"Don't you think that you are worrying over rubbish trifles?"

But I went on with what I considered necessary to accomplish, and the crooked, angry glances of a man who kept the accounts of the enemies of the proletariat did not succeed in repulsing me. He shook his head mournfully and said:

"You compromise yourself in the eyes of the workmen."

But I tried to indicate that the workers in a "state of irascibility and irritation" often treat far too "simply" and lightly the question of freedom and life of many valuable people, and that this, to my mind, not only compromised the honest and hard task of a revolution by an unnecessary and often absurd cruelty, but was also objectively unwholesome for the cause, as it repulsed many strong men from participating in it.

"Hm—hm," Lenine growled sceptically, indicating the numerous cases of treason to the workmen's cause to be noted among the "intelligensia."

"Between ourselves," he went on, "they play traitor more out of cowardice, out of a fear to be caught empty-handed, a terror that the beloved theory may suffer when confronted with practice. We do not fear that. Theory, hypothesis is not a 'sacred' thing to me—it is nothing but a workman's instrument."

"Joke of the Revolution."

In 1919 a beautiful woman used to appear in the kitchens of Petrograd and demand severely:

"I am Princess X. Give me a bone for my dogs!"

It was said that, unable to stand the hunger and misery, she had decided to drown herself in the Neva, but that her four dogs, scenting the evil device of their mistress, followed her, and through their wails and agitation compelled her to abandon the idea of suicide. I told this story to Lenine. Looking at me stealthily, he half closed his eyes, and, finally shutting them altogether, said gloomily:

"If that is a made-up story, it is well done all the same. A joke of the revolution."

And then he remained silent. Finally rising and looking through some papers scattered on the table, he muttered thoughtfully:

"Yes, those people have had a hard time. History is a cruel stepmother, and it shirks nothing in the task of redemption. Yes—there is nothing to say—those people have had a devilish hard time. The clever ones understand, of course, that they have been pulled out with the root, and that they will not grow to the earth once more. As to transplantation to Europe, that will not satisfy the clever ones. They will not assimilate themselves over there. What do you think?"

"Yes, I think they will not."

"Then that means that either they will join us or again intercede for an intervention."

Few Clever Russians.

I asked him whether it was a fancy of mine, or did he actually regret people?

"I regret the clever ones. We have not many of them. We are a talented people, but our mind is a lazy one. The Russian clever man is usually a Jew, or a man with a Jewish origin."

And remembering several friends who, outgrowing class zoo-psychology, worked with the "bolsheviks," he spoke of them with remarkable affection and tenderness.

I offered him one day to go to the Munition Department to see the invention of a bolshevik who had served before in the artillery and had now discovered an apparatus correcting the shooting at an aeroplane.

"What do I know about it?" he asked—but went all the same. In a dark room, around a table on which stood the machine, were gathered seven gloomy generals, gray-haired old scientists. Among them Lenine's modest figure in plain clothes was lost—became unnoticeable. The inventor began to explain the construction of the machine. Lenine listened to him for two or three minutes and then said approvingly:

"Hm . . . hm . . ." and began questioning the inventor as freely as though he were examining him in matters of politics.

"And how did you acquire the double work of the mechanism establishing the aim? Can one not combine the establishment of the trunks of the guns automatically, together with the work of the mechanism?"

Astonished Gun Experts.

He asked about the dimension of the field of fire and many other questions. The inventor and the generals explained everything to him with animation and the next day the inventor said to me:

"I told my generals that you would come with a friend, but I did not say who the friend was. They did not recognize Illitch, and, besides, they could not imagine that he would come without noise, fuss or pomp. They asked me 'Who is he—a professor? Lenine? They were amazed. What? It could not be! And how can he know all our mysteries? Why, he asked questions like a man perfectly at ease in matters of technics. It's a mystery. I think they remained convinced that it was not Lenine who had been to see them."

While Lenine, leaving the place with me, laughed animatedly and spoke of the inventor:

"How one can be mistaken in one's estimation of a person! I knew him to be an honest old comrade, but not one of those who snatch stars from heaven. And he happened to be exactly such a one! What a splendid fellow! But how the generals bristled all over when I expressed doubts as to the practical value of the apparatus! I did it on purpose in order to see what their real judgment on that clever thing was."

Often Praised Others.

He laughed and asked me:

"You say that I have another invention? What is it? One must arrange that he should be bothered with nothing else. Oh, if only we had the means to surround those technical men with the ideal conditions needed for their work! In 20 years Russia would be the first country in the world!"

Yes, I often heard him praise his comrades. Even about those for whom, according to rumors, he had no sympathy, Lenine spoke with true estimation of their energy. Astonished at one of his flattering criticisms of one of the comrades, I told him that for many people this praise would have seemed unexpected.

"Yes, yes, I know! People spread lies about my relations with him. How they all lie and especially about me and Trotzky. * * *"

Striking his fist on the table, he said:

"But let them show me another man capable of organizing an almost perfect army in one year and conquering the sympathies of military specialists. And we have a man like that. We have all we want. And we shall have miracles, too, yes?"

Liked Human Beings.

He liked human beings, loved them with self-denial. His love looked across the distance and through clouds of hatred. And he was a true Russian man with the craft of a Vassili Shuisky, the iron will of a Protopop Avvakuum and the necessary stamina for its revolutionary inflexibility of a Peter the Great. He was a Russian, who had lived long outside Russia and watched it from afar—from afar it seems more beautiful and full of color. He estimated rightly its potential power, the exceptional talentedness of its people, still weakly expressed, unroused by history, a hard and tedious one—but their giftedness always flashing on the dark background of phantastical Russian life in brilliant golden stars.

Vladimir Lenine awakened Russia and it will not go to sleep again. He loved the Russian workman in his own way, which was a very good one. One could see that when he spoke of the European proletariat when he pointed out the absence among them of the characteristics which Kautsky had noted so well in his pamphlet on the Russian workman.

Vladimir Lenine, the big, the real Man of this world, is dead. This death struck at the hearts of those who knew him painfully, very painfully.

But the dark line of death only underlined more sharply his importance in the eyes of the whole world—his importance as the leader of the working people. And if the cloud of hate surrounding his name, the cloud of lies and calumnies were still more dense than it is, no matter; there are no forces that could extinguish the tourch lifted by Lenine in the darkness of the maddened world. And there was no man who deserved more an eternal memory.

Vladirmir Lenine is dead. But the heirs of his wisdom and will are still alive. At the end honesty and truth created by man conquer. All without which a man cannot be conquered.

SENATOR NORRIS FOR 20 YEARS IMPLACABLE FOE OF ALL PRIVILEGE

Congressman and then a Senator. He knows how bitter is the struggle for existence, for equity, for freedom, for all things dearly won from a begrudging world.

The Norris bill, of which he is the author, would create a Government corporation to buy all surplus farm products and sell them when opportunity offered. He believes this would keep farm prices up. He also thinks the Government should have two great trunk railroads, one North and South and one East and West, for the purpose of competition and lower railroad rates. There is a constructive quality in Senator Norris. Men who have known him and worked with him in Congress for years say that no more level-headed, no more just man could be made President. Nothing is further from the thought of the Senator himself. He is without ambition, as he is incapable of design.

How unyielding he is in his contempt for all the bootlicking and lickspittling of politics is illustrated by what happened after Mr. Harding received the nomination for the presidency. Mr. Harding was an old Senator, a glad-hander, a back-slapping Brutus. His friendships, while perhaps insincere, were nevertheless numerous and vociferous. There was a world of hello-warrening about it, and Mr. Harding was moreover the first man to be taken out of the Senate for certain elevation to the White House. When he returned to Washington after the Chicago convention he established himself in his office and held a sort of senatorial levee. It was a case of tell-the-boys-to-come-in and they did go in—irrespective of their friendship for him or their real regard.

Feeling of His Responsibility.

Except Senator Norris, who drew his toga about him and said, No! He was incapable of even that little gesture. Mr. Harding had stood in the Senate for one thing, and he had stood for another. It was nothing personal to Mr. Harding, in whom good fortune forgave and forgot every enmity; but it was to Senator Norris. No man can be to him friend one day and foe the next. He is incapable of all dissimulation, feels too deeply what he feels, is too conscious of his responsibility to the people who send him to Washington to hold lightly what is to most men no more than political froth.

Would it surprise you to learn that there is in Nebraska a Bryan who is a better politician than the celebrated William Jennings? It is said to be so. He is Charles W. Bryan, brother of the Beerless One. Charles is at the time Governor of Nebraska. He is known to be ambitious for a seat in the Senate, and when Senator Norris announced his intention to retire the Governor of Nebraska is said to have dusted his political wings and thought to have flown so high. It is believed unlikely that he will run now that Norris is back in the field. They think very much the same thing, but Norris has been saying it longer and with such unquestioned sincerity that it is doubtful if the man lives who can beat him in Nebraska. His strength is not among politicians. He makes no pledges, no compromises with politics as a profession. His strength is with the people, and he is their servant. This is an old ideal of democracy something that has been kicking around in politics since the time of Pericles. With Senator Norris it is a priceless thing, the touchstone of his integrity. No man has dignified more the homely and commonplace virtues of representative government, as no other man has more indignantly protested the widespread contempt in which they are held.

Measures He Opposes.

Senator Norris is powerful for democracy, something that has fought Newberryism. He is against the Mellon tax plan. He joins with every other member in the progressive group, whether Democrat or Republican, in the belief that there is not a department of the Government, from the White House down to the least commission, that is not by premeditation unsympathetic with the public interest. His party is to him merely a means to an end. He will join with any party serving that end.

A strange Republican, truly. A political anomaly, you will say. Quite so, but still logically sought by the office. If there were more men like him in the public service public office would be neither so windy nor so badly winded.

Store Hours: Daily, 9 to 5:30; Saturday, 9 to 6 — Olive and Locust From Ninth to Tenth

IT IS a Vandervoort policy always to sell every article at a price as low as that asked elsewhere for articles of equal quality or quantity.

Vandervoort's Spring Exposition and Sale of Homefurnishings Starts Monday Morning!

THIS semi-annual event is probably the most outstanding occasion of its kind conducted anywhere in the Middle West.

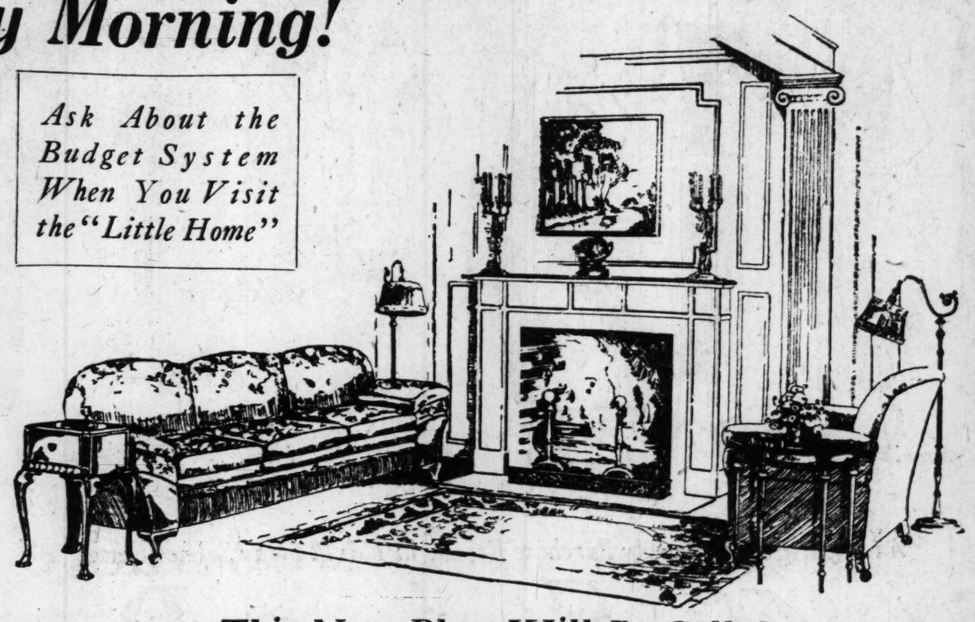
Beyond a doubt it arouses as much interest among homemakers and householders of this community as any other one event. In fact, the Vandervoort Exposition and Sale is unique. It is not only a selling occasion, but a liberal education to anyone interested in homefurnishing or homemaking.

The Exposition which begins Monday will far surpass any which we have attempted in the past.

For months, our Better Homes Bureau, with its staff of widely experienced men and women, has been planning displays for Exposition Week such as St. Louisans have never before seen.

The outcome of all this study and research is a new plan by which everyone's problems in partially or completely furnishing a home will be made far more simple.

Ask About the Budget System When You Visit the "Little Home"



This New Plan Will Be Called

Vandervoort's Budget System of Furnishing a Home

The Budget System will be made practical and applicable to everyone alike.

It will enable anyone, without any cost or obligation, to receive the advice and counsel of many years of experience in the proper distribution of and expenditure in furnishing a home.

After a thorough investigation of Budget Systems, we believe the plan evolved by Vandervoort's Better Homes Bureau is the most practical, simple and helpful plan so far developed anywhere.

Everyone will be given individual attention.

We will gladly explain the Budget System to you without any obligation being incurred on your part.

How the Budget System Applies to Our Club Payment Plan

Although the Budget System is just as helpful if one has the entire amount to pay at time of purchase, it will apply when purchases are made upon our Club Payment Plan.

When you visit the Spring Exposition displays, be sure to ask how the complete furnishings for a single room or an entire home can be purchased through the Vandervoort Budget System on our Club Payment Plan, which means a portion in payment at time of purchase and the balance divided into monthly installments.

"The Little Home" Furnished by the Budget System

On the Fifth Floor, Vandervoort's Little Home has been completely furnished according to the Vandervoort Budget System.

Be sure to visit this very interesting display and ask the attendant about the Budget System.

Several other examples of furnishing a small apartment or a room by the Vandervoort Budget System will also be shown on the Fifth Floor.

Unusual displays of new merchandise and new ideas will be exploited all week in all the home furnishing shops.

You cannot afford to overlook this wonderful educational as well as value giving opportunity.

A trip through the store will be well worth your while, even though you may not intend to buy now.

COMPARES ORCHESTRA WITH GERMANY'S BEST

St. Louis Organization Can "Hold Its Own" With Any, Hugo Koehler Declares.

St. Louis' Symphony Orchestra can well "hold its own" in comparison with the orchestras of Germany, said Hugo Koehler, vice president and treasurer of the St. Louis Symphony Association, upon his return last week from a three months' visit to Germany. Koehler heard the principal orchestras in Berlin, Leipsic and Dresden.

"Because of low wages, many German artists are leaving, many coming to America," said Koehler. "It probably will be that their loss will be our gain. Of course, as is generally known, the German orchestras are heavily subsidized by the Government. Special concerts for wage earners are being given in all the large cities, the deficits being made up by the Government. The concerts are well patronized."

Besides the cities mentioned, Koehler visited Hamburg, Munich and Nuremberg and made copious notes on economic conditions.

5,000,000 Out of Work.

"We Americans don't know how well we're off," he asserted, "particularly in our freedom from formalities and class prejudices. Germany is sick—economically and to a great extent physically. Five million persons are out of employment, 15,000,000 are in need of help. The effects of war are profound—not only politically, but in the morale of the country.

"The establishment of the rentenmark has helped, and it has given hope. Prices are high. The quality of goods is poor, stocks are small and there is a lack of variety. Wages are low, probably 50 per cent lower than before the war. A mason, for instance, is paid 25 cents an hour, but nearly 10 cents of it is deducted to pay for workingmen's insurance, benefits, etc.

"Only about 40 per cent of trains and street cars are running. One sees very few trucks on the streets, delivery being by push carts operated by boys and women. The people are existing on potatoes, turnips, margarin and bread. Cream is unheard of, while white flour, sugar and butter are extremely scarce.

People Support Shows.

"Theaters are poorly lighted and heated. However, they seem to be well patronized. The people demand good plays, operas, concerts and other forms of amusement, and the Government finds it necessary to provide such, notwithstanding the great expense involved, in order to keep the populace satisfied.

"There is a great deal of undernourishment among children, students and the professional classes. Undernourished children are being picked out and fed a certain number of meals each week in the home of the wealthy or at eating places conducted by the larger factories and banks. Soup kitchens are everywhere."

Koehler declared there are hopeful signs of Germany's economic recovery. He mentioned particularly the reptal of certain bolshevistic laws, relating to property, which has been followed by an increase of building operations.

Smoker for Alumni Tuesday.

Plans for uniting alumni of the academic departments of St. Louis University and Loyola, for the opening of the new St. Louis University High School, will be outlined at a reception and smoker Tuesday evening at the Melbourne Hotel. The Rev. W. J. Ryan, S. J., will speak.

ARLENE SCOTT STILL HELD

Habeas Corpus Application of Girl Charged With Murder Denied.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TOPEKA, Kan., March 8.—The Kansas Supreme Court today denied the application of Arlene Scott for a writ of habeas corpus to obtain her release from the charge of murder.

Miss Scott and her uncle, John Scott, are charged with the murder of Mrs. John Scott in Linn County last summer. The jury in the trial of Scott disagreed and then both Scott and his niece were accused jointly of the murder. It is charged that Scott was in love with his niece. The attorneys for the young woman filed the application for a writ of habeas corpus on the ground that the State had not offered sufficient evidence at the preliminary hearing to warrant holding her for trial for murder.

Fined $30 As "Chronic Speeder."

Arthur J. Yahlem of 6358 Delmar boulevard, a used automobile dealer, was fined $30 as "a chronic speeder" by Police Judge Matthews yesterday. Police charged that he drove 30 miles an hour on Delmar boulevard between Vandeventer and Pendleton avenues, March 6. Upon being reminded that it was Yahlem's third offense the Judge said, "This is a chronic case," and announced the fine.

Mrs. E. K. L. asks: "I there anythin for backache, pains, like rheumatism soreness in bladder re gion. Am al tired out, can't sleep, restless, nervous and blood in poor condition."

Ans.: Obtain Balmwort tablets. Take as per direc tions to improve kidney function and re lieve acid condition and bladder irrita tion. Also take cladonense tablets to en rich anemic blood and steady the nerves and you should soon feel like a new being.

Mrs. E. C. W. asks: "I am troubled with poor circulation, catarrh, cramps in feet and limbs—very annoying. Indigestion, poor appetite and am pale, weak and chill with least exposure. Also nervous and don't sleep good. What may help me?"

Answer: There being no organic trouble, the condition should quickly be overcome by the use of Cladonense tablets, which improve appetite, aid digestion and tend to thoroughly enrich the blood and strengthen the nerves and functions of the bodily organs generally.

Mrs. K. M. asks: "Would it be possible to reduce about 60 pounds? Do Arsenic tablets have to be taken continuously after reducing? Where can I obtain?"

Answer: Each case varies. Some have reduced harmlessly more than 60 pounds. After reduction, it is not necessary to continue taking Arsolene. Where local druggists do not supply, you can order anything from Spoon's Pharmacy, Fifth and Western Ave., Dayton, Ohio.

Answer to E. D. N.: For itching skin, fatty diet, use less coffee. Apply Nyal Resinol Salve lightly. Internally, use Nyal Resinol stimulating tablets and Sulphurb tablets (not sulphur tablets).

"Dixie" asks: "I have taken—[illegible] pounds to gain weight—but no success. I want to gain about 15 pounds. Please advise."

Answer: Make it a habit to breathe deeply each day and take Hypo-Nuline tablets with your meals as a nutritive tonic and flesh builder for nervous, [illegible]

Mrs. H. S. asks: "Am troubled with nasal catarrh, causing ringing in the ears and often a headache. Have no appetite, am nervous, sleep poorly and feel generally run down. Please advise."

Answer: Use Vilane Powder as per directions. Also take one to two capsules of Nyal Resinol Salve to nostrils and go through several times daily and quick results should ensue.

Mrs. F. S. asks: "My three children have had measles. Does whooping cough

ADVISES SALESMEN TO STUDY SERMONS

Business Man Says Ministers Make Good Job of Selling Religion.

Most ministers preach "canned sermons" that are nothing more than good sales talks with the object of selling religion to their congregation, in the opinion of C. W. Bishop, president of the Bishop-Wyatt Co. here.

He made the observation with no intent to cast aspersions on dealers in canned goods, during a talk to the Salesmanagers' Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce Friday. Rather, Bishop showed plainly that he admired "canned sermons," and believed silk salesmen might study methods of certain modern preachers.

"Take one of the highest-priced ministers—the highest-priced religious salesman in St. Louis, who, I understand, is paid something like $20,000 a year," Bishop illustrated.

"I know he uses a canned sales talk. I have seen him turn over the leaves of the 'cans' and show them under his Bible time and time again. Does he make it pay? All I ask is that you avail yourself of the privilege of hearing this master salesman talk. If you pass up the collection plate, I know you'll feel like 30 cents, and I'll refund the 30 cents if you don't buy.

"I suppose one of the hardest jobs on earth is the job of selling religion. But there are 104 million people on the North American continent who are buying religion. If they pay the pitiful sum of $1 apiece, they are spending over a hundred million dollars for it a year."

Bishop's idea is for every salesman to memorize a standard sales argument and reel it off before the subject recovers.

FIVE YOUTHS WHO STOLE AUTOS GET FOUR MONTHS

Federal Judge Davis Sentences Young Kentuckians for Violating Dyer Act.

Five youths who chose Christmas day to steal an automobile in their home town, Russell, Ky., and launch upon a career of crime, faced Judge Davis in the Federal Court yesterday and were sentenced to serve four months each in the county jail at Union, Mo. They pleaded guilty to violation of the Dyer act in stealing and transporting an automobile across a state border.

In sentencing the youths, Judge Davis said he took into consideration the time they have spent in the St. Louis city jail, since their arrest here Dec. 31. Their attorney, in a plea for lienency, contended his clients were of good parentage and record. A Government investigator substantiated the declaration.

The boys sentenced are Charles Bowling, 20 years old; Sheldon Johnson, 16; Ralph Thompson, 19; Norman Higgins, 19, and Clyde Nichols, 18. They admitted stealing and abandoning three other automobiles on their "joy ride" to St. Louis.

By Dr. Lewis Baker

An Advertisement Telling How and When to Use Trustworthy Products and Reproducing Extracts of Patrons' Letters Relating to Cadomene, Balmwort, Sulpherb, Arbolone, Su-thol, Mentho-Laxene, Minyol, Hypo-Nuclane, Vilane, Etc.

Mrs. S. K. L. asks: "Is there anything for backache, pains, like rheumatism soreness in bladder region. Am all tired out, can't sleep, restless, nervous and blood in poor condition."

Ans.: Obtain Balmwort tablets. Take as per directions to improve kidney function and relieve acid condition and bladder irritation. Also take Cadomene tablets to enrich starchy blood and steady the nerves and you should soon feel like a new being.

Mrs. E. C. W. asks: "I am troubled with poor circulation, causing cramps in feet and limbs—very annoying. Indigestion, poor appetite and am unable to walk chill with least exposure. Also nervous and don't sleep good. What may help me?"

Answer: There being no organic trouble, the condition should quickly be overcome by the use of Cadomene tablets, which improve appetite, aid digestion and tend to thoroughly enrich the blood and strengthen the nerves and functions of the bodily organs generally.

Mrs. K. M. asks: "Would it be possible to reduce about 60 pounds? Do Arbolone tablets have to be taken continuously after reducing? Where can I obtain?"

Answer: Each case varies. Some have reduced harmlessly more than 60 pounds. After reduction, it is not necessary to continue taking Arbolone. Where local druggists do not supply, you can order anything from Moore's Pharmacy, Fifth and Western Ave., Dayton, Ohio.

Answer to E. D. N.: For itching skin, like diet, use less coffee. Apply Mentho-Laxene Salve lightly. Internally, to increase kidney-bowel elimination, take Sulpherb tablets (not sulphur tablets).

"Dixie" asks: "I have taken—iron pellets to gain weight—but no success. I want to gain about 15 pounds. Please advise."

Answer: Make it a habit to breathe deeply each day and take Hypo-Nuclane tablets with your meals as a nutritional blood and flesh builder for several months.

Mrs. H. S. asks: "Am troubled with nasal catarrh, causing hoarse voice and often headache and the usual disagreeable stuffy sensation instead of free breathing. Please advise."

Answer: Use Vilane Powder as per directions on label as a nasal douche or spray. Also apply triple strength Mentho-Laxene Salve in nostrils and on forehead several times daily and quick relief should ensue.

Mrs. O. B. asks: "My three children have had measles, then whooping cough, followed by frequent colds and constant strangling night-coughing that almost wears all of us out. What will help them?"

Answer: Since you have tried "everything" in prepared cough syrups, I suggest you obtain the pure essence Mentho-Laxene, mix with sugar syrup into a pint and you will have the purest, best medicine for your children that money can buy. It is quick acting, costs little and contains no opiates, narcotics or chloroform to upset the little stomachs.

Answer to M. B. C.: Yellow Minyol never stains the hair. It is made with fresh eggs which give it the yellow color. For dandruff, oily hair and itching scalp it has no superior for quick, permanent results.

Answer to "Are Sixty": If you want a mild but generous laxative that costs little and aids without harming the bowels, get Casca Royal Pills of druggist.

NOTE: For many years Dr. Lewis Baker, 312 College Bldg., Dayton, O., has been recommending trustworthy medicines to millions of readers through the medium of the newspapers, and doubtless has helped in relieving the ailments and minor infirmities of the public more than any single individual in the world's history; and by an inexpensive method.

Thousands have written him expressions similar to the following.

LETTERS TO DR. BAKER

M. T. Reynolds, 4441 N. Gratz st., Philadelphia, Pa., writes: "I am a Police Officer in Philadelphia. My three children had measles and had a very bad cough with them, so I tried several remedies for it and none of them helped. I also got medicine from my doctor, but it did them no good. I saw an advertisement of your Essence Mentho-Laxene and bought a bottle. After taking is a couple of days their coughs disappeared entirely, and I want to say for coughs and colds there is nothing to beat it. You can use my name any time to praise Mentho-Laxene."

Mrs. H. Eastern, 2212 East St., Pittsburg, Pa., writes: "Have had a severe cold for weeks—severe pains in my side as well as pains in my head. After many other medicines failed to relieve, Mentho-Laxene was recommended by a neighbor. I immediately purchased a bottle of the pure essence. After taking only a few doses, I obtained immediate relief and soon all cold, pains and cough inflammation were driven out of my system. It is the best medicine I've ever taken for bad coughs and colds. Very truly yours."

Mrs. M. T. Gutlevics, 48 Rand st., Buffalo, writes: "Just a few lines to thank your for the benefits procured through using Yellow Minyol. I had a very bad case of dandruff and used it with the greatest success. Have only used five applications and am no longer bothered with dandruff but will use occasionally and recommend to all my friends."

Miss Beatrice R. Needleman, 146 Franklin st., Portland, Me., writes: "A friend recommended Sulpherb tablets. I find them wonderful for clearing the skin —also a wonderful laxative to overcome stomach trouble. I am over all my ailments since taking Sulpherb 3 times daily, etc."

• • •

Mr. W. Sipple, 131 Gale st., Olney, Philadelphia, Pa., writes: "My age is 71. I have had a bladder trouble for years. Your Balmwort tablets is the only thing that I have ever found that reaches the spot. My case was a bad one. My sleep was disturbed five or six times during the night and there was a lack of control during the day. I am glad to recommend Balmwort tablets, etc."

• • •

Mrs. Wm. R. Sanderson, 310 E. Kansas st., Texarkana, Kan., writes: "I am writing a few lines to thank you for the great relief Cadomene Tablets have given me. I had a weak, nervous, run-down condition. I could hardly do my housework since baby came three months ago. I took two boxes of your medicine and I am a new woman—also feel fine and recommend Cadomene to my friends. Etc."

• • •

Mrs. O. P. Monroe, Plattsmouth, Neb., writes: "Find enclosed coupon for your free Health and Beauty book. I have been using your Arbolone tablets for excessive fat and I find them very satisfactory. Perhaps I may find some other health hints in your book. Etc."

Florence VonDey, 4814 Hammel street, Los Angeles, Cal., writes: "Several years ago I collapsed—exhaustion. Also had stripes. Dr. B—— of Cincinnati, O., suggested that I try Hypo-Nuclane tablets as I was so thin and weak. I tried several remedies but could not eat well. After a few bites, I felt so miserable, I began to think I would die. In less than a week this was overcome. After taking three boxes was my old self again."

• • •

Mrs. John Lienhard, 528 Franklin ave., Palmerton, Pa., writes: "I have just finished one-half box Balmwort and have found great relief. About nine years ago I was very thin. I learned of Hypo-Nuclane. I used them just three months, then I stopped. I gained in weight during that time 60 pounds. I have retained that weight steadily ever since without using any more tablets. Your various medicines have become family medicines to us. Etc."

EMPLOYERS UNITE TO DECIDE ON WAGE INCREASES

One of First Acts Is to Deliver Ultimatum to Hod Carriers on New Offer.

Eighty per cent of the employers of building craftsmen here have organized so that "demoralizing wage increases be stopped, a buyers' strike avoided and the building industry of St. Louis stabilized," it was disclosed yesterday following a meeting of the employers.

Delivery of an "ultimatum" to the International Hodcarriers', Building and Common Laobrers' District Council, was one of the first acts of the organization, known as the "Associated Building Interests of St. Louis."

The District Council has demanded a 20-cent hourly wage increase. The employers have offered a 10-cent hourly increase. If the offer is not accepted by noon tomorrow it will be withdrawn and work carried on by other labor, under the "ultimatum." The laborers previously had decided to "stand pat" on their 20-cent demand.

The employers' organization is the most extensive attempt ever made here to group employers of building craftsmen into one body. In the "ultimatum" the employers declare they are "reserving the right to determine what wages they can afford to pay in fairness to all concerned."

Officers Are Named.

Officers of the organization are: Josh Lowis Jr., president; William C. Mieher, first vice president; J. M. Bixler Jr., second vice president; Earl V. Powers, secretary; D. J. Collins, treasurer, and R. L. Murphy, executive secretary. There are 355 members, estimated as employing 13,000 of the 16,000 building craftsmen in St. Louis.

The "teeth" of the organization is a group council made up of three representatives of the employers of each of the 13 crafts in the body. This governing body is empowered to enforce rules, regulations, prohibitions, or edicts not conflicting with the constitution or bylaws.

The constitution and bylaws were accepted and signed by the presidents of the following employers' groups: Master Builders' Association; Master Plumbers' Association; Master House Painters' and Decorators' Association; Master Insulators' Association; Cement Contractors' Association; Electrical Employers' Association; Contracting Plasterers' Association, and St. Louis Sheet Metal Contractors.

Two other important employers' groups are expected to join the organization this month. An advisory council is provided for, to be made up of representatives of the American Institute of Architects; the Association of Engineers; the Society of American Bankers, and the Associated Real Estate Exchange.

Two Agreements Made.

A number of contractors not associated with the new body have expressed their intention to cooperate.

The new organization has reached agreements with two crafts here, the Iron Workers and the Cement Finishers. These crafts are said to have faithfully lived up to the letter of their old agreements and were granted increases.

The next craft whose demands must be considered are the painters. Their agreement with employers expires March 15. Painters' demands include a "five-day" week and were characterized at yesterday's meeting as "ridiculous." In substantiation of their characterization of the demands, employers cite the following working conditions asked:

"A job steward shall be selected from among the men in each shop or on each job and shall not be shifted from the job until the full completion of the work thereon."

Outline of Demands.

Employers interpret this to mean that a painter must be kept on every construction project whether there is any painting to be done or not. Another working condition which employers termed ridiculous is "Where drop cloths, rags or rubber gloves are used, they shall be furnished to the workmen in a sanitary condition. No member of the union shall be discharged for refusing to work with unsanitary rags or drop cloths." With reference to work outside the city limits under the present demands members of the union could not leave the city limits before 7:45 a. m. These demands were declared by employers as being "not worth considering."

Members of the new organization point out that their dealings with demands here are being watched by employers' groups in other cities. The organization received a telegram yesterday from the Chicago employers' group urging a $1.25 hourly scale for skilled workers and stating "that to concede to excessive demands is to jeopardize conditions elsewhere."

How I Increased My Weight and Energy after Pneumonia

Gained 15 Pounds in Less Than Three Weeks' Time

"A severe attack of pneumonia pulled me down to the very bottom. When I got up my eyes were so sunken, my cheeks so hollow and my whole body so weakened, that my children acted afraid to be near me. I must have looked like the very ghost of my former self. Need of money for the family support made me feel that I must get back to work quickly, and despite my condition, back to work I went.

"Now after several weeks I look and feel far better than before I was sick—I have put on over 15 pounds of firm, solid flesh—I have a healthy color and I get up in the morning full of pep and energy. I attribute this amazing return to health chiefly to the fact that I took, with every meal, two of MASTIN'S VITAMON TABLETS. Their quick up-building effect is truly remarkable."

This letter from a New York man clearly shows of what tremendous value are those muscle, bone and blood-building elements contained in concentrated form in MASTIN'S VITAMON TABLETS.

If you have lost weight and energy through sickness, worry or overwork, if you are nervous, haggard and drawn looking, you owe it to yourself to make this simple test. First, weigh yourself and measure yourself. Next take MASTIN'S VITAMON—two tablets with each meal. Then weigh and measure yourself again each week and continue taking MASTIN'S VITAMON TABLETS until you are satisfied with your gain in weight, "pep," energy and improved appearance.

You need one MASTIN'S to get the original and genuine VITAMON, the world's standard—recommended by physicians and now used by millions. Beware of imitations, substitutes or so-called "just as good" tablets."

MASTIN'S VITAMON TABLETS are fully guaranteed in every respect. At all good druggists, such as Owens Drug Co., Johnson Bros., Jaeger & Dolph Drug Stores, Wolff-Wilson Drug Co.

A NEW song-and-dance show, "Little Nellie Kelly," with words and music by George M. Cohan, and a return engagement of the melodious Al Jolson in "Bombo," are the theatrical announcements for the week. Both open tonight, the former at the American and the latter at the Gilbert-Jefferson.

The George Choos six-scene extravaganza, "Fables of 1924," is the featured act, at the Orpheum. The Woodward Players, at the Empress, are repeating "Peg o' My Heart," which they gave last season.

"Little Nellie Kelly" is expected to demonstrate the usual Cohanesque qualities of dizzy pace, quantitative dancing, love interest and humor. In the cast are Norma Terris, Marion Fairbanks, of the twins; Carolyn Lilja, Flora Cooble, Kathryn Nelson, Jean Palmer, Arthur Cunningham and several others.

Jolson, believed to be the most lucrative box office attraction on the American stage, has been playing for some years in "Bombo," a Winter Garden revue, which is supposed to center about the discovery of America by Columbus. When seen here in January, 1922, it was found that the show, with all its 14 spectacular scenes, was mostly "all Jolson." New features and scenery are promised. Among the big cast are noted Franklyn A. Batie, Forrest Huff, Fritzi von Busing, Janet Adair, Vera Kingston, Arline Gardiner, Harry Turpin, Harold Crane, Frank Holmes, Frank Bernard, Florence Gast, the Wainwright sisters, and Harry Sievers.

Ganz Re-engaged for Three-Year Period.

WITH the approaching close of Rudolph Ganz's third season as director of the Symphony Orchestra, it is announced that he has been engaged for a second three-year term, extending to the season of 1926-27. After defeating several contestants in a series of trial performances, after the death of Max Zach, Ganz was chosen as his successor for the period 1921-24.

The directors believe, they say, that during this time he has revealed qualities which promise to develop into those of a first-rate conductor. According to his custom, he will spend the summer in Europe, gathering new music for the orchestra's library and undertaking improvements in its personnel.

Final Regular Concerts.

FOR the season's concluding pair of concerts, on Thursday evening and Friday afternoon, he will present a Wagner-Tschaikowsky program. Joseph Schwartz, highly lauded baritone of the Chicago Civic Opera Company, will make his first St. Louis appearance as soloist at these concerts, at each of which he is to sing twice. The program follows:

1. Overture to "Rienzi".....Wagner

"The Virginian," "Hoosier Schoolmaster" and "The Fool's Awakening" Also Among Local Film Offerings.

GEORGE BEBAN, famous character actor, comes to the Grand Central Theater this week with a company of 24 people in "The Greatest Love of All," which is a novelty screen and stage production handled similarly to "The Sign of the Rose." St. Louis will be the second city to view it.

The story is told on the screen for six reels and then the film fades into an exact replica of the picture courtroom setting on the stage. Every person on the stage is the same as was seen a moment before on the screen. In order to get this perfection Beban carries 12 jurymen from city to city, although they do not have a line to speak in the act.

"The Sign of the Rose" was pathetic in the main, but "The Greatest Love of All" is pure comedy built up upon Beban's Italian dialect. In the courtroom scene enacted by the company on the stage it is all laughs until the actor makes a heart-breaking appeal for his mother, who is being tried for larceny.

Beban will appear in person five times today, but only three times daily during the remainder of the week.

Owen Wister's novel and play of the West, "The Virginian," goes on at the West End Lyric and Capitol Theaters for the entire week. It comes here with the reputation of having broken records in many cities and for that reason will be played the entire week at the West End Lyric, contrary to that theater's usual policy, which calls for a change on Wednesday. Kenneth Harlan is featured in the title role, while Florence Vidor, Russell Simpson, Raymond Hatton and Pat O'Malley share the supporting honors.

"The Virginian" is a square-shooter who is forced to hang his best friend and who apparently loses his sweetheart when the code of the West forces him to defend himself in a duel. The girl breaks off their engagement when he announces his intention of fighting his enemy. She brands him as a murderer and passionately opposes the duel. He is forced to fight, however, and in the end her great joy over his safe return makes her forget the branch of conventionality.

Hero of "Fata Morgana" European Willie Baxter

By HEYWOOD BROUN,
Drama Critic of the New York World.

NEW YORK, March 8.

FOR a long time we have been aching for a play about adolescence which should travel a road between "Seventeen" and "The Awakening of Spring." We need ache no longer. Monday night at the Garrick the Theater Guild presented "Fata Morgana." It is such a play.

Decidedly sex is not left out, and yet it is treated as something a little less starkly tragic than in the German dramas, in which the young folks all die or commit suicide on account of it. To be sure, "Fata Morgana" is poignantly and completely tragic as far as the central figure is concerned. The reservations are largely implicit. Even when the playwright makes a little fun of the intense seriousness of the 18-year-old boy he does it with infinite tenderness.

There is a warmth of affection between creator and created in "Fata Morgana" which gives this deeply ironic comedy a sunset glow. It is a play in which the author understands his chief character better than any one else in the play. He understands him far better than the audience, which showed a distressing tendency to laugh at the wrong places. And there was no excuse for that, since there were ample opportunities for free, prolonged and wholly suitable laughter throughout the evening.

Playwright a Hungarian.

FORTUNATELY, the young actor who plays George understands the boy just as thoroughly as does Ernest Vajda, the Hungarian author of the play. Morgan Farley, who has never seemed to us more than a rather too broadly comic juvenile, gives a performance to tear your heart out. He underlines nothing. He elaborates nothing. There is no scamping and no waste. This piece of author is just a shade too militantly moral. It seems to us that no enduring harm has come to the young man. His tragedy can hardly endure a year, six months, in fact, beyond the final curtain.

Tenderness of a Cynic.

Quite evidently Vajda is a sophisticated person. Only a sophisticated person can write intelligently and emotionally of disillusion. That is the theme of the play. George be-

Amateur Grand Opera.

THE St. Louis Grand Opera Co., with local principals, a chorus of 60 St. Louisans, a ballet of 20, and 25 members of the Symphony Orchestra, begins a brief season at the Odeon Tuesday night with a performance of Rossini's "Il Barbiere di Siviglia." Among other St. Louisans with prominent roles are M. A. Rossini, who is artistic director of the productions; F. Buccola, A. Colina, B. P. Shibert, M. Elkings S. Pucci and J. Glenn Lee. Frederick Fischer will direct the performances, for which rehearsals have been under way for several months.

The Bohemian dramatic soprano, who succeeded Geraldine Farrar at the Metropolitan, will make her St. Louis debut at this recital. Since the close of her season of opera in New York she has been giving concerts in various cities, to a chorus of praise. Her program here will be as follows:

HERO OF "FATA MORGASIA," EUROPEAN WILLIE BAKTER

lieves that the woman has given herself to him for love. He finds that it was no more than a fitful, passionate prank. He watches her in agony at the end when she goes back to the city with her husband. She meant none of the things she said, or, rather, she meant them only at the time. Indeed, she feels that he ought to have known that such vows and promises are never kept. He didn't know.

The mood throughout is curious and appealing. To many the first act seemed no more than an exceedingly deft and clever risque story. Actually it is a good deal more than that. It is almost as if a traveling man had told a tale to Anatole France, who later repeated the same anecdote in his own fashion. True tenderness is found only among the cynics. All things which are worth crying about must be related by someone who smiles.

William Ingersoll and Josephine Hull gave beautiful performances as the father and mother of the boy. Helen Westley was mightily amusing. The production was staged by Philip Moeller, who has done a first-class job.

In another week the engagement of "Antony and Cleopatra" will come to and end at the Lyceum, and Miss Cowl will make a spring tour with the production. . . Mrs. Fiske's new play is entitled "The Boys," and it was adapted from a short story by Mary Brecht Pulver. . . Fritz Leiber has begun rehearsals in a play called "Two Strangers From Nowhere," by Myron C. Fagan.

"Masse Mensch," written by Ernst Toller and translated by Louis Untermeyer, will be presented by the Treater Guild during April. Lee Simonson will design the settings and direct the production. Toller, one of the leaders of the short-lived communist uprising in Munich five years ago, is serving the last year of his sentence in the fortress of Niederschonenfeld. He wrote "Masse Mensch" in prison, and its production, in Berlin, during 1921, created international interest. The play is called "a fragment of the social revolution of the twentieth century."

George Arliss recently completed his 200th London performance of "The Green Goddess," making 1605 times in all that he has appeared in the Archer melodrama. . . . "Laugh, Clown, Laugh," with Lionel Barrymore, has but two weeks more at the Belasco, and will then tour until June 1.

Metropolitan "Pals"

INTIMATE friends at the Metropolitan Opera House are Mme. Maria Jeritza, distinguished Bohemian soprano, who gives her first St. Louis recital at the Odeon on March 18, and Miss Marion Telva, contralto, formerly of this city, who has frequent appearances at the Metropolitan. They have often been photographed together, as in the above picture. Mme. Jeritza has volunteered to assist Miss Telva in a continental career.

"GREATEST LOVE OF ALL," "SINGER JIM McKEE" AND "LUCK" ON VIEW

Paramount picture, "Singer Jim McKee," and Harry Langdon, a new comedy star, in "Smile, Please," is the screen presentation.

Hart's picture was made in the Sierras of California and Nevada. There is real night photography, the first ever accomplished in motion pictures without artificial light. These scenes were made with specially constructed lenses and highly sensitized negative film.

Supporting Hart in the picture are Phyllis Haver, Ruth Miller, Edward Coxen and George Siegmann.

Barney Rapp and his orchestra are again presented at the Missouri after an absence from St. Louis of more than six months. Sascha Jacobsen will again play an ensemble of popular and classical numbers.

William J. Locke's well-known story, "The Tale of Triona," which in movie drama form is known as "The Fool's Awakening," is the feature at the Delmonte Theater this week. In the cast are Harrison Ford, Mary Alden, Alec Francis and Enid Bennett among others. The scenes of the play are laid in England and Russia and some of the photography was actually done in the latter country. The story is that of a poor young Englishman who tires of his humdrum life and builds up for himself a fictitious past which attracts great attention and brings him unlooked-for fame. He writes a book about his supposed life and in the height of his glory marries a beautiful girl. Then the crash comes and his deception is exposed, with the result that his wife leaves him. Six reels later they are, of course, brought together again after some thrilling adventures which about equal the make-believe life of the young Englishman. Harrison Ford plays the young man and Enid Bennett is the wife.

Dorothy Bush, a former Mack Sennett star, and nine other girls also are on the Delmonte bill, appearing in person with a jazz band.

The Fox Liberty announces a change in policy. Starting today two shows a week will be given instead of the usual one. "Luck" with Johnny Hines as the star, will run today, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Shirley Mason in "Love Letters" is the feature for Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

"Luck" is a story of a wealthy young man who resents being called "useless" to the world. He undertakes—upon a wager—to acquire $10,000 in one year, and to start with racing togs as his only clothes, plus and old raincoat.

"The Hoosier Schoolmaster," founded on Edward Eggleston's once widely known story of the lives, customs and manners of the Hoosiers in Indiana before the Civil War, is the attraction at the Kings Theater. This is said to depict the lives of our ancestors during the days of pipe-smoking women, "spelling bees," soft-soap making, hound dogs, log cabins and homespun jeans much as "The Covered Wagon" portrays the period prior to 1849. Henry Hall and Jane Thomas have the leading roles.

Added features are a singing and dancing number, "A 1920 School Room," by St. Louis children under the direction of Lottie Forbes, and a comedy, "Monks a la Mode."

"Cytherea," which George Fitzmaurice will produce for Samuel Goldwyn.

Jackie Coogan's current picture, "A Boy in Flanders," is in the editing stage.

Viola Dana's next picture will be an adaptation of the successful stage play, "Along Came Ruth."

Ethel Clayton, former Paramount star, now has her own organization, Ethel Clayton Productions.

Bobby Vernon's mother, Dorothy Vernon, is a portrayer of character parts in screenland.

Creighton Hale, who recently has scored several screen successes, has joined Universal.

Florence Vidor's next appearance on the screen will be in Vitagraph's "Borrowed Husbands."

INNOVATIONS IN PLANS FOR JEWISH HOSPITAL

Construction of Building to Be According to Most Modern Standards.

Many recent innovations in hospital construction will be incorporated in the new Jewish Hospital, for which, it has been announced, ground will be broken at Kingshighway and Forest Park boulevard in April. A campaign to raise the $750,000 needed to complete the $2,000,000 building fund is to be conducted the week of March 17.

Every room in the hospital will be an outside room, an "H"-shaped floor plan making this possible. In addition, there will be spacious verandas for all of the wards, while half of the private and the two-bed rooms will have verandas overlooking Forest Park, to give the patients the benefits of stays in the open air. Very few hospitals are said to make such provision for their private rooms.

The children's wards, with 25 beds, will occupy the entire fourth floor of the south division of the hospital, with a loggia on the south side giving ample room for outdoor play or lounging. In the ward the beds will be separated by glass.

Special "Husbands'" Room.

The obstetric department, with 25 beds, will have the latest facilities. A large nursery, to which only nurses will be admitted, will be one of the features. One wall of this room will be of glass, so visitors passing down the corridor may see the infants. A special "husbands'" room, where anxious fathers may wait, will be another feature.

Special efforts have been made to provide for persons of moderate means, unable to afford private rooms yet not wishing to lie in one of the general wards. For them, 22 large and airy rooms, each with two beds only, will be provided.

The medical and surgical divisions of the ward service will be on separate floors, and each division will be divided, one part for men and one for women. The wards will be so arranged that from the head nurse's station every patient may be observed.

Everything on Model Basis.

A complete receiving department of 12 beds, virtually a separate hospital in itself, will receive new patients so they may be placed under observation before being assigned to the department to which their condition indicates they belong.

A small isolation hospital of three beds will be maintained on the second floor, well away from all other patients.

The operating suite, which will occupy the entire fourth floor of the north wing, will comprise six operating rooms, two anesthetic rooms, sterilizing rooms, nurse's rooms and rooms for visiting surgeons and physicians. Visitors at operations will be separated by an arm-high glass partition from the working surgeons and nurses, thus avoiding any possibility of contact, yet permitting a clear view of operations.

The X-ray department, equipped according to the latest model standards, will be on the second floor, as will be the electrocardiograph, the gastrological, orthopedic, respiration, laryngogical and dental laboratories. The examining rooms will be on that floor, as also the thermo-therapy divisions.

ART IS LONG

(Copyright, 1924.)

Drawn by W. E. Hill
For the Sunday Post-Dispatch

What is known as a "private view," showing the invited elect at the opening of a modern exhibition.

"Now, there's one ought to be called 'Yes, We Have No Pajamas.'" Three lay minds are having a beautiful time being comic.

Zealous art student getting at the bottom of things.

"You must drop in for tea, and we'll have a nice long talk about your work." The shy artist and the large lady with the carnivorous gleam in her eye meet for the first time but not the last time.

The thinner the artist, the fatter are the nudes he paints. If you doubt it, look first at Mr. Skibo, and then at his latest masterpiece. "Patty cake, patty cake, baker's man."

"Well, all I can say is, 'Would you like to have that child for a daughter?'"

:: In Studio and Gallery ::

TEN years ago, when Grace and Williamina Parrish were studying in Italy, Nino Ronchi, the young Italian artist at whose parental home they stayed, was 18 years old, brimming with energy and ideals and frightening his father, a famous academic painter of note, by the extraordinary predilection for the radical manner of interpretation for which he has since become recognized.

The intervening years, containing the disillusionments of maturity, yet the discovery of new values, grim experiences in the World War, yet broadened human sympathies, have tested the strength and sincerity of the young artist's early convictions. His original belief in rhythm as the vital element in the cosmic scheme and of organic life has never wavered, but has strengthened as his own development has progressed.

Working always introspectively, his own phychological entity affording him a constant source of interest, Nino Ronchi chooses subject material and treatment that appeal to mind the point emphasized in the following excerpt from Ivan Narodny's essay on "Rhythm."

"The rhythmic peculiarity of the pulse beats of one individual is different from another's, as is his walking, talk, gestures, thinking and emotional expressions. We may say that every individual has a specific rhythms, which at the same shape his character. A sum of the various physiological and psychological rhythms constitutes the personality of a man. In proportion to his physical rhythms develop the spiritual; in other words, those subjective qualities which we term as emotions, intellect, etc., which finally give birth to our likes and dislikes. What we dislike is usually something that harmonizes with our individual rhythm and what we dislike is a rhythmic disharmony between our ego and the perceived sensation. The law of rhythmic relativity constitutes at the end our individual taste of beauty. We call something beautiful that is physiologically and psychologically related to our individual rhythm. A picture is beautiful when its optical rhythmic vibrations coincide with our individual soul-rhythms. In the same way we call a composition, a song or play beautiful when its phonetic rhythms relate to something alive in our inner selves. Beauty is the spiritual focus brought about by reciprocity of the objective and the subjective rhythms."

THE three large paintings which occupy the back wall of the exhibition gallery at the Artists' Guild vary widely in subject, although they are similar in technical manner.

"Toward Divinity," the central canvas, seems inspired by some solemn and beautiful processional hymn whose ascending musical measures form the plan for this painting's composition. The arrangement is a succession of rising mountain crags that finally fade from sight in the light to which they aspire. Along the rising precipices, silent forms are seen . . . forms that resemble now trees, now cloaked figures. The physical configuration matters nothing: it is the procession of souls through the ages struggling upward toward the ideal.

"The Castle of rDeams" and "Prometheus," the most recent pictures in the collection, these having been painted since the artist's arrival in St. Louis, complete the group that first greets the eye of the spectator upon entering the gallery. "The Castle of Dreams" is a cool swirl of vague longings. In complete solitude the soul feels high desires that sweep away into the distance where always "the desirable" lies. The blue-green tones of the picture somehow suggest the sea. Perhaps this is the story of one who would ride the crest of the wave, hoping sometime to find a splendor sustained, yet doomed to the disappointment that all waves are alike. * * * at their height for only the moment before they flatten and roll again into the ocean's dark and heavy depths.

In "Prometheus" we find a new treatment of the old myth. Like a geometric carnival—circles and curves fly rampant, striking one another and glancing off in varying directions, but all with an amazingly well-calculated effect In the vivid red of the sky is shown the anguish of the punished God who, chained to the mountain top on the right, struggles in the ghastly torment that is his doom. Great cycles to the left suggest the beating wings of the cultures that wheel down upon their prey.

TO understand "The Pathway of Youth," the small painting over the mantle in the front gallery of the guild, a diagram is almost necessary. Persons sufficiently curious will find on the back of the painting the remains of the artist's explanation to us when we confessed our bewilderment. Meanwhile, the best way of supplying a key to the problem is to suggest the whole picture of which this painting is but one-fourth. Imagine an upright landscape painting four times as large as this, whose composition consists of two tall poplar trees in the left foreground, with a young tree growing between the two older ones. Divide such a composition into quarters, and in the lower left rectangle is found the motif of Mr. Ronchi's Pathway of Youth." The young tree, now so carefully protected by the strong parent trees, is reaching steadily upward and will some day thrust aside the old branches that obstruct its pathway toward a greater height.

An eloquent version of that mysterious period, the dawn between childhood and maturity, is Nino Ronchi's reflection, 'Adolescence." As a symbol of youth's lovely helplessness against conflicting urges, the boy's head appears immobile, wholly powerless against the besieging forces. On one side we see the cold blue of ice; on the other is the flaming red of fire. The cold blue swirls in frigid cycles, while the flaming red leaps upward in gungry little tongues. The consuming sensations, the agonies and the delights, are contrasted in the reds and blues. The youth's head is thown back, his eyes closed in the anaesthesa, from which he will awaken to find the flame victorious.

THE Afternoon of a Faun" is another instance of this artist's examination of his own reactions. Here he watches the effect of Debussy's music upon his sensibilities.

The picture begins in the lower left corner and progresses upward, across and downward through the motifs of (1) the earth in chaotic formation, (2) the forest home of the faun, (3) the faun's dream and (4) the final peace. Since musical rhythms are as diversified as color rhythms in their appeal to varying human receptivities, Debussy's "Afternoon of a Faun" probably appeals to no two persons in exactly the same manner. Consequently, Ronchi's interpretation of the music as he feels it may appeal to some, while it may seem entirely foreign to others.

From the country of gondolas and picturesque water craft, it is not surprising that Nino Ronchi imbues the ships he paints with a charming personality and a sort of soul. In "Awaiting the Benediction of the Sun" his ships have the attitude of devout spirits acknowledging the Master. As though carrying the water's reflections, the sails rise upward in wide sweeps of light and point their tips high toward the sun. The atmosphere is peaceful and patient, the colors warm and serene.

As delicately and elusively beautiful as a batik is "The Shadow on the Wall," a water-color floral arrangement. Its colors are brown and purple, interesting problems in combinations of red, yellow and blue. The manner of gaining the effect of a moving shadow is peculiar. The first painting, done on a wet surface, was allowed to remain for a moment and then wiped off. Only a faint suggestion of the lines was left on the paper. Again water was washed over the surface; this time the identical tones were applied in spots for emphasis and the whole was allowed to dry. The result is an effect of motion. The composition is very nice and the study decorative.

Ronchi has the unusual ability of handling various mediums equally well. Some of his pictures are painted in oil, some in water color, others in tempera and still others are drawn with pencil.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, March 8.—A man who never used the telephone" has been discovered in Paris. He is Alfred Vallette, editor of the Mercure de France, a "high brow" publication, but one of the most important magazines in France. The big publishing house, a "house without a telephone," is in a quiet street. Business is transacted almost entirely by mail. Callers as a rule are given appointments "some other day, so that they have time to cool off to present their well-digested ideas," as Vallette says.

Vallette himself, in a published letter, boasts that he never talked over the telephone, remarking: "I admire it at least as much as its inventor, who, it is said, never would have one in his house." A recent visitor to the office observed that gas is still used for lighting. Roman numerals designate the months in its correspondence, and ink is dried with powdered sand.

MAIL CARRIER TO RETIRE AFTER 44 YEARS IN SERVICE

Thomas Finan to Reach Age Limit of 65 March 22—Will Get $60 a Month Pension.

Thomas Finan has worn the mail carrier's uniform for 44 years, but when he finishes the day at Merchants branch postoffice March 22, he must take it off for good. It will be his sixty-fifth birthday and the postoffice rules are strict—a mail carrier must be automatically retired at 65.

"I started carrying mail when I was 21," Finan said, "and I haven't missed a day because of a sickness since that time. I have been carrying mail from this office for 35 years and if they would let me, I could carry it a good many more."

Finan is a bachelor and lives with his brother, Pat, and a cousin, Mrs. Mary Burke, at 2610 Alhambra court. He will not quit work. A number of friends have offered him employment, but he has not decided yet just what he will do. He will receive the maximum pension, $60 a month, because of his long service.

NEAR EAST RELIEF DIRECTOR

Carl S. Van Winkle Assumes Eastern Missouri Post.

Carl S. Van Winkle of New York has become acting director of the Near East Relief in Eastern Missouri, replacing Dr. M. Edwin Johnson, who resigned, effective March 1. The new director has been affiliated with the Near East Relief since October, and has been engaged in organization work in Canada and Maine. He is an ordained minister of the Disciples Church, and for two years was secretary-treasurer of the Disciples' Board of Education. He was for several years connected with the Interchurch World Movement.

Headquarters of the Eastern Missouri district are at 1104 Chemical Building.

AIRSHIP EXPERIMENT PLANNED

British to See How Long Passenger Liner Will Float.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, March 8.—Just to see what would happen if a big passenger air liner was forced to a alight in the English channel, the Air Ministry will shortly carry out an interesting experiment with one of the older planes. This airplane is being put in flying condition and will be taken out with a weight equivalent to 8 passengers and their baggage. Then the Air Ministry's pilot will "put it down" in the sea off Felixstone, to test how it behaves when alighting on the water, how it floats, for how long, and the effect of a rough sea on the machine.

So far only one British commercial airplane has fallen in the Channel. That was four years ago, and the machine floated undamaged for a long time, but finally had to be sunk.

May Bar Horses From Streets.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, March 8.—The London county council is considering issuing a warning that in five years no horses will be allowed on the streets because they slow up motor traffic and are a cause of street congestion. Only farmers with their prdouce would be permitted to drive horses through the congested districts and this during the early hours before the heavy traffic starts. There is much more horse-drawn traffic in London than in New York.

Conservation Services.

Ceremonies relative to the consecration of Father Joseph A. Murphy of St. Louis University as Bishop of Honduras, will be held at St. Francis Xavier's Church at 9 a. m. on March 19. Archbishop Glennon will preside. Bishop Chartrand of Indianapolis and Bishop Schuler of El Paso, Tex., will assist Archbishop Glennon. Bishop Schuler is the only Jesuit Bishop in the country.

ROOSEVELTS CARRY LITTLE BAGGAGE ON LONG TRIP

Widow of Former President and Her Son Have Only Three Suitcases and a Vacuum Bottle.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, March 8.—Women who travel with a retinue of servants and enough baggage to meet the requirements of a grand opera star would have been greatly surprised if they could have seen Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, wife of the former President of the United States, when she arrived in Central Europe after having completed a tour of Japan and China and made the railway trip from Harbin, Manchuria, to Berlin by way of Moscow, Petrograd, Reval, Riga and Kovno.

Mrs. Roosevelt and her son, Kermit, had with them three suitcases and a vacuum bottle. Strikes of baggage handlers would have made little difference with them as they could have carried their own luggage into their compartments aboard trains. The Roosevelts were enthusiastic over the long journey across snowbound Siberia, which Mrs. Roosevelt's friends had warned her was too hazardous a trip for a woman to undertake.

Mrs. Roosevelt and Kermit remained in Petrograd long enough to visit the Hermitage and other galleries. They also visited the Petrograd ballet school, where they were doubly welcome because of the aid given the school by the American Relief Administration. They also attended a performance at the Petrograd opera, where they heard an excellent performance of "Carmen." In Moscow Mrs. Roosevelt and Kermit attended the ballet, but unfortunately the orchestra was on strike and the great ballet had to struggle through the performance with the aid of a pianist, who endeavored heroically to fill the enormous opera house with his music.

The 6000-mile train ride from Harbin to Moscow was relieved by frequent stops. At the stations peasants offered for sale different kinds of food.

Radio for Ships in Chinese Waters.
Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.
PEKIN, Jan. 24.—The Ministry of Communications has issued an order requiring all vessels plying Chinese waters, if of 500 tons or over, to be equipped with radio. The order applies to foreign and Chinese vessels alike. It is estimated that about 300 ships will be affected.

'HEAVENLY TWINS' TRY OUT NAVY PARACHUTES

'Lucy' and 'Filbert', Ashen Gray Because of Hazardous Calling; Get Many Hard Knocks.

By the Associated Press.
PHILADELPHIA, March 8.—Leaping 1000 feet or more to earth at the end of a swaying parachute that may be either good or defective, is the perilous business of "Lucy" and "Filbert," the "heavenly twins" of the naval air service.

The twins claim a certain portion of the naval aircraft factory at the Philadelphia navy yard as their birthplace. For them life is not only a series of ups and downs, but full of many striking incidents.

Named by the air sailors, the twins are singularly unattractive in appearance. Their chances for winning a beauty contest are nil, for their countenances, ashen gray from birth, are kept that way by the hazardous nature of their duties.

Wide Difference in Weight.

Made in the semblance of human form, "Lucy" and "Filbert" weigh respectively 180 and 300 pounds each. They work in the summer flying costume of the air force, but their constitution is said by the sailors to consist mainly of coiled rope covered with canvas, with enough buckshot in their chests to bring them to the specified weights required for parachute testing dummies.

Leather boots and gloves, and a picturesque loop knot on top of their heads complete their costumes. The loop is their sole means of support—from the parachute.

Shoved Off the Wings.

As soon as the aircraft factory completes a new "Lucy" or "Filbert," the newcomer in aviation is shipped to one of the naval flying stations. A number of them are at work at Lakehurst, N. J., where the big dirigible Shenandoah is undergoing repairs after her recent fight with a storm.

They test the parachtes provided for the quick descent of the crew of the airship in case of accident in the clouds. The tests vary. "Lucy" or "Filbert" may be assigned to hurtle downward from a lazily swaying kite balloon, or they may be shoved off the wing of an airplane speeding at 125 miles an hour. Despite their many hard knocks and terrific falls, their friends, the sailors, say they have never failed to report for work next day.

EMINENT NONPOLITICAL ITALIANS RUN FOR OFFICE

Dramatists, Professors, Financiers, Engineers and Others on Election Lists.

Special Radio to Post-Dispatch and the Chicago Daily News. (Copyright, 1924.)
ROME, March 8.—More nonpolitical persons of eminence in their respective professions than ever before appear in the present electio nlists. Besides the dramatists Sam Benili, author of "The Just," who is on the Government ticket, and Robert Brackoon, who is on the Democratic opposition ticket, there are numeorus professors, financiers, engineers and other professional men who before the war took no part in politics.

Everyone concedes victory to the Government list, which was arranged by Premier Mussolini to include, in addition to the Fascist candidates, who number two-thirds of all, candidates who will bring support of the large non-Fascist parties to the Government. Two parties, the Conservative Socialist and the Popular or so-called Clerical, have been qualified by the Fascist party as "subversive," which is Italian political slang for unpatriotic. This epithet is not applied to the two frankly revolutionary parties, the Maximalist Socialist and the Communists, who frankly advocate dictatorship.

The Vatican is making clearer its neutrality, while influential pro-Fascist Catholic elements are repudiating the Popular party. However, Don Sturzo, a Sicilian priest, a former secretary of the Popular party and still its effective leader, maintains his fierce opposition to Fascism and makes impassioned pleas for the renunciation of violence and the return of democracy.

DANES PUT HIGH TAX ON AUTOS

American Concerns With Branches in Denmark Object.
Correspondence of the Associated Press.
COPENHAGEN, Feb. 14.—The new law establishing a 15 to 30 per cent tax on automobiles has been severely criticised in motor circles, particularly by the heads of American car-making companies with branches in Denmark. They claim that their companies have recently acquired large plants in Denmark with the intention of employing hundreds of Danes and of using Copenhagen as a collecting and distributing center for Scandinavia, Russia and other European countries.

Some prominent Danes have expressed the opinion that Americans, whose Government apparently taxes necessaries, have no moral right to upbraid Denmark for placing a temporary tax on luxuries.

Berlin Bakers Won't Work Nights.
By the Associated Press.
BERLIN, March 8.—Berlin hereafter must do without its hot rolls for breakfast. The local bakers have refused to work after dark on the ground that night duty interferes with their social activities. They contend also that cold rolls are just as good as hot rolls, and a whole lot more wholesome.

Are You a Tired Out Housewife?

Many people do not realize that the most exhausting of all work is housework and the care of children. Many a woman who should be in the prime of life finds her strength gone, her nerves unstrung and is weak, worn out and run down with pale, thin, watery blood from the strain of housework.

In such cases, what you need is something to put more iron into your blood. Nuxated Iron contains iron like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples, and like the iron in your blood. You will be astonished at how much better you feel often in even a few days.

Try taking Nuxated Iron for two weeks, and you will see color come back to your lips and cheeks, you will not be so easily upset by trifles, and best of all, you will find that you have new strength and energy and endurance for your daily tasks. At all good druggists.

Was a "Bear Cat"

"My wife was never an angel, but after five years of liver and stomach trouble she became a 'bear cat.' No doctor or medicine helped her, and we thought there was no help for her. Our grocer told me of Mayr's Wonderful Remedy, which had helped him for same trouble, so I brought home a bottle. But she promptly threw it out. I got it back and after a week coaxed her into taking it. She is now enjoying the best of health and disposition." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Judge & Dolph (3 stores), Enderis Drug Co. (5 drug stores), Brown-Clougihy, Johnson Bros. Drug Co., and druggists everywhere.

Simple Way to Get Rid of Backheads

There is one simple, safe and sure way that never fails to get rid of blackheads, that is to dissolve them. To do this get two ounces of zalonite powder from any drug store—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub over the blackheads briskly—wash the parts and you will be surprised how the blackheads have disappeared. Big blackheads, little blackheads, no matter where they are, simply dissolve and disappear. Blackheads are simply a mixture of dust and dirt and secretions that form in the pores of the skin. The zalonite powder and the water dissolve the blackheads as they wash right out, leaving the pores free and clean and in their natural condition.

800 MINERS WITHOUT PAY THREE MONTHS

Former Employes of Southern Gem Corporation Feeling Pinch of Destitution.

The pinch of destitution is beginnig to be felt by the families of many miners in Southern Illinois formerly employed by the Southern Gem Coal Corporation, now in a Federal receivership. For three months the miners, totaling nearly 800 men, have been without pay.

First the company failed to meet its December payrolls, and the mines were shut down. Now the receivers are confronted with the difficulty of borrowing money on a heavily mortgaged property, in the face of a declinig coal market, before operations can be resumed and work provided for the miners. Receivers certificates can not be issued, because the mines are not public utilities.

The receivers, C. B. Thomas, referee in bankruptcy at East St. Louis, and William S. Wilson, retired operator of Pinckneyville, are anxious to resume operations, as they believe the mines can readily meet current expenses. Some of the miners have voted to return to work and wait for their back pay, but by-laws of the union will not allow this. As there is no strike or lockout, the union is also without authority to use organization funds to extend aid to the miners.

The company's mines rae principally in Franklin and Perry counties. A man signing his letter "A Starving Coal Miner of Perry County," has written the Post-Dispatch saying that many families are without funds to leave the district and that other work seems unobtainable. The mines operated only two days a week for several months before the shutdown.

Receiver Thomas yesterday explained the difficulty the receivers are having in borrowing money.

"We found the company virtually without funds," he said, "and faced with the necessity of meeting a monthly payment of $18,000 on a $1,100,000 bond issue on the Franklin County properties. We have met this so far by collecting accounts, but this method can't be maintained forever. In addition, there is a $500,000 bond issue against the Perry County properties, and other claims run the company's obligations up to about $2,250,000.

"Money isn't easy to borrow in the face of these mortgages, but we hope to obtain it at a meeting in Chicago March 12. About $600,000 is needed, including around $80,000 for the miners' back pay.

"We have an offer for the properties sufficient to wipe out all indebtedness, but we don't want to take this except as a last resort, as it would mean sacrificing the stockholders."

The Southern Gem is a Delaware corporation, capitalized at $5,000,000. The properties are said to be easily worth that figure under normal conditions. Fraud, insolvency and general mismanagement, including exorbitant salaries to officers, were charged in the receivership petitions brought by creditors, but this was later amended to include mismanagement only.

Jesse Dimond of Chicago, who was president of the corporation, declared at the time receivers were asked that the company had a $20,000,000 five-year contract for the entire output of the Franklin County mines. Receiver Thomas said yesterday, however, that the terms of the contract were such that the company would lose money, and consequently the receivers have decided to abandon it.

If funds can be borrowed to start operations again, the mines could be showing a profit by next fall, Thomas believes, and would probably be in shape to turn back to the stockholders within a few years without loss to anyone. If the properties have to be sold for the lack of this money, wage claims take precedence over all others except those of the bondholders.

THIS PRESCRIPTION FOR KIDNEYS

No Drugs—Just Roots and Herbs.

Five years ago Dr. Carey said, "When backache comes get after your kidneys—and don't waste any time."

"Right at the start, go to your druggist and ask for Dr. Carey's Marshroot Prescription No. 777, take it as directed until backache ceases and your eyes are clear and bright."

For more than 40 years Dr. Carey specialized in diseases of the kidney and bladder, and when, in the height of his remarkably busy life, he decided to dispense his most effective kidney and bladder prescription through the better druggists, he helped thousands who could not afford to go to him for treatment.

Thousands of unobservant people have kidney ailments and never know it until too late. High colored urine, getting up in the night, and puffy eyes tell the story.

If you even suspect—start today with Dr. Carey's Marshroot Prescription No. 777. It will drive th poisons from your kidneys and your druggist knows all about it.

Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Judge & Dolph Drug Stores dispense lots of it. It comes both in liquid and tablet form. It will help you as it has a host of others. If it should not, if you aren't glad in one week's time that you bought it, money gladly returned. Price $1.50 and well worth it.

Teeth Stains Removed —for Few Cents!

No More Yellow Teeth—New Discovery Whitens Teeth Instantly

A new harmless treatment has been discovered which—often in only three minutes—gives dull, yellowish teeth a beautiful pearly whiteness. This new treatment, called Bleachodent Combination, consists of a mild safe liquid and a new kind of paste. The liquid curdles or softens the stains, while the paste gently removes them, and prevents the formation of new stains! Tobacco stains often completely disappear after a few applications.

Bleachodent Combination is a new scientific product, perfected by dental specialists who knew that there must be a better, safer and less expensive way to clean teeth than the old way of having them scoured an hour by harmful, gritty abrasives. Bleachodent Combination is especially recommended for children's teeth, as their teeth are in a soft formative period during which gritty pastes or powders should be avoided, and only a safe, mild cleanser like Bleachodent Combination, which bleaches out stains but has no effect on the enamel, should be used. Bleachodent Combination does not affect enamel as its safe ingredients are intended to act only on the cause of the teeth stains—a substance called "mucin" which collects on teeth and forms a hard coating of stain.

Get Bleachodent Combination today, for just a few cents at all good drug and department stores such as Keiffer Drug Co., Judge & Dolph Drug Stores, Enderis Drug Co., Johnson Bros. Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., B. Nugent & Bro. D. G. Co., Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney Dept. Store, Stix, Baer & Fuller.

BOHN

SYPHON REFRIGERATORS

A triumph line of home Refrigerators encased in white porcelain; ultimate utility and enduring beauty

To those who realize that ice economy and perfect food preservation are the only true measure of a Refrigerator, the Bohn Syphon has always been the Refrigerator of first choice. The tested and proven Syphon system of air circulation and the eleven-ply walls of absolute insulation are as important as ever—but in the nineteen twenty-four line is a completing achievement to the famous one-piece porcelain interior—an accomplishment of manufacturing skill and economy—an exterior of snow-white everlasting porcelain, produced at a cost but slightly in excess of a wood exterior. A complete range of sizes from the modest chest of fifty-pound ice capacity to the oversize white porcelain home refrigerator plant that accommodates a whole uncut block of ice.

An early inspection and selection from the Bohn Syphon nineteen twenty-four line is invited.

By special appointment we are exclusive St. Louis representatives of the Bohn Refrigerator Company.

HOW ST. LOUIS LOST $30,000,000 COMPANY

Burroughs Adding Machine Co. Went to Detroit Because It Couldn't Get Alley Vacated.

The story of how what is now a $30,000,000 corporation was "driven" from St. Louis in 1904 in a dispute over a comparatively insignificant blind alley, was related to a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday by one of the founders of the company.

The man who tells the story is G. A. Buder, local lawyer and newspaper publisher, who is a director of the company in question, the Burroughs Adding Machine Co. of Detroit. He made the details public in explaining how a $21,000 investment by the late E. D. Franz, wholesale grocer here, in 1896 has since multiplied until it aggregates more than $4,000,000, as disclosed by a suit for an accounting filed by one of Franz' 10 children against Buder, as trustee of the estate of Franz's widow.

The American Arithmometer Co. was formed here in 1886 to manufacture a machine for which the astounding claim was made that it could perform addition mechanically, thus eliminating pen and brain work by many clerks. By 1904 the company was started on the way to success, and had changed its name to the Burroughs Adding Machine Co. Its factory then was found to be inadequate, and a committee, composed of the late Richard Scruggs and Buder, was named to pick a new factory site.

Wanted Alley Vacated.

After inspecting various sites in the city, the committee decided on the ground facing Grand boulevard and between Laclede avenue and Forest Park place, the Laclede avenue part of which is now occupied by the Leonori storage plant and the Johansen Bros. shoe factory. The site was ideal except for one thing—a blind alley, one that started somewhere but did not go any place in particular, its only effect being in this case to separate the Forest Park and Laclede lots.

The Burroughs committee requested the city to vacate the alley. The city refused. Conferences ensued, and arguments for and against the vacation were heard, but nothing was done. The Burroughs company felt that St. Louis was not properly appreciative of a growing industry, and when the city of Detroit, then much smaller than St. Louis, offered 10 acres of land to the company free of charge on condition that the company locate its factory in that city, the offer was accepted.

Company Still Owns Land.

As a reminder of what might have been, the Burroughs company still owns the land fronting on Forest Park place. The mammoth factory buildings, giving employment to thousands of persons, are in Detroit. "They drove us out of St. Louis," says Buder.

In 1904 the Burroughs Company was capitalized at $500,000, whereas it is now $30,000,000. The business, personnel and factories have increased proportionately. Much of the stock is still owned in St. Louis.

Sage Tea Turns Gray Hair Dark

GRANDMOTHER kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied, with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through the hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color, and looks glossy, soft and beautiful.

Ends Stubborn Coughs in a Hurry

For Real Effectiveness, This Old Home-made Remedy Has No Equal. Easily and Cheaply Prepared.

You'll never know how quickly a bad cough can be conquered, until you try this famous old home-made remedy. Anyone who has coughed all day and all night, will say that the immediate relief given is almost like magic. It is very easily prepared, and there is nothing better for coughs.

Into a pint bottle, put 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to make a full pint. Or you can use clairfied molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, the full pint saves about two-thirds of the money usually spend for cough preparations, and gives you a more positive, effective remedy. It keeps perfectly, and tastes pleasant—children like it.

You can feel this take hold instantly, soothing and healing the membranes in all the air passages. It promptly loosens a dry, tight cough, and soon you will notice the phlegm thin out and disappear. A day's use will usually break up an ordinary throat and chest cold, and it is also splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness, and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, the most reliable remedy for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

BAD BREATH

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets Get at the Cause and Remove It.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, act gently on the bowels and positively do the work.

People afflicted with bad breath find quick relief through Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The pleasant, sugar-coated tablets are taken for bad breath by all who know them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act gently but firmly on the bowels and liver, stimulating them to natural action, clearing the blood and gently purifying the entire system. They do that which dangerous calomel does without any of the bad after effects.

All the benefits of nasty, sickening, griping cathartics are derived from Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets without griping, pain or any disagreeable effects.

Dr. Edwards discovered the formula after seventeen years of practice among patients afflicted with bowel and liver complaint, with the attendant bad breath.

Olive Tablets are purely a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color. Take one or two every night for a week and note the effect. 15c and 30c.

3 UNSOLVED AUTO DEATH MYSTERIES HERE SINCE JAN. 1

Man, Woman and Youth Were Killed by Machines —Drivers in Each Case Fled.

POLICE HOPE FOR A CHANCE CLEW

Neighborhood "Tip" Resulted in Solving Russell Case Four Months After Fatality.

Three persons have been killed in St. Louis since Jan. 1 by automobiles whose drivers feloniously fled from the scene and were never identified because of meager clews and conflicting descriptions which baffled police.

The police papers have been laid aside and on the surface the three mysteries seem hopeless of solution, but the police cling to the hope that some chance clew may come to their ears and aid in tearing away the mask of anonymity which shields the three drivers from prosecution.

Odds are all in favor of the fugitive drivers, but the police point to their luck in the case of James M. Russell of 2752 Armand place, killed Nov. 4. He had been dead four months when the police got a neighborhood "tip" that Fred J. Koester, 4629 Michigan avenue, drove the Ford car which hit Russell at Jefferson and Ann avenues, and then drove on. It resulted in confessions by Koester and two companions and the subsequent indictment of Koester.

Case Was Abandoned.

The Russell case had been abandoned weeks before after fruitless investigation, and it was no less baffling than the three cases of 1924. Each of these cases occurred at night when the fleeing driver was shielded by darkness; each has the same elements of meager and conflicting descriptions which might fit any of a thousand cars driven daily in St. Louis. In each no license number was observed.

The first of the three to die was Elmer Hubbard, 23, of Webster Groves, who was run down on the night of Dec. 20 and died four days later. He had stepped into Broadway at Chippewa street when he was swept from his feet by a machine speeding south. Two patrolmen heard the crash and ran to him in time to see the dim outline of an automobile fading in the distance.

No one could furnish a lucid description of the car or its occupants. The Homicide Squad investigated, questioning this man and that, and learned only that the machine was apparently a seven-passenger model with no spare tire in the rear rack. Hubbard was so badly hurt, with a fractured skull and internal injuries, that he died without making a statement.

Boy Coaster Killed.

It was on Jan. 18 that Philip McBreen, 14, of 5820 Cote Brilliante avenue, coasted down Garfield avenue and into Goodfellow, where he was struck and run over by an automobile speeding north. Two playmates said it was a dark-painted Ford occupied by two men. It sped north to North Market street, turned east and disappeared. Philip died the next day of skull fracture and internal injuries. The police sought to find some clew to distinguish the auto from a thousand others of a like description, but failed, being unable to find any witnesses but the two boys.

The last of the three deaths is the most clouded of all. Miss Louise Milfeil, 56, of 1947A North Broadway, lay unconscious on Ninth street near Madison avenue at 10 p. m., Feb. 2. No one had seen her struck and her death two hours later removed all possibility of gaining any information from her. Witnesses saw a curtained car speeding south a few blocks away, but the information was fragmentary and useless. Miss Milfeil's purse lay 20 feet north of where her body was found, and detectives in their final report concluded that she must have been hit by a southbound machine moving at high speed.

One Case Solved.

The police, however, have to their credit the speedy capture and confession of the man who killed Michael Seitz, 8, of 3764 South Broadway, on Feb. 4. He was hit by an old-fashioned touring car driven by a negro, and the police two days later found such a car in the possession of Herman Young, 29, negro, of 212 Johnson street. He stoutly denied he had hit the boy until confronted by 11-year-old Georgia Dill, a witness, who so minutely described the machine that Young broke down and confessed.

Three such unsolved cases in a little more than two months is an unusually high record. A review of five years prior to 1924 shows a total of 32 unsolved automobile fatalities. In that period the police captured nine drivers who had feloniously fled, but the records at police headquarters show but one penitentiary sentence.

Chauffeurs' Traffic School.

The first of five meetings of the Chauffeurs' Traffic School of the St. Louis Safety Council will be held Tuesday evening at Central High School. Public officials and others will discuss safety and traffic problems at this and other weekly meetings. P. J. Kelleher is chairman of the school, the object of which is to effect a reduction in the number of accidents resulting in serious injury or death.

GRIPPE WEAKNESS

It is a fact that those who are careful to keep well-nourished and the resistance normal, are best able to avoid or prevent the prostrating effects of grippe or similar infection.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

a name familiar on the lips of tens of thousands, is used today and every day to help nourish and strengthen. If Scott's Emulsion is now helping tens of thousands realize freedom from grippe, coughs, colds—why not let it do as much for you?

Says New Method Heals Rupture

Kansas City Doctor's Discovery Makes Truss or Operation Unnecessary

A new discovery which experts agree, has no equal for curative effects in all rupture cases, is the latest accomplishment of Dr. Andrews, well-known Hernia Specialist of Kansas City, Mo. The extraordinary success of this new method proves that it holds and heals a rupture. It weighs only a few ounces. Has no hard gouging pads, no elastic belt, no leg straps, no steel bands, and is as comfortable as a light garment. It has enabled hundreds of persons to throw away trusses and declare their rupture absolutely healed. Many of these had serious double ruptures, from which they had suffered for years. It is Dr. Andrews' ambition to have every ruptured person enjoy the quick relief, comfort and healing power of his discovery, and he will send it on free trial to any reader of the Post-Dispatch who writes him. He wants one person in each neighborhood to whom he can refer. If you wish to be rid of rupture for good, without an operation, take advantage of the doctor's free offer. Write him today.

cannot hope ever to become strong and well again unless they have plenty of good, rich, red blood of the kind that organic iron—Nuxated Iron—helps make. Nuxated Iron is like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples, while metallic iron is iron just as it comes from the action of strong acids on iron filings. Nuxated Iron does not injure the teeth nor upset the stomach; it is an entirely different thing from ordinary metallic iron. It quickly helps make rich, red blood, revitalize wornout, exhausted nerves and gives you new strength and energy. Over 4,000,000 people annually are using it. Beware of substitutes. IMPORTANT ISSUES FOR LEAGUE COUNCIL

Entry of Germany and Russia May Be Hastened by Session Beginning March 10.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

GENEVA, Feb. 20.—As one of the slogans of the new British labor cabinet is that more use be made of the League of Nations in the effort to put Europe's political house in order, special interest is attached here to the next meeting of the Council of the League which will be held at Geneva beginning March 10. On that occasion Lord Parmoor will make his official entrance on the league stage as the representative of Great Britain, replacing Lord Robert Cecil.

Lord Parmoor's program of activity is still an unknown quantity, but as Premier Macdonald has come out for the admission of Germany and Russia to the league, the new British delegate may come to Geneva with some tangible suggestions calculated to hasten the advent of the two great European powers who are still outside the league portal.

Interallied military control of the Rhine district as linked up with the great problem of security for France, constitutes a weighty matter that may find an echo at the March council reunion.

League officials point out that the treaty of Versailles provides that under certain conditions interallied control of affected German territory passes to the League of Nations, so that the question of league direction does not present difficulties once the great powers and Germany reach an accord and accept the impartial Geneva jurisdiction.

Work by American.

Several other matters of importance occupy a place on the March agenda. Americans will be interested in the presence at Geneva of Norman H. Davis, formerly assistant Secretary of State, who is expected to deliver in person the report of his special commission on the complicated Memel dispute which continues to threaten the relations between Lithuania and Poland, and menace political conditions in the Baltic.

The task of Davis and his fellow commissioners has been rendered more difficult by a recent letter received by the League of Nations from the conference of Ambassadors, which voices the hope that the league inquiry will not repudiate the decisions already taken by the Paris ambassadorial body with regard to Memel.

Report on Italy and Greece.

Another important agenda item is the report of the jurists on questions touching a proper and equitable interpretation of the league covenant. This juridicial study was a sequence of the Italian questioning of the competency of the covenant in the dispute which arose between Italy and Greece following the murder of Italian officers at Janina, and the subsequent bombardment of Corfu by an Italian squadron. It is reported at Geneva that the report handles diplomatically the delicate issue of bombardment, but that it hits out clearly on all other questions.

The naval experts who have been meeting at Rome may complete their draft of a proposed convention for the extension of the principles of the Washington naval treaty to non-signatory states, and may be able to make their report to the March meeting. This convention draft will form the basis of a later international conference. It will fix the allocation of replacement tonnage for South American countries and the lesser naval powers of Europe.

Other matters on the agenda include the report of the health organization of the League, which is now seeking to co-ordinate international efforts in an attempt more successfully to combat epidemics.

American Collaboration.

The past month shows an increase of American collaboration with the League of Nations. Minister Grew came from Berne to take part in the deliberations to draft a new convention for the control of the international traffic in arms. This is in connection with the general drive of the League against excessive armaments, and is deemed of importance in view of Premier Macdonald's ambition to convoke a new international conference for the reduction of air and undersea warships.

A tribute to the capacity of American women has been paid by the appointment of Dr. Alice Hamliton of the Harvard Medical School as a member, the only woman member, of the permanent health organization of the League.

FLAGSHIP CHIEF DRIVES TAXI

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, March 8.—Count Charles de Chambrun, whose present official job is to distribute diplomatic news to American correspondents at the Foreign Office, can boast the largest acquaintance of any diplomat who has seen the same length of service. He was as well known in Petrograd as Washington before the World War and can name friends in every important capital; none ever seems to forget him.

Paying his taxi fare the other evening, he noticed the chauffeur scrutinizing him closely. "Why, I know you; the chauffeur finally remarked. "Do you?" the Count said. "Did you ever see me?"

"I saw you on the afternoon of July 28, 1914, aboard the Russian flagship," was the answer. "Indeed I was there," De Chambrun admitted, "but where were you?" "I was on the bridge," said the chauffeur, "I was Captain of the ship."

BETTY WASHINGTON'S DESK

It Comes Back to the Old Home in Fredericksburg, Va.

FREDERICKSBURG, Va.—After more than 140 years of wandering, the desk at which Betty Washington Lewis, sister of George Washington, sat and penned the courteous epistles of her day, has come back to her home, Kenmore, Fredericksburg, Va.

For more than a year the women who have been struggling to save Kenmore as one of the historic shrines in America, have been sending out literature, describing the purpose of the Kenmore Association to the various D. A. R. chapters.

One of these appeals reached the regent of the Old Trails Chapter, in Minneapolis, Minn., who communicated with the registrar of the Washington Lewis Chapter at Fredericksburg telling of the old desk.

Pays Debt After 60 Years.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

QUINCY, Miss.—Found—The truly honest man. Mrs. William Badger of West Quincy received through the mail a check for $20.68 with a note of explanation reading, in substance" "Borrowed $5 from your husband 60 years ago to buy a mow and arrow. I moved West and have never repaid the loan. The inclosed check is for the amount due, plus interest."

INSTITUTE OF POLITICS WILL OPEN TUESDAY

Three-Day Course in Co-operation With Washington U. School of Economics.

A three-day course in the science of government and politics designed to afford men and women an opportunity of receiving authoritative knowledge of these subject, will be opened Tuesday at City Club by the Institute of Government and Politics, organized by the Missouri, St. Louis County and St. Louis leagues of Women Voters, in co-operation with the Washington University Graduate School of Economics and Government. This is the second time that a university has aided in the establishment of such an institute. Recently Columbia University and the New York League of Women Voters co-operated on a similar plan.

Washington University professors will give most of the lectures. Chancellor Herbert S. Hadley is programmed to speak from his experience as Governor of Missouri and as professor of law at Colorado University. Other Washington lecturers are Dr. W. J. Shepard, head of the Department of Political Science; Dr. Leverett S. Lyon, head of the Department of Economics; Dr. Forrest R. Black, assistant professor of Political Science, and Isidor Loeb, dean of the School of Business and Public Administration.

Visitors on the program include Prof. Arnold B. Hall, instructor of public law at University of Wisconsin, president and founder of the National Conference on the Science of Politics, and author of several books on law and government.

Round Table Luncheons are scheduled for noon Tuesday and Wednesday at Hotel Statler, Mrs. Elmer McKay, professor of political science at Stephens College, will speak Tuesday, and Juvenile Court Judge Mary Barthelme of Chicago, Wednesday.

At a banquet Wednesday evening, Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, wife of the Governor of Pennsylvania, will speak on "American Foreign Policy."

The Institute sessions are open to any person who may desire to enrole. "It is an unusual opportunity for the study of a neglected but all-important subject," said Dr. W. J. Shepard, head of Washington University Department of Political Science.

NEW BOOKS FOR THE WEEK AT THE PUBLIC LIBRARY

Any of these books will be sent by parcel post to card-holders on receipt of postage in order of application.

SAMSON IN CHAINS, by Leonid Andreyev—A tragedy in four acts written by one of Russia's greatest writers, author of "He Who Gets Clapped," "Katerina," and others. It centers about the Biblical characters, Samson and Delilah.

THE ART OF PUBLIC SPEAKING, by Lucy D. Bell—A valuable study for the woman who intends to take part in public life. Takes up such subjects as Chairmanship, Procedure, Courtesy, Debates, Election Speeches, and many other topics needed to make public speaking effective.

SCHOOLS IN COTTAGES TEACH HOME-MAKING

Texas Girls Given Practical Instruction Including Cooking and Child Care.

By the Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Tex., March 8.—Cottages where school girls learn to be housewives are being erected on the grounds of high schools throughout Texas. A dozen or more already in use train high school girls in the art and science of homemaking.

These little houses are fitted up like a modern home. They are equipped to typify the better class of homes in the community, but no attempt is made to go beyond the reach of the average girl in the economic classes. In fact, they are designed and furnished to show how attractiveness and comfort may be obtained by wise planning and careful buying.

Touches of home atmosphere are introduced such as a fireplace, book cases and living room. Rugs, pictures, bedroom furniture and the like are added from time to time. A bathroom and family medicine chest, built-in cupboards and wardrobes are generaelly included in the cottage plans.

In these houses the girls are taught all phases of home life, from cooking to caring for the baby. In rural communities even, the best methods of disposing of waste by cesspool or septic tank is demonstrated through the cottage plumbing system, and girls are taught about sanitary plumbing.

The larger classrooms of laboratories in the cottages vary from one to three in number, depending on the size of the community.

In a small community, having fewer than 35 girls in the high school, a small cottage with one large classroom, 24x36 feet, is fitted up with a combination food and clothing table and this laboratory is equipped with cupboards for the food supplies and larger cooking utensils with one end devoted to clothing, lockers and wardrobe. In addition to this, a room with a fireplace is provided which may be used in turn as a dining room, living room and bedroom.

All the activities of a busy homemaker are included in the courses of study. Home management, including house-planning and accouting of the family income, care of the sick, child care, foods, clothing, personal hygiene, sanitation, home decoration and beautification, both inside and outside, are studied by the students.

The cottages in some places are used for outside activities that fit in with the school work. At Del Rio the Red Cross nutrition worker has her office in the home nursing room of the cottage, and the girls of the classes assist her in serving undernourished children at noon meal and help with the baby conference. Mothers' club meetings and social gatherings are held in some of the houses. Mexican mothers, doing outside work, are given lessons in the use of milk, fruits, vegetables and cereals. The girls of the classes serve luncheons to commercial club. Boy Scouts are taught to make biscuits. At Brownwood and Seymour the girls used the cottage grounds to study outdoor beautification, planting many flowers.

According to Miss Jessie W. Harris and Miss Lillian Peck, State directors of home economics, this is an excellent means for removing the home economics department from unattractive and insanitary surroundings.

SPELLING BEE FOR KANSAS

School Children to Have Chance to Compete With Parents.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TOPEKA, Kan.—Kansas is going to find out who is the best speller in the schools of the State and will try to find out who is the best speller among the folks more than 50 years of age. Plans for a State-wide spelling contest now are going forward in every school in Kansas. The championship will be decided in Topeka Sept. 9. Every county is to have at least six entrants from the schools and two for the old folks' division, so that when the final heat of the race is run there will be nearly 1000 participants for the spelling honors of the State.

The contest is being arranged by J. W. Miley, State Superintendent of Public Instruction. Already the schools are giving shows and entertainments of various kinds and later will arrange for social affairs to raise the money for sending the prize winners in each county to Topeka for the final contest. The purpose of the contest is to create a wider interest in spelling. For some years business men have complained that school children were not taught how to spell and there are many who have deprecated the dying out of the old-time spelling bee, which furnished them so much amusement in their school days and taught them how to spell.

HOW PASTOR GETS TO CHURCH

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MANASSAS, Va.—Riding by airplane to keep his appointment at a country church near the village of Aden, Prince William County, Sunday morning, the Rev. C. J. Racey of the United Brethren Church is the first Manassas pastor to feel independent of muddy country roads.

After making the trip of five miles in less than five minutes, he calmly entered the little church and delivered a sermon on "The Commonplace of Life Glorified, or the Power of Little Things." The young aviator, with whom the pastor made the flight, is said to have been in the neighborhood for the purpose of making passenger trips.

"The Campbells are coming!" Siege of Lucknow, India. 1858

When TIME means Everything

Time counted at the siege of Lucknow when the coming of the Campbells saved the day.

Time counts in most big situations. And it certainly counts for everything when the intestines are clogged and inactive, and the germs of some acute disease are feeding and thriving. No time then for a slow, unreliable, over-night cathartic.

What is needed is PLUTO WATER, the quick physic.

PLUTO acts in 30 minutes to two hours. Thoroughly but gently relieves intestinal congestion. Flushes and washes away the dangerous impurities without griping or unpleasant after effects.

PLUTO WATER is bottled at famous French Lick Springs in Indiana, prescribed by physicians and sold by druggists.

WORK UNDER WAY ON NEW ST. LOUIS THEATER

Corporation Headed by David Sommers and W. Frank Carter Perfected.

Organization of the William Goldman Theaters Co. was completed yesterday with the selection of David Sommers and W. Frank Carter to head the corporation.

A deed conveying the property on the southeast corner of Grand boulevard and Morgan street to William Goldman has been executed. This is the site on which the St. Louis Theater is being erected, and will be open to the public on next Labor Day. Goldman, former managing director of the Missouri Theater, will be managing director of the new house.

Preston Bradshaw is the architect of the new theater which is being erected by the Selden-Breck Construction Co. Sam Koplar will supervise the construction.

It was originally intended that the St. Louis Theater would be a 3000-seat house, but the city's plans for the widening of Morgan street at Grand boulevard brought about changes which now call for a theater of 4000 seating capacity.

Work has actually been under way for more than a week on the site, workmen being busily engaged in tearing down some of the old buildings there. The actual construction will be started within a few days and Goldman said that the house would be ready for the opening on Sept. 1.

Suffers Injuries to Eyes.

Hiatt Howriet, 41 years old, of 1822 South Broadway, suffered injuries to both eyes yesterday when he dropped a piece of lead into a melting pot in which other lead had been melted. Howriet was at work on a plumbing job near Eighteenth street and Lafayette avenue. Doctors at City Hospital said his sight might be affected.

The Drury College Girls' Glee Club of Springfield, Mo., will give a concert Thursday night in the main auditorium of Pilgrim Congregational Church, Union boulevard and Kensington avenue.

Says His Prescription Has Powerful Influence Over Rheumatism

Mr. James H. Allen suffered for years with rheumatism. Many times this terrible disease left him helpless and unable to work.

He finally decided, after years of ceaseless study, that no one can be free from rheumatism until the accumulated impurities, commonly called uric acid deposits, were dissolved in the joints and muscles and expelled from the body.

With this idea in mind he consulted physicians, made experiments and finally compounded a prescription that quickly and completely banished every sign and symptom of rheumatism from his system.

He freely gave his discovery, which he called Allenrhu, to others who took it, with what might be called marvelous success. After years of urging he decided to let sufferers everywhere know about his discovery through the newspapers. He has therefore instructed druggists everywhere to dispense Allenrhu with the understanding that if the first 50c bottle does not show the way to complete recovery he will gladly return your money without comment. Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. can supply you.

FOSTER MOTOR CO. HANDLING WESTCOTT

The agency for the Westcott line of passenger and commercial motor cars and busses has been taken by the Winton-Foster Company, 2914 Washington boulevard. Arrangements are being made to change the name of the company to the Foster Motor Co. Winton sales and service will still be handled, according to F. J. Foster, head of the Foster concern.

The Westcott is built in Springfield, O., by the Westcott Motor Car Co. According to Foster, it is constructed of standard, tested units. The power plant in the passenger cars is the six-cylinder Continental 8R Type Motor. In the trucks the Continental 12XD motor is used, also a six.

A brougham, a five-passenger sedan and a touring car have been shipped to St. Louis and will be on show at the Foster salesroom Monday.

His taking of the Westcott agency was explained by Foster Saturday as coming only after a complete investigation of the St. Louis situation. "I looked at other lines and talked to owners of cars in these lines and also to Westcott owners before deciding to handle the Westcott," he said Saturday. "I found Westcott owners entirely satisfied with the service their cars were giving them and so I took that line on." R. V Buchanan is associated with Foster in selling the Westcott.

VICTOR MOTORS WILL INCREASE PRODUCTION

At a meeting of the Board of Directors and executives of Victor Motors, Inc., it was announced by the president, Guy Wilson, that arrangements were being made to acquire additional factory space in order to take care of the increase in business and that the present plant would be used entirely for manufacture. This will allow, according to Sherman H. Dorsey, chief engineer and vice president, one more line of assemble. The new building will be used for storage, painting and body building.

HUDSON-ESSEX DEALERS TO TAKE FACTORY TRIP

The Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co. will take their dealers to the Hudson factory soon, as they did last year. Two Pullman cars have been reserved to accommodate those of the organization who will be able to leave for the first trip, Wednesday, March 19, at 6:30 p. m., which will arrive in Detroit Thursday morning, March 20, and be met at the station by cars from the Hudson factory.

Edward A. Higgins, wholesale manager for the Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co., will be in charge of the trip and expects greater results in enthusiasm and "pep" this year than on former trips.

The entire contingent will leave Detroit on their return to St. Louis the evening of Saturday, March 22. All of the dealers who represent the Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co., selling Hudson and Essex cars at various points in Missouri and Illinois, who availed themselves of the wonderful educational opportunities of this trip last year, are looking forward to this trip.

More than 700 telegrams are received daily at the Willys-Overland auto factory, at Toledo.

HAYNES PRODUCING FORTY CARS DAILY

With orders for 6000 cars, and production steadily increasing, The Haynes Automobile Company will be building 40 cars a day early in March and is looking forward to a record year, not merely in output but in quality of output, according to an announcement made by S. E. Burke, general sales manager, just received by the Wilson Motor Car Co., distributors here.

"We have been working toward this standard since before the first of the year," says Burke. "Men, materials and plant facilities have been so co-ordinated that we are just about to reach an average of 40 cars a day."

The ability of Haynes to produce 1000 cars a month is simplified by the fact that Haynes has standardized on one model in three body styles, states Burke. The Haynes company is now building the Haynes 60 touring, sedan and brougham, and concentrating on these three body styles.

Wills Sainte Claire Bodies are built by coach builders with all the painstaking attention to detail characteristic of the craft. They are as superior to the average mass production bodies as a fine hand made cabinet is to one turned out by machine.

Alluring Beauty

THE first pleasing impression that you get of the new Wills Sainte Claire Brougham is that it is beautiful—

You have never seen a car just like it—

The alluring sweep of its body lines strikes an absolutely new note in automobile-body design—

The richly blended beauty of its finish, both exterior and interior, could come only from the hand of an artist working toward an ideal, unhampered by the limitations of ordinary volume production.

No custom builder ever produced more distinctive and graceful lines or more artistic finish—

And the design itself—short coupled—petite, yet surprisingly roomy—A personal car—cozy enough for a single occupant—spacious enough for five if occasion demands—

It appeals immediately to your sense of exclusiveness and individuality—

At the Automobile Shows this Four-door Brougham has had the spotlight of public interest.

Words cannot adequately describe the beauty and individuality of this car—just as no words can describe its marvelous performance—its riding comfort or its economy of operation.

The New Wills Sainte Claire models, open and enclosed are now here—a demonstration will afford you a new experience in motor performance and riding comfort.

To those who must drive their cars over the roughest roads, day after day, the new Hupmobile makes special appeal. The fact that it is one of the toughest, strongest, staunchest cars on the market recommends it for the hardest service.

STUDEBAKER SETS RECORDS IN AFRICA

Spectacular 100-Hour Circuit Drive Over Mountainous Trails—Washouts and Mud Put Car to Severe Test.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JOHANNESBURG, March 8.—Old timers of the Boer trek wagon trails thronged around a mud-daubed automobile, when it drew up at the curb on a main thoroughfare in Johannesburg.

The machine, a Studebaker light six touring car, had just written a new page in the history of South Africa. Without a pause it had set four records in retraveling the old settler routes, completely circling the Union, in less than 100 hours—a perilous trip.

Not only did the Studebaker establish a new round-trip record around the Union, but it also shattered three other records between points along the course. Notable was the new running time of 35 hours and 57 minutes between this city and Cape Town. This was 996 miles.

A standard stock model was driven out of Johannesburg by H. F. Payne, Fred Scantlebury, L. O. Bright and W. D. du Preez. They drove over mountainous roads thick with mud to Cape Town, then through Port Elizabeth, East London, Kokstad, Durban and return. The car made a 2637-mile circle.

Running time from the start here and return was 99 hours, 46 minutes. Numerous washouts, due to heavy rains, forced the car to travel along long stretches of hilly, slippery roadway, subjecting the Studebaker and its drivers to severe test.

The maze of roads running around hundreds of diamond diggings, near Kimberley, brought confusion. The running time suffered serious disadvantage through time lost in opening and closing cattle gates. Metropolitan motorists may be surprised to know that actually 309 gates barred the Studebaker's path.

Returning to Johannesburg, the light-six was examined by several hundred owners. The engine was still running smoothly. The body was uninjured—although it was thickly coated with mud, from axles to top. Then a careful examination of the chassis showed that the car had gone through the gruelling strain without the slightest breakdown.

FLINT LIGHT SIX IS NEW DURANT PRODUCT

Robert S. Kelley, manager of the St. Louis Flint Co., factory branch handling the Flint Six and Locomobile, is greatly enthused over recent news that the Flint Motor Co. are building a new Flint Light Six. The new car will be priced at about $980, f. o. b. the factory, will have 115-inch wheel base and will come equipped with balloon tires and four-wheel brakes. In appearance it will resemble the present Flint Six and will have a six-cylinder, four main-bearing motor. It will be shown by the St. Louis Flint Co. about April 1.

"The present Flint Six will, of course, be continued in production," says Kelley. "It has made a tremendous hit with the public; in fact, in my many years of motor car experience, I do not remember of a new car receiving any more enthusiastic reception from purchasers of motor cars than this Flint Six."

DIESING OCCUPYING THE GLASS HOUSE

The Diesing Motor Sales Co., 5617-19-21-23-25 Washington boulevard, are now occupying in addition to their main salesroom, "The Glass House" at 516 North Grand boulevard. In "The Glass House," the Diesing Company are exhibiting used cars exclusively. C. E. Kirk, used car manager, is in charge.

According to C. C. Peck Jr., general manager, the leasing of "The Glass House," was a direct result of the good business the Diesing Motor Sales Co. has been doing with the Rickenbacker line. "We sold 26 Rickenbackers during February," said Peck Saturday, which has necessitated our having more room. Hence the additional quarters on Grand boulevard."

The Knight Motor Co., 1512-14-16 Locust street, are now handling the Oldsmobile, as retail dealers.

157 RAILROADS NOW USE MOTOR COACHES

Increase of 400 Pct. in 1923—New Haven Road Orders Ten 60-Passenger Coaches.

NEW YORK, March 8.—While only 40 railroads were listed last year as operating motor rail coaches, a compilation made on Jan. 1, 1924, shows a total of 157, or an apparent increase of about 400 per cent.

Among the users is the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad. It began a test of the motor rail coach about two years ago. Three motor rail coaches, each accommodating 30 persons and providing space for 1000 lbs. of baggage, were placed in the service. As a result, a larger type of gasoline-propelled vehicle, providing accommodations for 60 passengers and 2000 pounds of baggage, was placed in service. This is propelled by a 120-horsepower six-cylinder motor. The New Haven road has recently ordered 10 new units of the same type.

A significant experiment with another high-powered motor coach was begun recently by the Canadian National Railroad. This new rail motor coach is driven by a 225-horsepower gasoline engine, seats 55 passengers and has a baggage compartment 15 feet 2 inches long. The coach has a steel body differing from most rail motor coaches which generally have bodies built on a standard motor bus style. The car weighs between 40,000 and 45,000 pounds.

Another development at Omaha, Neb., in the use of gasoline motor equipment by the railroads is a gasoline-driven tractor. This is built to stand rough usage in handling freight on warehouse freight station and depot platforms.

The Koenig Motor Co., 2651-57 Lafayette avenue, Chrysler, Chalmers and Maxwell dealers, announce the opening of a branch store at 3034 Locust boulevard, to be devoted to the handling of used cars.

C. P. SPIEGELBERG IS OVERLAND MANAGER

CARL P. SPIEGELBERG has become manager of the St. Louis branch of the Willys-Overland Co. of Toledo, Ohio, succeeding William H. Taylor, who has resigned. Spiegelberg has been connected with Willys-Overland for the past ten years, first in the southwest, and more lately, until his appointment as St. Louis manager, as Field Supervisor in the north-central territory. Spiegelberg covered the states of Iowa, Wisconsin and Michigan, having charge as direct representative of the factory of all retail and wholesale business. The Willys-Overland branch has control of all Overland and Willys-Knight sales in the southern section of Illinois, eastern Missouri, western Kentucky and Tennessee and Arkansas. Spiegelberg is inclined to be exceedingly optimistic about 1924 business. "We have a splendid organization and a wonderful line of cars," he said Saturday. "These facts, coupled with the good conditions in this section and the great record Willys-Overland made everywhere last year, make me feel that we are set for a splendid business in this section." William H. Taylor, whom Spiegelberg succeeded and who was manager in St. Louis for 15 months, intends devoting his future time to his own private interests. Taylor will move to Danville, Ill., where his son, E. C. Taylor, is general manager of the Taylor Motor Co., in which the father is interested.

Oakland Breaks Records.

During February the Oakland Motor Car Co. broke all previous sales records for a single month, according to reports received by the Mississippi Valley Motor Co., Oakland distributers. Sales for February exceeded the previous record month, June, 1919, by over 1000 cars. The figures show a 300 per cent increase over February, 1923, and are more than 59 per cent greater than February, 1919, which was the previous record February for sales.

GRAY ENGINE IS VERY EFFICIENT

"Experienced motorists have repeatedly expressed their surprise at the power developed by the Gray power plant," says Milton L. Strauss of the Anderson-Strauss Co., Gray distributers.

"This power is much greater than a rating based on its bore and stroke would indicate," continued Strauss. "The answer lies in the low speed and low compression—a type of engine construction first used in the passenger car field by the Gray, but which has long been in successful use for marine motors and commercial vehicles.

"In addition to its pulling power," declares Strauss, "this type of engine is economical and dependable; in fact, the economy record the Gray holds of 23.8 miles to the gallon on a coast-to-coast run proves it."

MATERIALS HIGHER— AUTO PRICES LOW

In the opinion of J. Dallas Dort, president of the Dort Motor Car Co., Flint, Mich., the public will make no mistake in buying its cars immediately, as he states in a letter to the Wilson Motor Car Co. of St. Louis that there never has been a time when such values were offered as are offered now.

Dort, in this letter, said: "Prices on nearly all materials entering into the construction of motor cars are on the upward trend. There have been some quite notable advances within the last 60 days, so that motor car manufacturers, especially of popular priced cars, are justified in raising prices on certain of their models, if not on all of them."

So far Dort prices have not advanced.

CORDUROY TIRE CO. HAS A DISTRIBUTER

Harry H. Hubbard, Western sales manager of the Corduroy Tire Co. of Grand Rapids, Mich., has announced the appointment of a distributer. Howard G. Skinker and W. C. Milks will handle Corduroy tires here, doing business as the Corduroy Tire Market and being located at 3870 Washington boulevard. Their territory is St. Louis and St. Louis County.

Skinker, Hubbard and Milks were all formerly connected with the United States Tire Co. Skinker and Hubbard are former managers of the branch and Milks was at on etime head of the truck tire department of the branch here.

Moon Makes Personnel Changes.

The Moon Motor Car Co. has announced numerous changes in personnel, several of which were made the past week. W. R. [illegible], who has been factory service manager for several years, has been advanced to the sales department. Hiram Neuwoehner, assistant purchasing manager, succeeding W. D. Nansen of the engineering department has been made assistant purchasing manager.

Harry Newman Says—

A few years ago the Nash Six Touring model sold for $1640. Today the luxurious new Nash Six Special Sedan sells for the same price! And the handsome Nash Touring, with wonderful refinements, is now priced at $1240. That's an example of Nash value-giving.— Prices F. O. B. Kenosha, Wis. (2591)

It's a Real Sport Car a Six-for $1095

Until you see it, you cannot adequately picture the distinctive beauty nor fully appreciate the mechanical goodness of this five-passenger Sport Touring. And the gratifying fact is that both its appearance and performance—endure!

Its finish—a striking Oakland Blue—cannot fade nor check because it is an entirely new substance—Duco—which retains its original beauty indefinitely.

The Oakland engine and chassis, because of their correct design and advanced construction, are ideal for a real sport car because they assure snappy getaway, as well as sustained high speeds.

And how necessary and desirable, in a fast Sport Car such as this, are Oakland's safe and practical four-wheel brakes—and its large steering wheel on which are mounted the driving controls.

Then, too, it has a Fisher body with Spanish Leather upholstery, permanent top, bumpers, motometer, windshield wings, visor, disc wheels—everything that insures completeness and full value.

There is genuine satisfaction in owning a car as distinctive and able as this. Be sure to drive it before you buy any car this spring.

PRODUCT OF GENERAL MOTORS

The True Blue Six

Yes—it can be done

The finest of cars can be sold at these prices

THE Studebaker name guarantees to you the utmost in fine-car construction. For 72 years it has stood for quality, for honest workmanship, for square dealing.

It has always stood for style and class. Remember Studebaker carriages—supreme examples of fine coach building.

Consider our facilities—mark what we have at stake. $90,000,000 in assets, $50,000,000 in plants and equipment, $10,000,000 in body plants alone.

Note our multiplying sales—the sensation of Motordom.

It is fair to assume that we can and do build the finest cars and at Studebaker prices.

What is a fine car?

A fine car means the best materials any cost can buy. We use 35 formulas for steels, each known to be best for its purpose. We pay a premium of 15% on some to get the formulas exact.

All Studebaker models are equipped with Timken bearings. There are few cars in America, regardless of price, which equal ours on this point. In our Light-Six, for instance, we put more Timken bearings than are used in any competitive car, within $1,500 of its price.

A fine car means fine engineering. We spend $500,000 yearly on that department, employing 125 able men.

It means careful construction. We have 12,500 up-to-date machines. 1,120 of our operations are exact to 1/1000 of an inch. 360 are exact to one-half of 1/1000 of an inch.

It means infinite pains. For instance, we machine all surfaces of our crankshafts as was done in Liberty Airplane Motors. We are the only makers of cars at our prices who do this.

It means careful inspection. With us it means 30,000 inspections in the manufacture of each Studebaker car.

Luxury and beauty

It means a car to be proud of.

Our body finish includes 15 coats of paint and varnish.

Chase Mohair is used to upholster our closed bodies—made from the soft fleece of Angora goats.

We offer much extra equipment. Some of our Big-Sixes, for instance, have two nickel-plated bumpers, one or two extra disc wheels with cord tires, a courtesy light, a motometer, steel trunk, etc.

This factory, remember, is the ancient home of fine coach work.

A fine car must be enduring. A Studebaker Big-Six, built in 1918, has so far run 475,000 miles. That means 80 years of ordinary service.

Where savings come

Then how do the Studebakers so far undersell any comparable cars?

Because we build so many. The fixed costs are divided by enormous output—150,000 cars per year.

Because we build our own bodies. The saving to you on some types is up to $300 per car.

Because we make our own forgings, saving another profit there.

Because our plants are modern and efficient. We have spent $38,000,000 on them in the past five years.

Because we keep our men, make them partners, pay them large bonuses to stay. Changing men is expensive.

Because we conduct this business in every way on the best modern lines.

What buyers save

The Studebaker Light-Six Touring Car sells for $1,045. Under ordinary manufacturing conditions it would need to cost you from $1,200 to $1,400.

On our Special-Six the difference might be $400 to $700.

On our Big-Six type the difference may run into thousands, depending on the number produced. For this car compares only with the highest-priced cars in Europe and America. * * *

You will respect the Studebaker methods when you come to know them. You will admire the cars they create. You will delight in the values.

Remember that last year 145,167 fine-car buyers, after comparisons, chose the Studebaker models. So many people could not be wrong.

Learn why they did so before you buy a car at $1,000 or over. You owe that to yourself.

Go and See

ICY MOUNTAIN ROADS GIVE LOTS OF THRILLS

"For genuine excitement, take a motor trip over the Siskiyou Mountains of California in winter," says a letter just received by J. O. Perry Lewis of the Lewis Automobile Co. from the Chandler Motor Car Co.

Sergt. Frank Fuqua, head of the traffic division of the Seattle Police Department, who recently completed the drive through the treacherous roads of the range, is quoted in this letter:

"Two cars went over the embankments along the road I was driving over, and a limousine, containing a man, his wife and several children, turned two complete revolutions on the narrow highway," said Sergt. Fuqua in describing his trip.

"In many places the road was a solid sheet of ice. At night, it was impossible to distinguish between dry road and ice, and at some stages of the trip I was not sure just how things were going to terminate."

Sergt. Fuqua drove a 1924 Chandler with its traffic transmission and proved that a transmission in many cases may be used to great advantage as a stopping device.

"On one long hill that appeared to be a perfectly dry road I was suddenly called on to use the transmission and I really believe that without it I would have gone over the embankment," the Sergeant said.

"I was in somewhat of a hurry and was stepping along when I suddenly topped the grade and started down. Instead of a dry road, I soon learned that I was traveling over a solid strip of ice. In the center of the hill, squarely in my path, I saw another car stranded on the grade. The driver had stopped to adjust his chains. I applied my brakes and slid like a tobaggas. Another car ahead of me attempted to turn out and went over a 200-foot embankment. Fortunately, neither of the passengers was injured.

"By shifting from high to low, with the Chandler traffic transmission, I was enabled to stop without striking the car in my path."

Reports from many districts where dangerous highways traverse mountain ranges show that motorists have been saved from mishap by use of the transmission as brakes.

CARONDELET BUICK CO. WINS CONTEST HONORS

At a meeting held Saturday, March 1, at the Melbourne Hotel Roof Garden, the Carondelet Buick Auto Company was awarded the second monthly prize offered by the Vesper Buick Auto Company in the St. Louis Buick Dealers' Sales Contest which began Dec. 16.

As originally announced, the contest is based on the point total credited to each organization for the sale of various models in the Buick line. In closing the monthly contest which ended Feb. 15, the Carondelet Buick Company gathered 1036 points, over 400 points more than the next competitor.

"We believe that competition of the kind brought out by this sales ocntest is a very good thing for both dealers and salesmen," said Walter H. Vesper, vice president of the Vesper Buick Auto Company in commenting upon the contest. "Since the contest began on Dec. 16, we have delivered a total of 218 Buick cars at retail in the St. Louis Metropolitan District. The contest is worked out to help the dealers sell more cars. For this reason, we have added cash prizes as an incentive to the salesmen for making delivery on certain models. These cash prizes are paid the men in addition to the monthly prizes which are awarded to the winning dealer each month and the grand prize which will be awarded to the dealer winning the five months contest.

The meeting, March 1, was presided over by Ralph Page, president of the Carondelet Buick Auto Company. The program included songs, slight-of-hand tricks and as feature speaker, Col. Francis M. Curlee, St. Louis attorney, who spoke on salesmanship.

DEMAND FOR SLEEPING CAR BODIES INCREASES

George Smith Jr., of the Champion Body Co. declares that the demand for Champion sleeping car bodies for Fords is continuing to increase. "Sales of these bodies, which are made by Moon Bros., have been large since the auto show," said Smith Saturday. "We are finding that salesmen and motorists, who enjoy touring, are particularly interested in this new body. Salesmen like the fact that the rear seat may be removed for carrying their luggage, while tourists appreciate their ability to make a bed of the seats in a very short time, and the fact that with this body they are independent of hotels, when on a trip."

Austin to Sell Lincolns.

Howard L. Austin has taken charge of Lincoln sales for the Fill Motor and Tractor Co. of East St. Louis. Austin is well known in St. Louis through his long experience in handling high-grade automobiles. For six years he handled Stearns and Stearns-Knight cars in St. Louis and his most recent connection has been selling Marmon cars here for the More Automobile Co.

Fry Tire Co. Moves.

The Fry Tire Co. will move Monday, March 10, from 2600 Locust boulevard, to the building at 3400 Lindell boulevard, which has previously been occupied by the Megue Rubber Co. Nat Fry, president of the Fry concern, states that the growth of their business is responsible for their moving into the new, larger quarters.

BROCKMAN HANDLES A. & H. AUTO CLEANER

OVERLAND DOUBLES JANUARY PRODUCTION

With the annnouncement of a total production of 22,048 cars, amounting to a net volume of $17,638,400, during January, Willys-Overland has made its start towards the 1924 goal of 300,000 Willys-Knights and Overlands.

This record is more than twice as great as the production mark of a year ago. Of the 22,048 cars produced during last January, 15,500 were Overlands and 6500 were Willys-Knights, a new record for Willys-Knight production.

The valves in Chrysler six motor are equally distant from the centers of their combustion chambers.

Here's a comfortable, roomy sedan body, which may be converted into a cozy bed in 30 seconds. No wonder it has become such a big seller in such a short time. The construction is sturdy, the body everything that could be desired in a closed car. In addition to being a perfect town and touring car, this body is ideal for a salesman. The rear seat may be removed for carrying samples, suitcases, etc. The tourist or salesman is independent of hotels, if his Ford is equipped with this Traveler Body. The price is reasonable. FLAT RATE SERVICE

A New Plan Appealing to Thrifty Chevrolet Owners

Flat Rate Service—the kind of service you have been waiting for, is now at your call. We have adopted this new method of handling charges for repair work because it enables every Chevrolet owner to get an intelligent estimate of the cost of repairs before the work is started.

Our repair shops are guided by a schedule of repair operations, each covering a specific repair job with the exact average time indicated plainly. The standard price list of Chevrolet Parts gives the exact cost of replacement parts needed. These are the facts that take the uncertainty out of service work.

The Flat Rate System makes for better work at lower prices, because repair men spend their time doing only what you have ordered. That's what we charge for, and you know in advance what it will cost.

Our shops are equipped with special Chevrolet tools. No repair job is too large or too small to be handled efficiently and at minimum cost to you.

WHAT A SURVEY IN A FACTORY TAUGHT

Investigation at Packard Plant Brought Out Interesting Facts About Production.

Observing an automobile standing on the street in the shadow of a towering, gaunt structure slowly being transformed by an army of men into one of America's modern skyscrapers it would be hard to conceive by even those familiar with American automobile building methods that even a vaster army of workers, many times more skilled trades, scores more basic materials, and the products of many more countries were necessary to turn out the—by comparison—tiny vehicle at the curb.

Recently while at the Packard factory in Detroit, George M. Berry of the Berry Motor Car Co., Packard distributors, asked how many different manufactured articles, other than automobiles, could be built in the Packard plant. His question resulted in a survey which astounded even executives of the company. It was learned that any article manufactured anywhere could be made, from a bride's trousseau to a locomotive or trans-Atlantic liner, and that trades among the 8000 workers represent practically every known line of skilled work.

The survey disclosed that if some catastrophe, such as the flood which made Noah known to fame, should visit the world and obliterate everything but the Packard factory, its stores of materials and its workers, there would be left a nucleus from which could be rebuilt the world's present habiliments of civilization, in all of their myriad complexities.

Continuation of the building of automobiles, however, it was discovered would be the greatest problem. First, trucks would have to carry miners from among the workers of the factory into iron mines to obtain ore for the making of the simple irons and steels with which later other men in the factory could build railroads with their equipment and steamships. Then into every known country of the world groups of skilled men would have to proceed to gather in all the materials necessary for the building of an automobile of the type of the Packard.

From the time of the arrival of the materials at the factory it was determined that there would elapse more than 120 days before the first car could be produced, even after all conditions had been restored to their present state for it developed that there occurs now an interval of that length between the time of the arrival of the lumber, the material taking the greatest time to find its way into a car, and shipment of the finished automobile.

Among the interesting facts disclosed by the survey are these: 40 different and distinct metals are used in producing a Packard car; 14 basic metals are included; 23 kinds of materials, other than metallic are used and some of these are made from 47 different kinds of basic raw materials that are not included as separate materials in the total; not counting basic metals or other materials, 63 different materials are used; there is not a single known country that is not represented; for the production of a camshaft alone 41 productive operations are necessary; more than 80 distinct trades are represented in the factory and each one of these trades can be reclassified into many distinct subdivisions.

SAYS ESSEX "SIX" OUTPERFORMS "FOUR"

"An unparalleled volume of business continues," declares R. C. Frampton, president of the Hudson-Frampton Co., Hudson-Essex distributors. "Since the public has learned that the new Essex six will out-perform even its predecessor, we have been up against the unprecedented experience of being short of motor cars, at this time of the year."

"Our volume for the last month broke all records. The month's business taught me a number of things. The principal one is that the public is still interested in the performing ability of a motor car.

"In presenting the new Essex, we said very little about its ability on the road. We were a little hesitant to say that it would actually out-climb, out-pull, out-accelerate and out-run the Essex four, at all speeds up to 50 miles an hour. When we began demonstrating those facts, our business took a jump forward that surprised me.

"I have no hesitancy in predicting a serious car shortage this spring. That shortage will apply to those manufacturers who are giving big value. Despite the operation of the Hudson-Essex plant at full capacity, the public has taken cars so fast that no stock has been laid up by dealers for the spring, according to reports I have just received from our factory. The man who intends buying should buy early, in my opinion.

EASTERN SECTION OF STATE HIGHWAY SMOOTH

According to Waldo Proctor of the Proctor Motor Co., Columbia, Mo., Star dealer, who was here Thursday of last week, the eastern half of the State highway is in surprisingly good condition for this time of the year. Proctor says that this part of the road to Kansas City has been dragged frequently and rolled and is smooth. Even after rains, according to Proctor, the road dries quickly and is ready for the most particular motorist to travel upon. "I have even seen dust on the road during the past week," said Proctor, "and you know how unusual that is for this time of the year."

DURANT EXPORTS GROWING RAPIDLY

The export division of Durant Motors, Inc., reports headway. Durant products are now represented abroad by 78 distributers in 35 countries. The entrance into the German market is the latest move. An embargo of some years' standing having been removed March 1, that date found 15 applications of German distributers for Durant franchises.

The Argentine now holds the lead as a Durant purchaser for export, but Holland and the Scandinavian countries continue to be active.

A feature of the export of this manufacturer is the out-of-the-way spots which are practically virgin territory for the motor car and which Durant has cultivated. Such points as Senegal, Africa, have been developed into good markets. Cyprus, rich in historical lore, but territorially small, has applied for a Locomobile franchise. Trinidad is also among the most active export markets for automobiles.

DORT OFFERS BALLOON TIRES ON ALL MODELS

Dort is now offering balloon-tire equipment on all models at a slight increase in cost. H. C. Merry of the Wilson Motor Car Co., Dort distributers, believes this is one of the notable improvements that Dort has made this season. "These tires enhance the appearance of the car, give greater driving pleasure, add to the safety of driving, promote better braking, and there is not so much skidding," says Merry.

DRIVERS DIFFER, SAYS DISTRIBUTOR OF CASE

"It is interesting," says H. C. Merry of the Wilson Motor Car Co., distributor of Case cars, "to watch the different driving styles of car owners."

"Some drivers make work of operating their cars and to others it seems to be a genuine pleasure. I've ridden behind drivers who wreck their cars and rip the treads off their tires by applying power when rounding curves. Other drivers, who have learned by experience how to save their cars, throw out the clutch whenever they go around a sharp corner.

"The other day I saw a driver trying to get out of a mud hole. He applied a full flow of power and his wheels spun around and dug deeper into the mud without moving the car an inch.

"He hailed a passing car for a tow but neither carried a rope, so the driver of the other car offered to try to drive the bogged car out of the mud hole. He was some driver! When he took the wheel he applied the power slowly and the wheels seemed to get better traction." Then he alternately engaged and disengaged the clutch. The result was that the car began to rock back and forth and soon got under way and rolled out of the mud."

The first sedan put on a production basis was introduced by the Franklin Automobile Co. in 1913. Today, 50 per cent of the Franklin output consists of this type.

Full-Size BALLOON TIRES

Applied Promptly at Lowest Cost

Without delay or trouble and at the lowest cost you can have your car equipped with Firestone Balloon Gum-Dipped Cords—the original, full-size low-pressure tires.

Firestone not only makes the full-size Balloon tires but the rims and wheels as well. We get them in a complete unit all ready to apply to your car. Nowhere else can you obtain the well-engineered equipment, the thoroughly organized and intelligent service, and the low prices we are prepared to offer.

Every part of this Changeover Unit is Firestone-built—according to the rigid standards of quality and workmanship for which the Firestone name stands.

The small diameter wheels and rims, built by the Rim Division of Firestone, assure the utmost in the performance of the completely assembled tire, rim and wheel. This equipment prevents any possibility of body and fender clearance difficulties, or any other mechanical interference.

Inasmuch as Firestone is the largest producer of full-size Balloons in the country, the Firestone Rim Division is building the complete Changeover Unit on a large production basis to keep pace with the rapidly increasing demand. That means lowered costs—hence a lower price to you. The Rim Plant, one of the largest in the world, has unexcelled facilities for the production of rims and wheels of the highest quality. Its development and manufacture of the small diameter service wheel means much to the success of the Balloon Tire.

Until you have ridden on these full-size Balloons, mounted on these specially designed rims and wheels—you cannot realize the great stride forward that has been made in motoring comfort, safety and car conservation.

Firestone pioneered and developed the full-size Balloon Tire. And it was the special Firestone process of gum-dipping that made the Balloon tire practical. Many prominent car manufacturers have already adopted Firestone full-size Balloons. In fact, Balloon-type tires on present wheels have not proved acceptable to any car maker.

Drive in today—let us show you what Balloon Gum-Dipped Cords will do for your car and how quickly and economically we can apply them.

Advantages of Colored Spaghetti.

The use of "spaghetti" tubing in a set can be of considerable advantage, especially where the wiring is close and has a chance to touch. It may also be used in different colors, such as red for the positive battery wires, black for the negative wires, green for the grid and brown for the plate. This will look neat and make the tracing of the circuit much simpler.

REFLEX CIRCUIT WITH DIODE TUBE DETECTOR

Two Hook-Ups Which Will Neither Howl, Squeal, Hum Nor Re-Radiate.

Here is a circuit which with one tube will operate a loud speaker regularly on local stations, and with three tubes can be depended on to pick up regularly DX stations. It is not a renegerative hoop-up and it will not start neighborhood feuds by readiation due to extreme oscillation.

One circuit employs a stage of radio frequency, diode rectifier tube, and one stage of reflexed audiofrequency amplification. It meets all the requirements of the radio fan. It is sensitive — tuned radio frequency is provided before the tuned detector circuit. It gives volume—both the radio frequency amplifying and rectifying circuits are tuned. It gives clearness, because a crystal or diode is used for rectification. And last but not least, simple to build and to operate. Its dial settings for various stations can be logged on a permanent record and these stations will come in any time the dials are set to the proper and determined readings.

The set can be built in one, two or three tube hook-ups. For the purposes of this article we are showing a picture diagram of the three-tube circuit and a schematic diagram for the one-tube hook-up. For the construction of the one-tube Harkness reflex hook-up the following material is required:

Necessary Parts for One-Tube Hook-up.

One audio frequency transformer—in the writer's set this is a Shermatran as it seemed to give maximum amplification without distortion—this was especially noticeable on articulated sounds.
One UV 201 A or C 301 A tube.
One standard tube socket.
One diode and special socket.
One 6 ohm rheostat.
Two radio frequency transformer units made up of following parts: Two variable condensers, each .005 capacity. Two bakelite or formica tubes 2⅞" dia. by 2½" long.
One-eighth lb. No. 28 cotton and silk insulated wire or ¼ lb. of No. 26 d. s. c. magnet wire.
One single circuit jack.
Two 3-inch dials.
One panel 7x21 inches (bakelite, formica or radion).
One cabinet.
"A" and "B" batteries. Headset or loud speaker.

For the three-tube set you need in addition:
Two audio frequency transformers.
Two UV 201 A or C 301 A tubes.
Two tube sockets.
Two 6 ohm rheostats.
Two double circuit jicks.

Diode Tubes Recommended.

The energy produced by this receiver is so great that under anything but the most careful handling a crystal detector when used in this circuit is often liable to burn out and lose its sensitivity. For that reason the smaller diode or two element tubes are recommended.

Making Transformer Coils.

When it comes to the coils, those fans who prefer to omit as much work as possible can buy them at most any radio shop that has Neutrodyne parts. For the real fan who wants all the fun of building his set from the ground up the following data will be necessary.

Procure bakelite or formica tubes for the two coils to be known as A and B. On A wind on 60 turns of wire, evenly and tightly. This comprises the secondary. Tag or mark the ends 3 and 4. On the center of this winding of the secondary a one-inch strip of sheet insulating material—cambric cloth should be glued. The primary of 15 turns (winding in the same direction as the secondary) is wound on the center of this insulating material. Mark the ends of this winding No. 1 and No. 2. The "No. 1" end should be opposite "No. 3" end and the "No. 2" end should be opposite "No. 4" end.

For the second (or B coil) proceed exactly the same with the "secondary" or bottom windings. The primary (the top winding) on this form is to have 35 turns. Tag or mark all terminals on this form as on the other.

The best method is to mount them against the 23-plate variable condensers. This insures a neat and satisfactory job, short leads, and keeps the coils at a reasonable distance apart. The coils should be mounted on the condensers so that when assembled they will be at right angles to one another or placed at an angle of 60 degrees from the base board.

Wiring.

The layout of the set should be such as to provide the least amount of wiring.

Coil A No. 1 terminal to connect to aerial binding post. No. 2 terminal to the "A" battery negative post, to ground and to audo frequency transformer (F).

No. 3 terminal to stationary plates of variable condenser, and then to grid connection of tube socket.

No. 4 terminal to the rotary plates of the condenser and then to the G terminal of the audio frequency treansformer.

By following the picture diagram the connections of the B coil, and the other wiring will be easily followed and readily understood.

Wire the filament circuits first and test, by placing the tubes in their respective sockets. If they light, then proceed with the rest of the wiring, if not, trace over the circuit and correct the trouble.

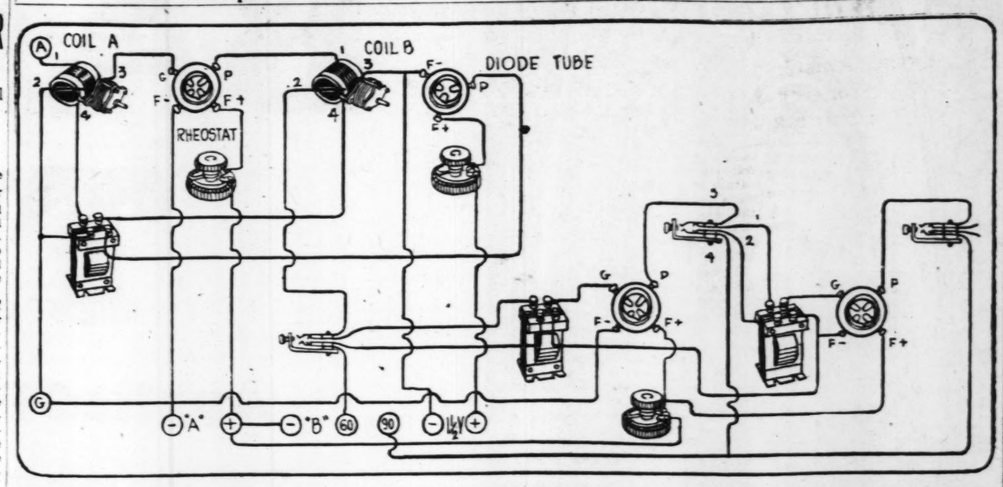
Solder all joints. Flow the solder so the joints when made are smooth. If you use a flux do not spare it, but immediately after soldering remove all trace of the paste.

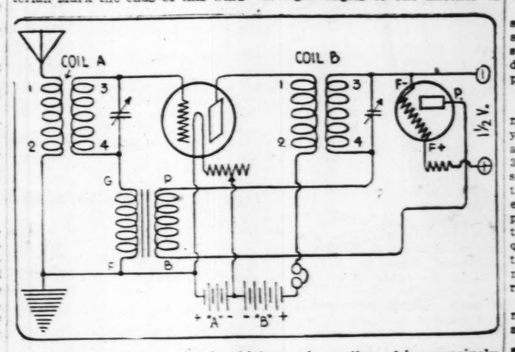
Assembly.

A 7x21-inch panel will provide a neat and efficient mounting. Drill your holes for the condensers' axis about 4 inches from the ends and 2½ inches from the top. The jacks should be placed in the center of the panel, one inch up and mounted upside down to provide a support for a shelf which will hold the tube sockets and the audio frequency transformers. To increase the attractiveness of your set mount your binding posts on the rear end of this bakelite itself.

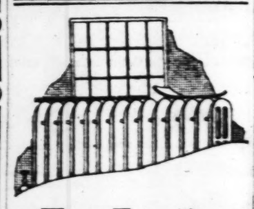
When properly made the Harkness circuit has no body capacity, and will not howl, squeal or hum.

An Inexpensive Reflex Receiver Which Is Quiet in Operation





Harkness one-tube circuit which may be easily and inexpensively constructed.



Test Formica this way!

LAY a strip of Formica on a hot radiator. Put beside it a strip of any material in which rubber is an important ingredient. Then see what happens. The Formica stays straight and true — just as it was before it got warm. The other material warps out of shape — because it is soft.

Summer heat never affects Formica panels or tubes and does not make them sag out of shape. It gets better as an insulator with age instead of worse. It does not turn color.

Of the several kinds of Bakelite offered for Radio use, Formica is the most popular — it is used by 125 leading and widely known set manufacturers.

When you buy Bakelite, be sure to get Formica.

make your set "REFLEX" with ACME

THE "REFLEX" Circuit is the highest development of the radio art at the present time. Acme engineers have spent nearly two years to find a way to make "REFLEX" easy for anyone.

With "REFLEX" the same vacuum tubes are used for both radio and audio frequency amplification.

Send 10 cents to Acme Apparatus Co., Cambridge, Mass., for book, "Amplification without Distortion." It shows you how to make your set "REFLEX" and how to get distant stations loud and clear.

NEW ARRIVALS ON THE RADIO MARKET

Frost non-microphonic tube sockets for C-299 and UV-199, as well as standard base tubes, have arrived on the local market. They are provided with sponge rubber cushions to absorb all vibration. Connections from the contact springs to socket binding posts are made of coiled wires which add further to the efficiency of the socket. They are moulded of Bakelite and are obtainable in single, two and three-gang units.

"Halcyon" is the name of a new fixed condenser made of selected clear mica and copper foil. It is heatproof and also moisture proof because moisture cannot get between the plates, as they are cemented together with insulating varnish. Each "Halcyon" is tested across the bridge accurately within 5 per cent, after they are finished.

An item of interest to radio fans is a new automatic blow torch made by the Delaney, Hastie Products Corporaiton. It is called automatic because no priming or pumping, no blowing and no regulation is necessary in its operation. To operate, its two chambers are filled with commercial wood alcohol or denatured alcohol and the wick at the top of the small chamber lighted. Pressure is generated in about 20 seconds and the torch is ready for use. The flame is very strong and needle pointed. It burns for two hours and can be used for any soldering or light-brazing job, as well as for tempering small parts. It is adaptable for use wherever a torch is needed. As it contains no moving parts, there is nothing to wear out or renew.

Another wave-trap known as the "Auxiliary Tuner," has recently made its appearance. The component parts of this unit are more numerous than on the usual wave-trap, but it is said to be highly efficient. One switch controls the coupling of the two windings of the trap coil (one tap being fixed and another for tight coupling), while another switch controls a form of loading coil which has the effect of "loading" the antenna circuit in instances where it is desired to reduce the coupling in the tuner of the receiving set. A calibrated dial is provided for operating the variable condenser.

Henley's new book of 222 radio circuit designs are now for sale in St. Louis. It is an entirely new and thoroughly practical book on radio circuit designs which will meet the need of every radio enthusiast whether novice or expert, amateur or professional, is replete with correct and trustworthy information from which any one can successfully build and operate any of the circuits given. Contains the largest collection of radio circuits and hookups ever published and includes all the standard types and latest developments. This new book treats the subject in an entirely different and novel way, as it is the only book that illustrates the complete electrical design of the circuits, showing the electrical values of inductances, capacities and resistances, with the name of each element on the diagram of the circuit.

Fading Signals.

When a station "fades out" after it has been tuned in there is no use of trying to find it by moving the tuning dial. By waiting a few seconds the station will come in again with maximum intensity.

RADIO SUPERVISOR WILL BE IN ST. LOUIS MARCH 15

Examinations Will Be Given for All Grades of Radio Operators' Licenses.

Radio Inspector R. E. Earle will be in St. Louis on the 15th of March for the purpose of conducting examinations for all classes of radio operators' licenses. Applicants should report for examination in room 214, Old Customhouse, Third and Olive streets, at 9 a. m.

Amateurs who now hold Amateur second Grade Operators' licenses, are compelled to take the examination for an Amateur First Grade Operator's license, otherwise their present license will be canceled and it will be necessary that they cease operating their stations.

Save the "B" Batteries.

Never connect large and small "B" batteries in series. By doing so they will run down very fast. This also applies to new and old "B" batteries, as the amperage of the new one is greater than the old, therefore the old one will draw from the new.

HINTS ON THE CARE OF TUBE FILAMENTS

Proper Operation and Control of Current Prolongs Their Life.

By W. J. M. GARVEY.

Properly operating and controlling the filament current of a vacuum tube, whether detector or amplifying tube, is obvious, as the vacuum tube is the weakest element of a radio receiving or transmitting set. The three main points to consider at all times are as follows:

1. Keep your filament current as low as good operation will permit. (Any properly designed filament control will do this.)

2. The life of your filament will be prolonged if when lighting it you leave half the resistance of your filament control in the circuit. (This is contrary to the general belief of the radio fan.)

3. It is beneficial to your filament if you leave the filament control at its operating position when turning the current on and off. This may be done by having a switch in your "A" battery circuit. It is only necessary to turn down the filament of a vaccuum tube after your battery has been recharged. Recent investigation and research prove that this is absolutely correct.

Radio engineers have been at research work to ascertain the reason for the short life of the present tungsten filament. Microscopical examinations of various grades of tungsten wire show it to appear in two forms.

The first form is the ductile form, in which the wire appears to be made up of a continuous mass of small grains, finely welded together. The second, or brittle, form appears to be made up of fairly large blocks with a definite boundary or cleavage lines.

The advantage of the ductile form is that it may be bent without harming it in any way. The microscope reveals that the brittle form will not stand bending at the boundary or cleavage lines. It is evident from this that the cleavage lines are the weak points in the filament, therefore the brittle form is apt to burn out or break off at these points during operation.

The present tube manufacturers use the ductile tungsten wire as a standard filament in tube manufacturing.

If this form of filament is burned at its exact operating temperature it will still remain in its ductile form and can be bent after this without breaking. If this same filament form is burned at a red heat or below its operating temperature, a decided change takes place. If

HINTS ON THE CARE OF TUBE FILAMENTS

Proper Operation and Control of Current Prolongs Their Life.

By W. J. M. GARVEY.

Properly operating and controlling the filament current of a vacuum tube, whether detector or amplifying tube, is obvious, as the vacuum tube is the weakest element of a radio receiving or transmitting set. The three main points to consider at all times are as follows:

1. Keep your filament current as low as good operation will permit. (Any properly designed filament control will do this.)

2. The life of your filament will be prolonged if when lighting it you leave half the resistance of your filament control in the circuit. (This is contrary to the general belief of the radio fan.)

3. It is beneficial to your filament if you leave the filament control at its operating position when turning the current on and off. This may be done by having a switch in your "A" battery circuit. It is only necessary to turn down the filament of a vacuum tube after your battery has been recharged. Recent investigation and research prove that this is absolutely correct.

Radio engineers have been at research work to ascertain the reason for the short life of the present tungsten filament. Microscopical examinations of various grades of tungsten wire show it to appear in two forms.

The first form is the ductile form, in which the wire appears to be made up of a continuous mass of small grains, finely welded together. The second, or brittle, form appears to be made up of fairly large blocks with a definite boundary or cleavage lines.

The advantage of the ductile form is that it may be bent without harming it in any way. The microscope reveals that the brittle form will not stand bending at the boundary or cleavage lines. It is evident from this that the cleavage lines are the weak points in the filament, therefore the brittle form is apt to burn out or break off at these points during operation.

The present tube manufacturers use the ductile tungsten wire as a standard filament in tube manufacturing.

If this form of filament is burned at its exact operating temperature it will still remain in its ductile form and can be bent after this without breaking. If this same filament form is burned at a red heat or below its operating temperature, a decided change takes place. If you bend this filament wire now it will break. This shows that it has changed to the brittle form, due to improper filament control.

In other words, experimentation and a microscopical examination prove that operating the filament below its operating temperature will result in the deterioration of same, due to transformation to a brittle or crystalline substance.

Summed up, it is advantageous to immediately flash the current from the battery into the filament, but make sure that the filament control is set below the filament operating temperature, otherwise you are apt to burn out your filament.

The latest designed filament controls are so constructed that by a turn of the knob sufficient current flows to the filament to heat it as near as possible to its operating temperature, thereby prolonging its life.

Radio fans will find that by adhering to the foregoing rules governing vacuum tube filament regulation distant stations will be received without interference from the trying noises that are characteristic of an improperly controlled filament.

Provisions of the White Bill Outlined

Transmitting Amateurs Not Specifically Provided for—Fees for All Transmitting Stations.

The new radio bill introduced by Representative Wallace White of Maine, when enacted, will grant the Secretary of Commerce authority to regulate radio communications in all the United States and its possessions. It is intended by the author, who had the assistance of Representative Davis of Tennessee and many governmental officials in framing the bill, that H. R. 7357 will supersede the radio act of 1912 and fully meet all present legislative requirements.

The new bill which is now before the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, provides that all transmitting ship and shore stations and operators be licensed at specified fees, but exempts Government stations and all receiving stations. The bill confers upon the Secretary of Commerce general powers of regulations over all transmitting stations, in the interest of reducing interference and the development of an orderly system of communication. Certain obsolete requirements have been eliminated, ambiguities clarified, and new provisions of importance introduced.

The Secretary of Commerce is authorized to license, classify, locate, assign calls, and supervise all transmitting stations; control the nature of service rendered, allocate wave lengths, prescribe operating time and prevent interference. The President is given authority to close or take over any station in time of war or disaster.

Station licenses may not be issued to aliens, and all licenses may be revoked or suspended by the Commerce head. Whereas present laws place no time limitation upon licenses, time limit for licenses is now authorized at 10 years. Special provisions seek to promote efficiency of mobile stations, making for safety of ships at sea, and require transmission for at least 100 miles.

No licenses are required for the operation of receiving sets or stations, and no control over such sets is attempted by the bill. Transmitting amateurs are not specifically provided for, but the limitations of wave lengths and power set forth in the 1912 bill are eliminated. Under his general power to allocate wave lengths, the Secretary of Commerce may now assign amateurs such wave lengths as the importance of their work may make advisable.

He is directed to refuse to license any applicant who is seeking unlawfully to monopolize radio communication, either through control of manufacture, sale of apparatus or exclusvie traffic arrangements, or other means. Revocation of licenses may be made when provisions of the bill or its regulation are broken, or whenever the Interstate Commerce Commission, or another proper body, shall find that a license has failed to provide reasonable facilities, or has made any unjust charge, or has instituted unreasonable practices in connection with communications. All laws relating to monopolies shall apply to radio apparatus and communication, the bill states, and in addition to other penalties, licenses may be revoked. The bill also provides for the application of the "Cable Landing License Act" to radio transmission to foreign countries.

Fees for Transmitting Stations.

The Secretary of Commerce is authorized to collect, in advance of the issuance of licenses, fees for both transmitting station licenses and for operators' licenses. A trans-oceanic station license will cost $300 per annum; a land commercial license a minimum of $50; a ship station license, $25; experimental station, $25; technical and training school licenses, $15; special amateur, $10, and general and restricted amateur stations, $2.50. Operators' licenses run for two years and range from $2.50 for extra commercial first class, to $1 and 50c for first and second-class amateurs. Charges ranging from $2.50 to 50c will be made for each examination if the bill becomes a law. The bill provides that all fees collected for examinations and licenses may be used to defray part of the department's expenses.

A maximum fine of $1000 will be imposed upon all persons who violate provisions of the pending bill or any regulations authorized by it, within four months after the passage of the act.

Before a radio station may be erected in the future, a construction permit must be secured from the Secretary of Commerce, setting forth all necessary information and the station.

The advisory committee authorized will comprise members appointed by the Secretaries of State, Treasury, War, Navy, Postoffice, Agriculture and Commerce Departments, the Shipping Board and seven members, not representing the Government, will be appointed by the Commerce Secretary. No salaries are provided, but expenses in connection with meetings are to be paid out of Commerce Department appropriations.

Broadcasting and other private stations located within such proximity to governmental stations as to interfere with Government business, must not operate during the first 15 minutes of each hour, the bill sets forth. On the other hand, governmental stations located within 100 miles of commercial stations, may not handle commercial traffic. Divulging of commercial or private radio communication is forbidden. All S O S or distress signals are given right of way, and penalties for transmitting fraudulent distress signals are provided.

ENGINEERS' DAY AT UNIVERSITY

Students at Washington University to Hold Open House.

The annual open house of the engineering schools of Washington University will be held Friday, March 14, from 2 p. m. to 10 p. m.

The electrical department has been conducting some experiments which will be of especial interest to those interested in the radio art, and the exhibit, which is the result of these experiments, consists of the tuning out of interference from transmitting stations located in the same building while listening to distant broadcasting stations.

There will also be exhibits of interest to those interested in the mechanical, civil and chemical phases of engineering. The public is invited.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

All queries must be accompanied by the name and address of the writer.

Q. Where can I purchase the variometers for a Zahorsky receiver? L. M.

A. The parts for this receiver are special and must be home-made until some manufacturer puts them on the market.

Q. (1) Is WTAY in Oak Park, Illinois? (2) What is WTAY'S operating wave length? (3) Why doesn't KSD have any more silent nights? (4) Is the negative side of the "B" battery supposed to be connected to the negative of the "A" battery? (5) What are the distances to Honolulu and the British Isles, respectively, from St. Louis? J. M.

A. (1) Yes. (2) 226 meters. (3) Friday evening is silent at KSD except when it is desired to transmit some special event which could not be broadcast any other evening. (4) This can best be determined by experiment, and no home-made set should be considered finished until both ways are tried. (5) St. Louis to Honolulu is approximately 4230 miles, air line. St. Louis to the British Isles is approximately 4500 miles, air line.

Q. I have a two-circuit honeycomb coil receiver using a 50-turn coil in the primary and a 75-turn coil in the secondary. With these coils I receive stations broadcasting between 570 and 870 kilocycles. Would you kindly tell me what coils to use to get stations operating between 900 and 1200 kilocycles? L. P.

A. Use a 35-turn coil for the primary and a 50-turn coil for the secondary.

Q. (1) I am planning on moving my aerial and want to get it back up in the best possible way. Would a four-wire cage aerial made up of 4-inch rings (to hold the wires apart) give better results than one single wire? (2) Would stranded wire be better than solid wire? (3) If a single wire is better, would two or more stranded wires twisted together to make it larger, be better than one wire alone? R. E.

A. (1) No, not for receiving. (2) Yes, most decidedly. (3) Probably not. At least, the difference in results, if any, could not be measured or determined by the average broadcast listener.

Q. We get a station very clearly for a few minutes and then they die away, until they can scarcely be heard at all, then they come back strong again. Please advise as to the possible cause and the remedy. E. L. O.

A. Fading is a phenomenon which scientists have not yet been able to overcome, at least in such a way that the method may be applied to broadcast receivers.

Q. (1) I heard station CJCX last night. Where is this station located? (2) Can radio frequency be used with a single-circuit regenerative set? (3) I have a single-circuit regenerative set. While it was mounted on a panel and board it gave excellent results, but I mounted it on another panel and put it in a cabinet and there is a shrill whistling noise which makes it impossible to use the head phones. What caused this difference? (4) Will a UV-199 tube give as good results in an amplifying circuit as a C-299? R. G.

A. (1) CJCX — Percival W. Shackelton, Olds, Alberta, Canada. (2) Yes, with more or less satisfactory results. The regeneration is sometimes difficult to control and the result is a great deal of "howling," but when this is overcome, it is an excellent combination. (3) In all probability the connections in your panel set are not exactly the same as those in the original set. Perhaps the noise is caused by parallel leads. Make every effort to have the wires in your set cross each other at right angles and separated as far as possible where they run parallel. Keep the grid leads as short as possible. (4) Yes. They are both the same, so far as construction and operation are concerned.

Q. My aerial is about 30 feet high at one end and 25 high at the other. It is 75 feet long and the lead-in is taken from the center. Please make any suggestions which might improve its efficiency. R. H.

A. Taking the lead-in from one end would no doubt give you much better results.

RADIO FOR AMATEUR AND EXPERT

RADIO A PART OF NEW COURSE AT ANNAPOLIS

"Communication" Added to Curriculum at Government Naval Academy.

At Annapolis, the Government Naval Academy, a new course has recently been added. It is a course in communication, a subject which of late years has come to compare with such essential subjects as navigation, engineering and seamanship. Among the essential divisions of the newly prescribed course for the midshipmen is radio in its practical application to naval and military, war and peace-time routine.

Previously, the students of the navy school learned only the principles of telephone, telegraph and radio communication as a part of their electrical course. Now communication has come into its own, and a new text book entitled "Notes on Naval Communication" has been introduced as part of the curriculum.

In an address introducing the study of communications Commander D. C. Bingham, Assistant Director of Naval Communications, outlined the new course and cited some of the problems devolving upon communications in fleet efficiency. He also reviewed progress and mentioned some of the possibilities hoped for in a perfect communication system.

His main theme showed the relation of communications in fleet efficiency to enable the midshipmen to achieve the best results from the newly issued text book, compiled by Lieut. A. C. Kidd, U. S. N., with the co-operation of the communication and engineering experts of the navy. Under radio, the book reviews both material and operation, touching on transmitting and receiving equipment, for the several types of naval sea and aircraft, installation, codes and procedure. Other chapters deal with shore and sea communications, including sound as well as radio, and the duties of a communication officer. One citation, perhaps will suffice to show the purpose of the new course: "The entire fabric of our national prosperity is erected upon a foundation of efficient communication." In another instance; the text reads: "However important communications may be to the nation in time of peace, in time of war they are vital."

Commander Bingham pointed out the essential part of communication; with diagrams of the navy's fleets before him, he showed how necessary it was to haze coordination of movement, which in turn depends upon perfect communication. Some of the problems within the scope of naval communications mentioned, were the operation and maintenance of the naval communication system afloat in a campaign in either or both oceans; the operation of radio facilities for mariners; the promotion of harmony between private and governmental radio systems; the guarding of the United States radio, cable and compass systems, and war-time as well as peace-time operation in the interests of Americans.

Owing to the range of radio and its rapidity, there is a tendency, he points out, to neglect and undervalue other means of communication, but the new course has been developed with the idea of showing radio's place, where it will augment rather than replace other means of intercourse. Every means of communication must be studied and developed, he insists, but he would reserve the air as free as possible, for important and urgent dispatches.

While it is not yet held imperative that naval communication officers be operators, they must know the types and capabilities of apparatus. Today a modern battleship has a main transmitter, two secondary transmitters, one auxiliary transmitter and one sound-telegraph transmitter. It also has one receiver for high-power shore stations, three receivers for information and orders, three receivers for divisions maneuvers and fire control, one receiver for battle-line signals, one radio compass and one listening device and sonic range finder. With this equipment, the battleship Colorado can, with proper personnel, simultaneously operate as follows: Transmit four radio messages, receive seven radio messages from vessels or shore stations, receive one message from a distant shore station, and obtain radio bearings on frequencies not being used by the ship for transmission.

The duties now assigned to communication officers of the navy require considerable knowledge of radio apparatus and experience in handling radio communication in naval operations. The navy is seeking to inculcate into the midshipmen the basic principles before they graduate as officers.

Worth-While Precaution.

When buying a complete set of expensive parts check up on the apparatus before using it. Goods made by manufacturers of undoubted reputation may become damaged in transit while being handled in the store, or while being carried home after purchase. This may happen only occasionally, but that fact does not help the fan who happens to be the one to possess such damaged apparatus. Open circuits in coils (such as the rotors and stators of variocoupler, variometers, tuning coils, fixed resistances, rheostats, etc.), and shorted, fixed and variable condensers are fatal to the operation of any set.

Better results are sometimes obtained when using separate "B" batteries for the detector and amplifier.

Improved Catswhisker.

A strip of tin foil one inch in length and three-quarters of an inch in width is cut into prongs resembling the teeth of a hair comb. The strip is rolled into a small tube or cylinder, and placed in the catswhisker support of the crystal detector. With the "teeth" spread apart and resting on the crystal it sometimes makes an improvement over the ordinary whisker.

AMERICAN FARMERS HAVE 145,000 RADIO OUTFITS

Greater Number Make Their Own and Average Homemade Set Cost Is $83.

There were 145,000 radio sets on farms in the United States Sept. 1, 1923, according to estimates based on a survey made by the Department of Agriculture. The figure is arrived at from questionnaire returns received from 780 out of 2850 agricultural counties.

Farmers who responded to the questionnaires gave data as to the kind of sets they were using and nearly all expressed their opinion that radio was of great practical value, especially in the dissemination of market news.

Of 1168 farmers who sent in answers 614 had built their sets and 554 had manufactured sets. There were 73 crystal sets, 243 one-tube sets, 104 two-tube sets and 748 sets with three or more tubes.

The average cost of the manufactured sets was $172.60 and the average cost of the homemade sets was $83. Crystal sets ranged in cost from $10.95 to $43.

RADIO HAS COME TO STAY, IS PREDICTION

Sales in This Year Will Double Those of 1923, Is Estimate by Authorities.

Prediction that the sales of ... teur radio equipment in the ... ed States this year will reach ... total retail value of $240,000,000 ... or double the figure for 1923 ... made in a recent issue of Electrical Merchandising.

In spite of current rumors ... public enthusiasm over the new ... a "passing fad" and is due ... slump, several electrical authorities ... who contributed a survey of ... sales for 1923 and to estimate ... probable sales for 1924 were ... to the editors that the sales ... year are due to climb above ... $120,000,000.

Sales of equipment for commercial stations, ships and broadcasting stations for this year will be ... $1,000,000, the same figure as sales ... of last year, according to the estimates.

A huge increase in the size of the radio audience is also expected. Figures compiled by the magazine show that the audience has grown from practically zero in 1920 to about 8,000,000 persons in 1923. An audience of 15,000,000 persons is expected by the end of this year.

"The broadcasting of speeches at the Republican and Democratic national conventions, radio telegraphic communication with the McMillan polar expedition, and the higher powers now being used by broadcasting stations, will greatly stimulate popular interest in the use of radio," O. H. Caldwell, editor of the publication, declared in commenting upon this year's radio situation.

"Radio communication is constantly becoming more stable, and the radio set is due to take its place in home and public life beside the phonograph, telephone, electric light, and motion pictures," he said. "The popular radio is here to stay."

Radiograms.

Cuba has 31 stations which broadcast radio programs. There are 18 stations in Havana.

Eighty colleges and universities in the United States operate broadcasting stations.

In Canada there are now 21 stations broadcasting, many of which are heard in the United States. They are all identified by their official call letter C.

Throughout the United States there are 3000 manufacturers of radio supplies, 1000 wholesale distributers and jobbers and 20,000 retail dealers of all kinds.

Woodrow Wilson was the first President of the United States to have his voice sent through space by radio. This event occurred July 4, 1919, when he was coming home from France on board the S. George Washington.

How to Revive Tubes.

If the "B" battery voltage is accidentally applied to the wrong tube the filament and the tube will not burn out they may be put inactive unless a plan is made to "boil" them. This consists of lighting them lighted in the ordinary a half hour or so with the "B" battery disconnected. This generally restores them to normalcy.

SUIT FILED AGAINST BROADCAST STATION

Illegal Use of Patented Apparatus Is Alleged by the A. T. & T. Company.

The American Telephone & Telegraph Co. which operates radio broadcasting station WEAF, in New York City, has begun legal action to protect its patent rights.

The action is of interest to all the 563 radio broadcasting stations now operating except 40 using equipment manufactured by the Western Electric Co., a subsidiary of the A. T. & T., and those few other stations which have obtained operating licenses from the company. The action was begun a week or 10 days ago in the Federal Court of the Southern District of New York.

The company sues for a permanent injunction against radio broadcasting station WHN, operated in New York City by Marcus Loew and George Schuebel, on the ground that the equipment of the station infringes on the patents of the A. T. & T. Co.

George Folk, a patent attorney for the company, said yesterday that the A. T. & T. owns the basic patents containing the fundamental principles of broadcasting as if is now known. Any equipment, to avoid infringement of the company's patents, he said, must be "distinctly different" from those now in use.

The Western Electric has sold 40 of its broadcasting devices. In addition, the A. T. & T. has granted some licenses to stations using other equipment. Mr. Folk declined to state what terms such stations had to meet in order to obtain licenses which would render them free from suit for infringement.

WEAF charges a fee to all those who wish to broadcast over that station. In the licenses issued by the company, one official said, other broadcasting stations are required to pledge themselves not to make any charges or broadcasting.

"We intend to protect our patents," Mr. Folk said. He declined to say whether this action would be followed by suits against all other stations said to be infringing on A. T. & T. patents. We can't tell yet," he added. "We hope it won't be necessary."

The charges made by WEAF for broadcasting privileges does not pay one-half the cost of the station, one official said.

H. B. Thayer, president of the A. T. & T. Co., in a public statement, emphasized the following points:

"This whole matter of entertainment of the public by wireless telephony is very new and regulations necessary for its preservation have not been established but have been under consideration by the only body which can legally provide for their establishment and that is the Congress of the United States. Whenever Congress acts we will be relieved of any obligation to protect the public. We have no desire for a monopoly of the air.

"Some of our patents which can be used in broadcasting have been infringed, many times carelessly and sometimes wantonly, yet we have offered to license the infringers at reasonable rates.

"The courts have held that unless the owners of patents protect them and prosecute infringements the patents lapse; so that, when licenses are not accepted, we must either prosecute infringers or in effect dedicate to the public valuable private property."

RADIO HAS COME TO STAY, IS PREDICTION

Sales in This Year Will Double Those of 1923, Is Estimate by Authorities.

Prediction that the sales of amateur radio equipment in the United States this year will reach the total retail value of $240,000,000, or double the figure for 1923, is made in a recent issue of Electrical Merchandising.

In spite of current rumors that public enthusiasm over the radio is a "passing fad" and is due for a slump, several electrical authorities who contributed a survey of the sales for 1923 and to estimate the probable sales for 1924 reported to the editors that the sales this year are due to climb another $120,000,000.

Sales of equipment for commercial stations, ships and broadcasting stations for this year will reach $1,000,000, the same figure as that of last year, according to the estimates.

A huge increase in the size of the radio audience is also expected. Figures compiled by the magazine show that the audience increased from practically zero in 1919 to about 8,000,000 persons in 1923. An audience of 15,000,000 persons is expected by the end of this year.

"The broadcasting of speeches of the Republican and Democratic national conventions, radio telegraphic communication with the McMillan polar expedition, and the higher powers now being used by broadcasting stations, will greatly stimulate popular interest in the use of radio," O. H. Caldwell, editor of the publication, declared in commenting upon this year's radio situation.

"Radio communication is constantly becoming more stabilized and the radio set is due to take its place in home and public life beside the phonograph, telephone, electric light, and motion pictures," he said. "The popular radio is here to stay."

Radiograms.

Cuba has 31 stations which broadcast radio programs. There are 18 stations in Havana.

Eighty colleges and universities in the United States operate radio broadcasting stations.

In Canada there are now 36 stations broadcasting, many of which are heard in the United States. They are all identified by their initial call letter C.

Throughout the United States there are 3000 manufacturers of radio supplies, 1000 wholesale distributers and jobbers and 25,000 retail dealers of all kinds.

Woodrow Wilson was the first President of the United States to have his voice sent through space by radio. This event occurred July 4, 1919, when he was coming home from France on board the U. S. George Washington.

How to Revive Tubes.

If the "B" battery voltage is accidentally applied to the vacuum tube the filament and the tubes do not burn out they may be made inactive unless a plan is made to "boil" them. This consists of leaving them lighted in the sockets for a half hour or so with the "B" battery disconnected. This generally restores them to normalcy.

SUIT FILED AGAINST BROADCAST STATION

Illegal Use of Patented Apparatus Is Alleged by the A. T. & T. Company.

The American Telephone & Telegraph Co. which operates radio broadcasting station WEAF, in New York City, has begun legal action to protect its patent rights.

The action is of interest to all the 563 radio broadcasting stations now operating except 40 using equipment manufactured by the Western Electric Co., a subsidiary of the A. T. & T., and those few other stations which have obtained operating licenses from the company. The action was begun a week or 10 days ago in the Federal Court of the Southern District of New York.

The company sues for a permanent injunction against radio broadcasting station WHN, operated in New York City by Marcus Loew and George Schuebel, on the ground that the equipment of the station infringes on the patents of the A. T. & T. Co.

George Folk, a patent attorney for the company, said yesterday that the A. T. & T. owns the basic patents containing the fundamental principles of broadcasting as it is now known. Any equipment, to avoid infringement of the company's patents, he said, must be "distinctly different" from those now in use.

The Western Electric has sold 40 of its broadcasting devices. In addition, the A. T. & T. has granted some licenses to stations using other equipment. Mr. Folk declined to state what terms such stations had to meet in order to obtain licenses which would render them free from suit for infringement.

WEAF charges a fee to all those who wish to broadcast over that station. In the licenses issued by the company, one official said, other broadcasting stations are required to pledge themselves not to make any charges or broadcasting.

"We intend to protect our patents," Mr. Folk said. He declined to say whether this action would be followed by suits against all other stations said to be infringing on A. T. & T. patents. We can't tell yet," he added. "We hope it won't be necessary."

The charges made by WEAF for broadcasting privileges does not pay one-half the cost of the station, one official said.

H. B. Thayer, president of the A. T. & T. Co., in a public statement, emphasized the following points:

"This whole matter of entertainment of the public by wireless telephony is very new and regulations necessary for its preservation have not been established but have been under consideration by the only body which can legally provide for their establishment and that is the Congress of the United States. Whenever Congress acts we will be relieved of any obligation to protect the public. We have no desire for a monopoly of the air.

"Some of our patents which can be used in broadcasting have been infringed, many times carelessly and sometimes wantonly, yet we have offered to license the infringers at reasonable rates.

"The courts have held that unless the owners of patents protect them and prosecute infringements the patents lapse; so that, when licenses are not accepted, we must either prosecute infringers or in effect dedicate to the public valuable private property."

Voice of Union Labor And the Radical Press

The Post-Dispatch prints herewith extracts from editorial or other articles in organs of labor unions and the Socialist and Communist Parties showing the tendency of thought on public questions among those bodies of citizens and indicating causes of social unrest.

THE OIL SCANDAL.
(From the Headgear Worker.)

No greater shock was received by the people for quite many years than that caused by the overboiling of the Teapot Dome oil. When the Senate finds "fraud and corruption" in the administration of the business of the nation in the highest places of the Government, when the most essential natural resources of the people are fraudulently delivered to private prey for a consideration—then it is indeed no wonder that the public is losing all faith in the machinery of the Government.

The game of democracy is conducted according to the rules; certain appearances must be observed. With these appearances thrown to the winds, the sham of democracy, corrupted, dominated and ruled by big business, as it is, is so painful and shocking as to be almost unbearable.

The high priests of the world for private profit and the commercialized press do everything in their power to fix the attention of the people on the "individual guilt" of some members of the President's Cabinet. Eagerly they offer to sacrifice—Fall, Denby, Daugherty, Roosevelt, and perhaps, some more of them who indiscreetly permitted themselves to be caught red-handed, in the act of raising the curtain of appearances, and thus giving the people a glimpse of its real autocratic capitalist rulers, revealing the ugly cynical face of the invisible government of high finance and big business in full and unlimited control of the strings directing the movements and policies of the marionettes of the visible Government. The clamor about bringing honesty back to Government can only divert the attention of the people from the real issue, whether this Government of

You Can Own a Castle

A man's house, says the ancient law, is his castle.

It may be a vine-covered cottage or a picturesque bungalow in the suburbs, a cozy or a palatial home in St. Louis, but if it be yours—if you can stand on your front porch and say, "This is mine!" then it's your castle, and you are a nobleman, a freeman, a landowner

Your home, in the eyes of the state, is sacred against the world.

As William Pitt, the great English statesman, once said: "The poorest man may, in his cottage, bid defiance to all the force of the Crown. It may be frail, its roof may shake, the wind may blow through it, the storms may enter — the rain may enter — but the King of England cannot enter; all his forces dare not cross the threshold of that home."

To drift from apartment to apartment, from house to house and never experience this sense of sanctuary and lordship is to miss the fundamental happiness of life.

George Washington loved America better because he owned Mt. Vernon. Can you imagine the Father of His Country living in a rented house?

Such men had homes with flowers and sunlight, bird music and firesides where they could go, after days of storm and stress, to rest and enjoy life.

Homes are castles in which we are safe; they are banks in which we can invest our earnings with assurance and profit; they are little realms in which we are kings and queens, free to work out our dreams.

Man may rent a house, but he must own a home.

St. Louis and its suburbs are rich in attractive homes, within reach of a modest salary or a princely income. Investigate the announcements that appear in the "Real Estate" columns of the Post-Dispatch today and every day. Own your own home. Be lord and master of one small part of the country in which you live.

The Post-Dispatch Carries Far More Real Estate Advertisements Than All Other St. Louis Newspapers Combined.

VOICE OF UNION LABOR AND THE RADICAL PRESS

and by the people is not really ruled by and for the multimillionaires and their retinue?

LAW AND ORDER MOBS.
(From the Illinois Miner, Labor.)

Prohibition is as popular as a skunk in a church. It was swindled on the American people during the war hysteria in the guise of a war measure. As a result we have the wholesale violation of the prohibition law. In our middle class circles the conversation revolves almost exclusively around bootleggers and pet recipes for home brew and hooch. While among the top notchers the possession of a jag is rapidly becoming the hallmark of gentility.

Of course, we cannot hound and harass our "better classes." We cannot break into the homes of our "best people," pull their wives out of bed, knock about their men folk and turn the houses upside down in search of booze. But anything seems to be good enough for the working people. Where they are concerned it is not even necessary to have the outrages committed by law enforcement officers. Howling mobs committed atrocities in Southern Illinois that would shame a war-drunk "Hun." Hospitals are shot up. Homes are burned down. Men are knocked about in their own rooms. Women are terrorized into insanity. Babies are scared to death and residences are looted—all in the name of law and order.

If the properly constituted authorities cannot enforce the prohibition law, then the proper thing to do is to repeal it. For a law that is not supported by the will of the majority is a public nuisance and so are the private mobs who seek to enforce it by lawlessness. Such things lead inevitably to retaliation, vendettas and anarchy. The volunteer law enforcement mobist may think he is a good citizen. But in reality he is a greater menace to law and order than the worst anarchist under the sun.

DO YOU GET IT?
(From Industrial Solidarity, I. W. W.)

Every once in a while you hear somebody complaining about the high cost of labor. "Look," says he, "lumberjacks in 1913 were glad to work for $3 a day and right now they demand $4, $4.50 and even more. 'Tain't right."

Answer him this way. The New York Wall Street Journal of Dec. 23, 1913, quotes the purchasing prices of some of these high wages. The dollar of 1913 would buy a certain amount of food, clothing and shelter. The dollar today will buy just 61 per cent of that sort of thing. If you got $3 in 1913 for a day's work, you ought to get $4.91 today for the same job, same conditions, etc.

Do you get it? We will say you don't. Wages have actually gone down, in almost every industry, and their fall is hidden by the fiction of bigger money values.

The prices are different for different things. For clothing you get 52 per cent as much for your dollar today as you did in 1913; you get 68½ per cent as much food; you get 61 per cent as much room rent, or you get 60 per cent as much shoes.

But if you are a rich man, a millionaire, say, and your expenditures are largely for luxuries, why, it's different. You can get 11 per cent more automobiles and 23 per cent more tires for your money now than you could get for the same amount in 1913.

GRAFT AND CAPITALIST POLITICS.
(From the New Leader, Socialist.)

Whatever may be the outcome of the oil scandal, we may be sure that it will follow the usual course of these affairs. A "goat" is generally found as a sacrifice to the "moral sentiment" of the country. In a few months the episode is forgotten and the governing machine again functions quietly in the interest of the ruling classes.

On the other hand, nothing is to be gained by imprisoning a few respechable thieves. The philosophy of capitalist politics is that rich natural resources should be subjectto private control or exploitation. This is called "development." Such control and exploitation is a frank use of Government for enriching a handful of those to whom such control and exploitation is voted.

In such circumstances there is an enormous temptation for graft. . . . All the circumstance sthat go with the philosophy of capitalist politics breed the Falls, Sinclairs and Dohenys.

In view of this, the prosecution of grafters to wipe out graft is like whitewashing a pimple to cure smallpox. . . . A Socialist policy recognizing these rich natural resources as the property of the nation and serving the welfare of all would meet the situation; that that lies in the future, when the two-party machine of capitalism is faced by a powerful bloc in Congress representing the workers of the United States.

RADIO BROADCASTING IN JAPAN

To Be Conducted Under Rigid Government Regulations.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Feb. 3.—Radio broadcasting is to be commenced in March in Japan, where hitherto communications have been strictly limited by the Government. Like commercial radio, the broadcasting will be under stringent regulations. At first the Department of Communications will undertake the activity on a limited scale from stations in Tokio and Osako only. Later, it is believed, the first independent station will be established here.

Receiving instruments will not be permitted to be carried about, as is often done in America, though they may be attached permanently to vehicles or boats. During the day music and entertainment features will not be permitted in the air. The rule, however, may be relaxed on Sundays and national holidays.

Study of 18-Year-Old Kansas Girl Psychic Now Undergoing Tests in New York

Flapper Seeress Baffles Psychologists and Detectives by Accurately Describing Events She Never Heard Of

Eugene Dennis, Regarded as a Prodigy at Age of 2 in Her Home Town of Atchison, Now Amazes a Less Impressionable Community With Divinations Which Police Investigators Declare Are 75 Per Cent Correct—She Scorns Methods of Spiritualists, Uses No Fortune Telling Paraphernalia, but Describes Simply Her Impressions as They Are Brought Before Her Mind, by What Psychologists Call "Vibratory Intuition."

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 8.

FROM Kansas, unromantic land of cyclones, prairie dogs and packing houses, has come what New York might least expected to import from the Jayhawk State—a schoolgirl mystic, a bobbed-haired actress with a boy's name, Eugene Dennis, who peers over the fence into the future with as much facility as she glances backward into the past. And the metropolis is marveling much that prosaic, earthly Kansas could deliver such a product.

But Eugene Dennis, from Atchison, on the banks of the Missouri, is not an ordinary product even of such a versatile commonwealth as Kansas. For most of the 18 years of her life she has astounded her home community with the same weird powers that now are bewildering a more sophisticated region. As a toddling child she set her neighborhood aghast with an uncanny ability to discover lost jewelry, lost children, anything lost or stolen. She described pasts and predicted futures with an accuracy that defied the charge of trickery and after exhaustive tests in Omaha and Kansas City she has come, like Ichinvar, "out of the West" to tell New Yorkers things about themselves that none of them ever thought a Kansas native would discover.

While she is waiting for a final and thorough examination of her phenomena in the laboratory of the American Psychical Institute, which is the main object of her New York visit, she remains at the Hotel Claridge with her mother, Mrs. N. G. Dennis, demonstrating from time to time her ability as a solver of crimes and a forecaster concerning such cloudy events as the oil scandal and the coming presidential election. At her last demonstration recently before an audience of newspaper reporters, police officials and Dr. Hereward Carrington, secretary of the Psychical Institute, she delved into politics and personalities and crimes with an intimacy that amazed her hearers. She talked on subjects ranging from Dot King to McAdoo and from the Elwell case to international marriages. Without even entering the world laboratory, with its mysterious delicate instruments capable of detecting the approach of "astral bodies" and measuring thought waves, she was able to convince most of her guests in one sitting that she possesses powers of clairvoyancy far less questionable than most of those which have been exhibited in the curtained parlors of European mystics.

No Spectacular Trances

There is something fascinating about this brown-eyed, merry-faced miss who talks of events with the detachment and simplicity of a child—something more than the childlike charm ordinarily possessed by those who tell of tomorrow. There is nothing of the spectacular or the theatrical in her method of looking over the wall of the unknown. There is no trance, no darkened cabinets, no fortune telling cards or crystals, no red velvet curtains. She simply settles back in her chair or against the head of her bed and looks vaguely past her hearers, with an expression that seems to indicate listening rather than seeing; then comes a description of the events as they are enacted again in her vision.

It was the recent marriage of Count Salm to Millicent Rogers that first caught her psychic eye at the Claridge the other day. "That news sounded good to father," she said. "I mean Count Salm saying he would kill his wife's father six months to come with Millicent's share of his estate or would get a divorce. You see, that girl is sick and tired of her husband, but he wants to make the world think that he is the one who is doing the turning down. My! but her father was mad when he heard that she had married the Count."

How She Found the Vanity Case

The hearers were interested but not much impressed with this bit of information. Some of the facts revealed were fairly obvious. Her statements might well be true, but seemed to represent guessing or a digest of newspaper gossip rather than clairvoyancy. More "readings" were necessary if Eugene were to validate her claim to supernormal powers. And they were immediately forthcoming, for this jolly mystic can make her observations swiftly.

In the Claridge Hotel there happened to be a guest—a Mrs. Nate Leipsig, wife of a magician—who had lost a gold vanity case valued at $90. She had searched her rooms for it in vain and was convinced that it was stolen. The hotel manager had reported the matter to a detective agency, but was willing to give Miss Dennis a trial if she should like to demonstrate her ability for her guests with a real case. The girl was escorted to the Leipsigs' rooms with Dr. Carrington, the hotel manager and the other spectators trailing eagerly along behind her.

After thinking intently for a moment Miss Dennis stated flatly that the vanity case had not been stolen. It had been mislaid, mixed with some white things—papers, she thought. Leipsig insisted that the room had been thoroughly searched, but it was searched again, revealing nothing, as before. Then the girl inquired if the laundry had been taken out.

Told that the maid had removed the bundle the day before, she announced positively that the vanity case would be found among white clothes. Away the party dashed for the linen room. The Leipsig laundry package was sought out and opened. Among the white clothes they found the vanity case. It was it, a pocket of Mrs. Leipsig's pajamas.

Miss Dennis' prestige had gained appreciably when the party returned to her rooms for further discussion of events, past, present and future, and there was credence placed in her statement when she launched into politics with the declaration that "Daugherty will quit his job soon; he's tired now.

She had still more to say about affairs at Washington. "Some of the folks down there," she continued, "who are most anxious for investigations to be made of others had better look out for themselves. They are the ones who are in the deepest.

"They are making a lot of fuss about McAdoo, but he isn't so bad. He didn't get any more out of Doheny than some others did."

Talked Readily of Murder Mysteries

But in spite of McAdoo's innocence of greed or graft, she is sure he will not be the next President. But neither will Reed nor Coolidge, if Eugene's psychic eye is clear. For that office is going to a dark horse, a Democrat who will "come out strong just before election time with a publicity campaign." He is dark-complexioned, of medium height and is a good talker, and there is the clairvoyant's word for it that he is a good man for the office and has ample wealth of his own.

The discussion drifted from the future back to past events. What about the Hall-Mills case, the Dot King mystery, the Louise Lawson tragedy and the murder of Joseph B. Elwell?

"More than one knows who killed the minister and the woman you have described," she said, turning her clairvoyant searchlight from governmental affairs to crime. "It is someone who ran across a field afterwards. The minister's wife did a lot of crying just before the murder. It wasn't either of her brothers who did it, but it was justified.

"Jealousy prompted the murder of this girl Louise (Louise Lawson). One of the two men who went into her apartment that morning was a 'doper'. The other—the one who killed her—looks like a Swede. He is tall and blond. He also looks like an iceman. An older man was responsible for them doing it—someone well to do, who was fond of her. I see some man who is under suspicion—I see a man who was with her, who lives in another town.

"It was for a very different reason that the other girl (Dot King) was murdered. This was done by a man she knew well. He is young and energetic and hopped off into a car he had in a side street that morning. He's dark, with a small mustache and dark eyes. His teeth show a little between his lips, even when he is not smiling. He was engaged in selling stocks or bonds and is or has been in jail for forgery. He depended on the girl for money and was brutal and bossy to her. It got to be more than she could stand; he demanded too much; so she rebelled and he killed her.

A "lady" Miss Dennis declared, killed Elwell, a "lady" to whom he had sworn to be true. She "had called upon him, only to find him with another." This "lady," she says, "not of society, but connected with it," is now "across the water." She is a "nice girl and should not be condemned for her act, but should get a medal for it," since Elwell "ruined many lives of young people." When he was found dead there was "something missing about his hair and teeth."

MISS EUGENE DENNIS,

The 18-year-old Kansas school girl who is mystifying New York psychologists and crime investigators with her uncanny psychic readings. She does not resort to trances or weird paraphernalia for effects, but, as she puts it, describes impressions that appear before her mind "just as anybody would describe a movie."

"Just Like Describing a Movie"

Just what it is that goes on in her subconscious mind, giving her the power of divining things unknown to her conscious mind, Eugene Dennis does not know and frankly admits it. She does not attempt to explain the process beyond the fact that it comes to her "just like the memory of a movie comes back to one who has seen it." She feels no physical or mental strain and can demonstrate her powers at any time, but she does best, she says, for persons she does not know, because acquaintance with her subject allows knowledge in her conscious mind to interfere with her psychic impressions. She further asserts that her powers work best when she feels she is of real help to someone.

"Remember," Miss Dennis warns her audiences, "I am not infallible. I make mistakes. I often make errors in describing persons—color of their hair or complexion—just like anybody would make mistakes in describing a moving picture. But my predictions are more apt to be correct.

"I don't have to be with people to tell them of their environment, their friends, their business affairs and their futures. I can get it by talking with them over the telephone or from their letters. I don't know anything about Conan Doyle, or his hero, Sherlock Holmes, or about spiritualism in general. I have never bothered with it. Nor have I ever seen any spooks. And another thing: I don't tell strangers their names. All the fakers do that."

The mother of the girl says since the age of 2, when Eugene startled her family by remarks or predictions which were either true or came true, she has exhibited remarkable psychic power. But she, like the daughter, refrains from attempting to explain it. Some psychologists call it "vibratory intuition." This was the term applied by Prof. Gardner Murphy of Columbia University, before whose psychology class Miss Dennis appeared following the demonstration at the hotel.

Got Off the Track Occasionally

There the girl presented a problem, for although some of the questions put to her by the class were answered with uncanny accuracy, others found her entirely off the track and apparently guessing wildly.

Miss Denpis sat on the rostrum beside Prof. Murphy, completely self-possessed and smiling slightly most of the time. But the smile was all of the lips and not at all in the eyes. When she looked at her questioners, her eyes narrowed to the closest kind of scrutiny. She looked them up and down for several moments before she framed the answers to the questions put to her and always she riveted her gaze upon the questioner's face.

One woman in the class put this question to Miss Dennis:

"Can you tell me something about an event that happened to me in the fall of 1919?"

Miss Dennis looked hard at the little woman putting the question and then slowly and hesitantly said:

"Yes, I can. A man you knew disappeared at that time and went far away from you, but not out of the country. He had light hair and it was partly away from the side of his head."

"Did you ever hear," said Miss Dennis to her questioner, "that this man had a blow on the head that might have affected his mentality?"

"Yes," said the questioner, in a very low voice and evidently much moved at what Miss Dennis had said to her.

"Well, this man probably never will come back," continued Miss Dennis. "He is not, I think, responsible for what he is doing, but probably is wandering about not knowing where he is."

"That is all true, or likely to be," said the little woman, now quite shaken by her experience.

But another of her questioners fairly caught Miss Dennis napping.

This girl asked her:

"Ought I to go to China?"

"No, you know nothing about the country; the atmosphere will not agree with you because you have never been there," replied Miss Dennis.

Her questioner smiled broadly and said:

"Strange, because I was born and brought up in China."

Miss Dennis explained that something had gone wrong with the "vibrations."

Another girl asked her if she should undertake a business career.

"No," said Miss Dennis; "you are meant for the home life and will have five children."

Of equal, or perhaps even greater, interest were Miss Dennis' answers to some of the personal questions put to her by a reporter immediately after her morning at Columbia.

Second Guess a Queer One

"Am I married?" asked the reporter.

"Yes," replied Miss Dennis; "and you have been married eight years. You have a son 6 years old and your wife is a small woman with blue eyes, whose nature is most intense."

All this was true. However, Miss Dennis' knowledge of a newspaper man's activities (generally) or her "vibratory intuition" about them was queer, for she ventured the information that the reporter had been in financial or bonding operations, which made him smile.

Eugene gained most fame here, however, when she appeared before the Police Department to be put through as severe a test as could be devised. For two hours she faced Commissioners Faurot and Shaw, Inspector Fay and several other noted criminologists and answered questions. When she had finished they declared her ability was proved beyond a doubt. She slipped now and then on detail, but Inspector Fay is authority for the statement that her replies were "more than 75 per cent correct," and that she will be used again in an effort to solve some of the current police problems. He was able to see no explanation of how she could detail these cases as she did except her own explanation of an unknown power. She had never heard of them before.

Inspector Fay had six cases unknown even to Deputy Commissioner Faurot. He would say: "There was a man shot uptown," and "Now I am asking you about a fire in which several people were burned." Then Miss Dennis would gradually develop the story of the crime. So vaguely were the cases worded that not even newspaper men intimately acquainted with them were able to tell to which ones Inspector Fay referred until Miss Dennis had developed the story.

ANSWERING WHAT IS ON EVERY TONGUE "WHO ARE THE McLEANS?

Fortune's Favorites, They Had Colorful Career Until Oil Scandal Spattered Up Head of Family

When the Hardings Went to the White House, the Proprietor of Two Newspapers and His Wife, Each Possessing Millions, Became Their Social Mentors, Having Free and Easy Access to the Executive Mansion and Holding the Full Confidence of the Occupants, Whose Chums They Were.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 8.

"WHO is this Edward B. McLean? Who is this fellow who lent, or perhaps did not lend, $100,000 to Albert B. Fall? Those telegrams lately made public may have much significance for the final outcome of the oil scandal? Where have we heard his name before?"

Queries and questionings such as these have no doubt forced themselves upon many an ardent and indignant follower of the daily news from Washington, as revelations and counter-revelations follow on one another's heels with breathless rapidity and as the stirrings of the relentless senatorial probes bring more and more hidden dealings and implications to light in this the most sensational upheaval of a generation in our national political circles.

The doings of every man who ever had the remotest connection with that central quartet —Fall, Daugherty, Doheny and Sinclair—are being mercilessly turned out for public inspection. The oil inquiry is like a growing octopus, daily sending out new and longer tentacles to draw into its digestive organs the unwilling quarry. And the insatiable curiosity of the public may be heard insistently asking again and again, how did he come to be involved? What is the personality behind this new name now suddenly associated with politics and money-bags?"

MRS. EDWARD B. McLEAN,
The former Miss Evelyn Walsh, whose marriage to McLean in 1908 joined two colossal fortunes. She is one of Mrs. Harding's closest friends.

The Hardings (left) and the McLeans photographed on their last trip to Florida. The boy in the picture is John R. McLean, named for his grandfather.

What the Name Calls Up

This Edward B. McLean, for instance, who just lately has assumed perhaps the spotlight position in the whole affair. Just who is McLean? Perhaps, as the public digs into the depths of its recollections, it may be reminded of Friendship, one of the show-places, an enormous estate shown to every visitor to the capital; also, perhaps in a vaguer way, of the huge and splendid Walsh residence on Dupont Circle.

Edward Beale McLean—the name may have recalled a figure prominent in society, owner of crack horses at this bygone show or that, or it may perhaps have brought to mind the history of the notorious "Hope diamond," which was said to carry death or lurid tragedy to its owner; or again a romantic elopement or a ghastly motor accident or a brilliant Washington entertainment wherein the President and glittering foreign plenipotentiaries figured, or a million-dollar houseboat on some river in Florida, or a newspaper whose policy was the policy of a nation, or a "$100,000,000 baby," heavily guarded and tragically lost.

All these pictures, indeed, and many more besides are part of the spectacular life of Edward McLean. In the midst of a vast jangling of striking personalities, his character and career stand out as perhaps the most romantic. For he came into a world which offered him from the very start almost every conceivable kind of opportunity. As to the uses to which he put these opportunities—well, let some future biographer say the final word and pronounce the final judgment. Let us merely review briefly the facts as we have them at this date. The story they tell, quite unembellished, is arresting enough:

McLean's father, John R. McLean, had inherited a part ownership in the Cincinnati Enquirer, one of the most influential Middle Western newspapers, and had subsequently bought out his partners. He had married Miss Emily S. Beale, daughter of Gen. Edward F. Beale, had become prominent in Ohio politics, acquired the Washington Post and had for a time owned the New York Morning Journal. By the time of his death, in 1916, he had accumulated a fortune extravagantly calculated to be a hundred million dollars. This figure, however, is probably a highly exaggerated one.

The Proverbial Silver Spoon

In 1883 his son, Edward Beale, was born—born to inherit two great newspapers and an income estimated by some at a million a year. Power and wealth, the objects of most men's strivings, were already there for him to seize. Little is known of his early life except that he received a thorough education at the hands of private tutors and was brought up in the best and most luxurious surroundings and traditions of Washington official and residential society.

Few people know very much about the doings of young McLean before he arrived at the age of 22. He himself is very reticent when pressed for biographical details (he even refuses today to state his age) and one can merely assume that he did the things that young men of wealth and family do; played around with the "younger set," wintered at Palm Beach and summered at Newport.

But shortly after his arrival at maturity he seems to have taken a very genuine interest in his father's and grandfather's profession of journalism. He knew he was to inherit his father's papers and forthwith applied himself to the learning of his job. Although he drove to his offices every morning in a huge yellow sport car, there is ample evidence to show that he actually "chased down" assignments like any other ordinary reporter for the Washington Post. Testifying at a famous Washington murder trial, he described himself as a "cub reporter" of a single year's experience. Then his interest in politics (also inherited) led him to cover state and national party conventions; and thus he gradually trained himself to be a genuine journalist and editor and not merely a figurehead.

Eloped to Avoid Fuss

Then, in 1908, when he was 25, he suddenly flashed into the public eye and has remained there, more or less, ever since. This was the occasion of his precipitate marriage to Miss Evelyn Walsh, daughter and heir of Thomas F. Walsh, the multimillionaire Colorado mining magnate who had risen from humble origin in Tipperary, Ireland, to become the partner and close personal friend of King Leopold of Belgium. The tragic death of Miss Walsh's only brother, Vinson, in an automobile accident at Newport left her not only a temporary invalid, but the sole heir to her father's immense fortune.

A wedding between the two young people had been arranged; it was to be a gorgeous spectacle as befitted the marriage of two considerable fortunes as well as of a charming couple. Preparations were perfected for an elaborate ceremony and reception in the Walsh home on Dupont Circle in Washington. But McLean and his fiancee suddenly decided that they didn't want any fuss. So they quietly eloped from Wolhurst, a Walsh estate, to Denver, 12 miles away, and were married. And the parents promptly forgave all.

The McLeans came to Washington, however, and soon made up in full for the disappointment that their quiet nuptials had caused among the socially elect there. They entertained most lavishly; their receptions, dances and dinners outdid in magnificence and prodigality anything that had ever been attempted at the capital.

On Dec. 19, 1909, their first child, their first "hundred million dollar baby," was born. This child, Vinson Walsh McLean, was reared as few children are. Surrounded by nurses, governesses, flunkies, tutors, guards and detectives, wheeled about in a specially constructed steel go-cart, rocked to sleep in a gold cradle, one of King Leopold's gifts, amused with toys and presents whose total value may have reached a sum of six figures, protected from every possibility of boredom, ill health or kidnaping, the infant led an existence that might be matched only by the childhood of some ancient Eastern Emperor. On the death of Thomas Walsh in 1910 and that of the elder McLean in 1916 he actually became heir presumptive of a staggering inheritance.

But the boy was destined never to come into his own. In 1919, while playing on the beautiful estate of his parents, called Friendship, on the outskirts of Washington, he suddenly eluded his guards, dashed out beyond the gates and into the roadway and was run down and killed by a passing Ford touring-car.

Some Laid Tragedy to "Hoodoo" Gem

Some people pointed out a rather fantastic but none the less striking and extraordinary reason for this tragic occurrence. They pointed out that eight years before McLean had bought the notorious "Hope diamond" from Cartier of Paris at a price believed to be $200,000 and had presented it to his wife for wear and display at some particularly scintillating Washington function.

For years his jewel had been a "hoodoo." All of its former owners had come to grief in some way. Jean Baptiste Tavernier had been torn to pieces by wild dogs; M. Fouquet had died in prison; Marie Antoinette had been guillotined; Sultan Abdul Hamid had been deposed, and so on. And now the McLeans had lost their beloved heir. It was most fantastic and pathetic, but the unhappy parents consoled themselves with their three other children and soon assumed again the social leadership among Washington's "resident set." They had risen to great prominence during President Taft's administration and were famous for their matchless gold plate, an inheritance from Leopold.

Meanwhile McLean was gradually becoming a real, although "unofficial" power in national Republican politics, partly through his social activities and partly through the tremendous influence which any modern newspaper wields. A close personal friendship grew up between him and the late President Harding, possibly because they were both enthusiastic journalists, in the days when Harding was merely a Senator from Ohio, and Mrs. McLean became an inseparable companion of Mrs. Harding.

After the eight years of comparative submersion which naturally accompanied the waf-ascendancy of Wilson and the Democratic regime, McLean again achieved great prominence and a spotlight position in 1920 when Harding and the Republicans rode into the Capitol on a popular landslide. Edward B. McLean was announced as the chairman of the Inaugural Committee. And he was, of course, the right man to invest the triumph with all the necessary pomp and circumstance. Thereafter the President and the first lady were frequent guests at Ocean View Cottage, the McLean dwelling at Palm Beach (a house which is at present figuring largely in the investigations into alleged conferences between notables which are said to have taken place there recently).

Shortly before Harding's death McLean turned over to him for his use in moments of much needed rest and recreation the huge Friendship place. Three hundred thousand dollars was to be spent in converting its gardens into golf links for the executive. But

PURE BLOOD FROM YOUTHFUL MOUNTAINEERS TO SAVE CITY DISEASE VICTIMS

HOW 50 PINTS WERE SACRIFICED BY BOYS AND GIRLS OF BEREA COLLEGE FOR NEW YORK CHILDREN

BEREA, Ky., March 8.

THE students of Berea College were at chapel. The Scripture lesson that morning was something about sacrifice. It had deep meaning for them because they come from the mountains, where sacrifice is the law of life, and they are students of an institution founded and sustained in sacrifice.

And then, with the devotions over, came the head physician of the college and stood before them and spoke to them in his quiet, professional way. There were children in New York City, many children of many races, who would die or go through life with impairment of faculties unless blood was provided for serum. It must be the blood of adult convalescents, blood untainted by vice. It could not be obtained in required quantity otherwheres.

It was a call for American volunteers to shed their blood in order that the children of the nations might live and have their chance. A hundred hands were raised. Fifty-nine students were found to meet all requirements. And so Saturday afternoon and Sunday morning in the operating room of the college hospital they gave the wealth of their veins and a man carried away to New York 50 pints of the best and purest blood in America, the largest quantity ever collected for medical purposes.

Unique among colleges is Berea, which for 70 years in the shadows of the Cumberlands escarpment, has served the sons and daughters of the Appalachian Highlands. Founded by John G. Fee, a Kentucky pioneer preacher, and J. A. R. Rogers, a Connecticut schoolmaster, in a clapboard-roofed frame shack, it has grown until now there are 90 buildings on 6000 acres of campus, farm and forest, with a staff of 140 workers, in 82 separate departments, serving 2000 students.

Room and Board for $3.10 a Week

To Berea, through the years, have come boys and girls and men and women out of the mountains of Kentucky, Tennessee, Georgia and Alabama, the Virginias and the Carolinas, afoot and mule-back, any way that they could travel, knowing that Berea would not turn them away, though the only tuition they could bring was the toil of their hands. Tuition, indeed, has never been asked and to this day is not asked, although the college receives no aid from any state or society, and it supplies furnished rooms with light and heat for 60 cents a week and board for $2.50 a week and a full year's schooling, including all food and shelter and fees, for $146, in foundational academic, normal, vocational and college courses.

From 98 counties where the native-born stock is 95 per cent and from 38 of the roughest mountain counties where the native-born stock is 99 per cent, and from all through the mountains where survive, untainted by civilization's vices, descendants of pioneers, they come to Berea for the education which the hard life of the highlands has denied them, not only boys and girls and young men and young women, but older men and women who enter the foundation grades to be taught as children are taught.

As came a mountain man, a widower at 26, to enter the grades for an education that would enable him to better provide for his motherless child. Or as came the girl of 20, for 10 years the home-maker in her father's cabin, to begin at the fifth grade, for which her meager mountain education had barely fitted her. Or as came the boy who walked 90 miles along the creek beds and over the ridges, and through Boone Gap to Berea, who later took his turn with the heavy artillery in France and then returned to the academy. Or as came another boy, now a Major in the United States Army, walking 90 miles and leading his cow to finance his education.

Escape Even Childhood's Diseases

Splendid, straight-standing, broad-shouldered, deep-chested, with minor impairments, perhaps, heritage of ignorance and neglect and hardship, but pure-blooded, because, coming from the wide spaces, they have not known the contagions of the crowded places, by sheer isolation escaping even childhood's common ailments.

So it happens that, in the closer contacts of college life, these fine young people fall easy victims to epidemics of childhood diseases. And so it happened, during the winter, that many a strapping youth and strong-limbed girl suffered the humiliation of a losing fight, to the point of incapacitation and isolation and the undesired solicitude of the medical staff, with measles.

It was not easy to impress them with the fact that measles, after all, is a dangerous disease, leaving impairments of eye, ear, nose or throat, or leading on to bronchial pneumonia and death. They submitted to the necessary treatment with poor grace and clamored for release from health restrictions.

Dr. Robert H. Cowley, for many years head physician of the college, pondered the serum possibilities of the unique measles situation. Five years ago he and his assistants were at death grips with cerebro-spinal meningitis. About 35 of the students were stricken with the dread disease and 20 of the cases were exceedingly serious. Serum was used on a greater scale than ever before and there were no deaths from the malady, although two died from after complications. After that he had been, more than ever, interested in the serum treatment for various diseases.

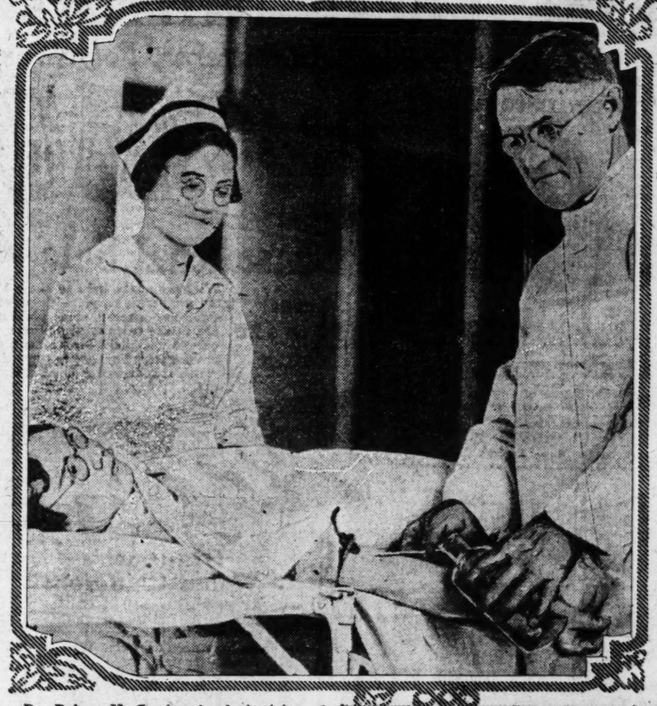
Difficulty of Obtaining Blood

It occurred to him that the unusual measles epidemic among his students would afford material for study to the specialists who, in Eastern hospitals, were battling for the lives and bodily soundness of children under 3 years of age, easiest victims of the disease. He wrote to the Rockefeller Institute at New York. The answer came that the method was established and in process of being applied with very gratifying results, but that the great difficulty was to get the required blood from the rare adult measles convalescents free from tubercular and venereal taint. Dr. Cowley's letter, the communication said, had been turned over to the research department of the New York City Board of Health.

That was how the New York Board of Health learned that down here where the Cumberlands raise their frowning front from Silver Creek Valley at the edge of the bluegrass plain there was abundance of the blood that was sorely needed, pure blood except for the measles constituent needed for a serum to immunize children or so modify the infection as to avert sequelae.

It was good news for the research men of the Board of Health and for the children of New York. It was such good news that a telegram was sent that day to Dr. Cowley apprising him that a man was on the way, who would take from the Berea students all the blood that they were willing to give.

Next morning Dr. Cowley went to chapel and at the close of the exercises he told the students what he had done and that, as a result, a man was coming from New York, as fast as he could come, for blood.



Dr. Robert H. Cowley, head physician of Berea College, demonstrating the operation of draining a pint of blood from a Berea student.

He explained, very simply, that men of science were trying a new method of dealing with measles in the crowded children's hospitals of New York. For the serum used they needed the blood of measles convalescents above the age of 15. Any students who had recovered from measles within the past year and were otherwise healthy were eligible.

They were to feel themselves under no constraint, but such as were willing to offer their blood would be aiding science in its struggle with disease and would be helping to save the lives of children in New York.

"As many as will volunteer," he said, "hold up your hands."

A Hundred Hands Went Up

The response was instant. Hands went up all over the crowded chapel, a hundred of them, the hands probably of all present who were eligible. In the hard life of the mountains boys and girls are trained to quick decisions on elemental questions. This was an elemental question. There was no hesitation.

Dr. Cowley, knowing the students of Berea as he does, had not doubted what the response would be. But, man of science and humanitarian that he is, he was moved by the readiness of the young men and young women to lend aid to the advancement of science and their eagerness to help humanity. He bowed, with a touch of humility in the presence of this spirit of sacrifice. There was an instant of tense silence, while the hands were still held high, and then the doctor told the volunteers to write their names and hand them to him or to the heads of their departments, and await instructions.

The New York man arrived shortly after noon on Saturday. He was elated when told that about a hundred were ready to be bled for science and humanity, about equally divided as to sex. He thought best to stipulate that eligibles be limited to those who had recovered within three months. That brought the number down to 59.

Three operating tables were made ready at the hospital, with student nurses in attendance. The volunteers were summoned from their Saturday afternoon work or play. Tests were made for tubercular or venereal taint, with uniformly negative results.

Prone on the operating table, an arm of each subject was bared. Constriction caused distention of the vein at the inside of the elbow. The surgeons passed from one to another, puncturing the vein and draining the blood into containers held by the nurses. From 10 to 15 minutes were required for draining the contribution of something less than a pint from each.

No Anesthetic and No Flinching

Most of the students ranged in age from 16 to 23. A few were older. No anesthetic was used and the pain was borne without recoil or complaint.

The work was continued Sunday and by noon the harvest of blood was 50 pints, safely sealed for transportation to New York.

None of the students suffered ill effects. With no discomfiture except a soreness of the elbow, which quickly passed, they resumed their work Monday as though nothing had happened, attending their classes and doing the stint of two hours' physical labor which each student must perform whether in need of employment or not.

There was rejoicing in New York when the man returned with 50 pints of the best mountain blood, tinctured only by recent convalescence from measles. It was an unprecedented quantity for immunizing and modifying and saving the children from death or defects, and for further experimentation with a view to extending the advantages of the serum. For as yet the demonstrated results are confined to a comparatively limited field. It is known that six cubic centimeters of serum will immunize, but only for four weeks, necessitating, if immunity is to be maintained, repeated use of the serum at intervals of four weeks, a burdensome and impractical routine. To avoid this it is the practice to administer three cubic centimeters, which does not immunize, but so modifies the disease, if infection occurs, as to avert probably fatal broncho-pneumonia or middle-ear trouble or other impairment. The light attack, however, under the modification exercised by the serum, immunizes from subsequent attacks.

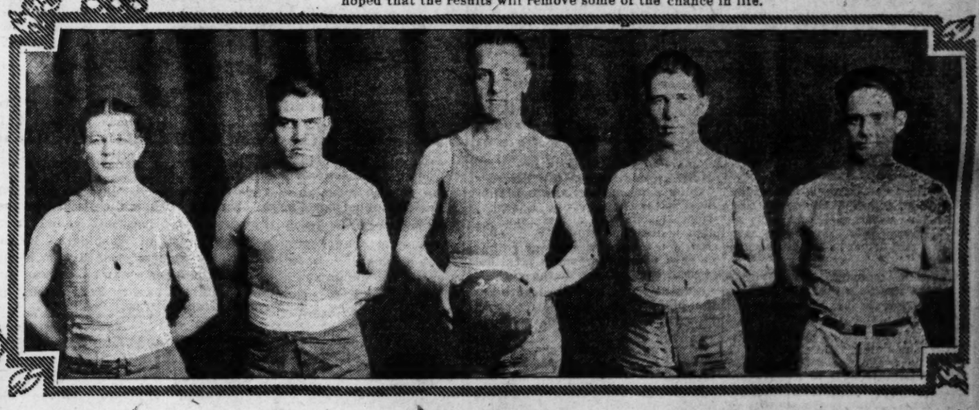
Berea's "Changeless Task"

One of the things not established is the length of time after recovery that the blood of an adult convalescent remains potent for serum purposes. Usually, where blood has been obtained, it has not been feasible to keep the subject under observation with a view to determining the period of potency. Now, however, it is planned to make later tests of the blood of the students, which are expected to clear up this uncertainty and it is hoped that the results will remove some of the difficulty that has existed because of the necessity of being limited in the extraction of blood to recent convalescents.

When William James Hutchins was inaugurated president of Berea on October 22, 1920, he pledged himself to the accomplishment of Berea's "Changeless task in the midst of times of change."

"We shall," he declared, "continue to keep the path from the cabin and the cottage to our college wide and open. And no boy or girl shall be excluded from the opportunities which Berea has to offer, because of poverty. Always our doors shall be widest open to the man who has had the least educational chance. If then, there is room for more prosperous students, they may be welcomed, but the student who flaunts his prosperity shall be taught simplicity and democracy, or, if unteachable, shall leave the school. Our changeless task is to put within the reach of the mountain boys and girls the opportunity of finding and forming friendships with the best that is in the world; the opportunity of finding one's self in one's work; the opportunity of binding one's self in friendship and in power to the friendly power behind the world."

By sacrifice the path has been kept wide and open, bringing to Berea the best young manhood and womanhood of the best American blood, freely shed now for the healing of the children of the nations, in the far city, saving them from death and giving them their chance in life.



Berea's basketball team, made up of that vigorous type of broad-shouldered, deep-chested young men who are products of the mountains.

From such cabin homes as these come most of the students of Berea College.

ANSWERING WHAT IS ON EVERY TONGUE— "WHO ARE THE McLEAN'S?"

way as McLean himself. John F. Major, one of his confidential men, who sent most of the messages that kept McLean, while in Palm Beach, intimately informed about the doings of the Senate Oil Committee, used to be a bartender.

The story goes that when Major applied for a job at the Washington Post, some years ago, he was told that he could go to work at $25 a week. He countered by suggesting the flip of a coin to determine whether he should work for nothing or $50 a week. He won.

McLean is one of the few men in the country, if not the only one, with his own private golf teacher employed the year around. This man is one of the best in the business. McLean pays him $10,000 a year.

McLean Made a Secret Agent

It was established in testimony this week that soon after Harding came into office McLean was made a secret agent of the Department of Justice and give the code book of the Bureau of Investigation. As such, he is "a dollar-a-year man." The code proved highly useful in the exchange of messages between him and employes, while McLean was pulling wires to keep from testifying before the oil committee. He had a "fruit code," too, in which his agents figured as "apples," "peaches," "apricots" and so on.

McLean was on the "inside" of the Harding administration. It looked as if he had everything that money and influence could buy. But he wove a web of deceit and got tangled in it—and now when his name is mentioned it brings a smile.

Curious, indeed, are the ramifications of the oil scandal. Never hereafter will there be any "quick and easy" access to the White House for Ned McLean. Neither his millions nor his secret service badge will help him—and loss of the badge seems imminent.

STUDY OF 18-YEAR-OLD KANSAS GIRL PSYCHIC NOW IN NEW YORK FOR TESTS

Without the slightest trace of nervousness, Miss Dennis answered questions and gave descriptions of what she "saw" in connection with the cases. Previously she had explained to Inspector Fay that she herself did not know how she knew, but that she had impressions of people and things which she tried to put into words.

The cases on which the girl was questioned were the murder of Edward Dolge, Mt. Vernon real estate man, Jan. 5, 1924; the arson cases of Oct. 15, 1923, in which six persons lost their lives when the building at No. 5417 Nineteenth avenue, Brooklyn, burned; the Buzzi case; the attempted robbery of the firm of Calhoun & Robbins, Twentieth street and Fifth avenue, and the murder of Policeman Charles Reynolds and Frank Romanelli, July 26, 1923.

Inspector Fay held the police records of the Schneider murder, for which Mrs. Anna Buzzi was convicted. The names of the parties concerned were not given to Miss Dennis. The Inspector said:

"There was a man found dead in the Bronx. Can you describe the place where he was found?"

Miss Dennis described the scene of the murder in every detail.

Since neither the Inspector nor the girl mentioned any names, the police and the newspaper men present did not know which case was referred to until Miss Dennis said there was a dark, stout woman implicated. Inspector Fay nodded and Eugene continued:

"She didn't commit the actual crime, but she put another man up to do it."

When the killing of two policemen a few months ago was mentioned the seeress immediately launched into a description of the Romanelli and Reynolds murders, which have never been solved. She predicted that the murderer would be arrested by [illegible]

"snitched on" in connection with an automobile theft and that his capture would take place in Newark. She was unable to pronounce the name of that city properly, never having heard of it before, she said. The name appeared before her eyes and she spelled it, she explained.

Man Named Is a Suspect.

The policemen, she declared, met their death when they went to investigate a girl's screams. One of the policemen, she said, knew the girl. She described the murderer as being tall, a very "tough guy," and with a twist on the left side of his face. She gave his name and it coincided with that of a man already suspected by the police. So did the description tally perfectly. His woman companion she also described, giving the street where she lived, and she described the neighborhood in such detail that Inspector Fay said an investigation would be made.

Miss Dennis erred slightly on the Buzi case, but the Calhoun and Robbins safe robbery she pictured with remarkable accuracy, detailing how the man slid down the elevator cable and was caught. She also told many details about the Dolge murder.

"How she does it is beyond me," Inspector Fay exclaimed after the performance. "A gift like that would be worth a million to a detective. There isn't anything phoney about it. I am convinced of that. I picked out those cases and showed them to no one. I am satisfied that there wasn't another person in the room who knew the cases I referred to until she described them. Of course, she made a few mistakes, but in almost everything she was perfect."

In this view he concurs with David Abbott, a magician who examined the girl's powers before she came to New York. Abbott, who has gained considerable prominence through his exposure of numerous psychic and spiritualist fakes, declares her power is genuine and that her "readings," although often erractic, show a high percentage of accuracy.

Then Came the Jokesters.

Of course, such exhibitions could not remain unchallenged. Somebody had to have his little joke and it was had, much to the embarrassment of the young mystic, for it tricked her into solving a ghastly murder that never happened—the "famous Willis-Hostetter murder on Staten Island in 1920."

A group of newspaper men agreed they would ask about this fictitious killing just for fun. They agreed that the man was to be named Carl Hostetter and the woman Nathalie Willis, and that their bodies were found in a shack on Staten Island, with their throats cut, one morning in 1920. So when they were admitted to her apartment, they laid these facts before her and told her how the police, baffled, had at last given up the search. Eugene "fell for it" with gusto.

"Well," she said, "it was a big fellow who killed them; a man with blue eyes and brown hair, 24 or 25 years old. He might have been a taxi driver or something like that."

For a moment Miss Dennis gazed clairvoyantly at the ceiling, waiting for visions. Presently she got one.

"Now Miss Willis came from a little place near Philadelphia. I think; and the name of the place was Jenkintown. She was an orphan, or something like that; I see she was all alone in the world, and nobody knew her very well or cared for her. But this Mr. Hostetter, he took up with her, more for pity than anything else. He had a lot of money, and he felt sorry for her.

"Then this Mr. Hogue—his first name might begin with a G—he was very jealous. He stabbed the man in the shack and the girl ran away. Her body was found outside of the shack, wasn't it?"

"No," said the reporter. "I believe it was found inside the shack, with the man's body."

"Well," said Miss Dennis, with a smile of clairvoyant superiority, "her body was dragged back into the shack then, because she was killed outside. The man strangled her a little bit, too. O, he was furious! He swung his knife—z-z-z-z—just like that!"

Here Miss Dennis gave a vivid imitation, while her pretty face twisted into a grimace indicating rage.

Thus ended the search for the "mysterious Willis-Hostetter slayers." The incident served to shatter some of the faith that had been placed in Eugene's other readings, but her loss of prestige was only temporary. Her reputation went up a notch immediately afterward when a prediction she had made regarding a news writing contest at Columbia came true almost to the letter.

On the occasion of her recent visit to the university, it seems, a student had asked her to describe a contest being conducted there and foretell its result. She had gazed into the air for a moment and replied:

"It is a writing contest. There is $5 in it and the prize will be won by a boy with medium dark hair, not very old and not very big."

When the award was made it was found to bear out her forecast in virtually every detail.

Charge of Fortune Telling.

There was still another incident, however, to cause Miss Dennis a lot of trouble and even more humiliation than the Willis-Hostetter affair, for it resulted in her being summoned to Police Court to answer a charge of fortune telling.

The complaint was made by Mrs. Mary Foley of Astoria, L. I., who alleges she paid the girl $25 to tell her where her 19-year-old son, Bud, who disappeared on Dec. 19, might be found. Eugene, she asserts, closed her eyes, "saw" Los Angeles and announced that Bud was in the California city "preparing either to go abroad or on the stage." A few hours later, after $125 had been spent on telegrams to Los Angeles, Mrs. Foley states, Bud turned up in Pittsburg. Miss Dennis declares it is all a "frame up." She denies flatly that she ever saw the woman or told her anything about he rson or received any money from her. The case was continued when Eugene appeared in court yesterday.

Eugene does not remember when she first began to make use of her strange ability, but word comes from Atchison that by the time she was in ward school she was locally famous and was much in demand as an entertainer.

How Eugene Spoiled the Party.

Once a prominent Atchison society woman was giving a party when Eugene was a freshman in high school and told her friends that, for a novelty, she was going to have "the little Dennis girl" in to read the fortunes of the guests.

Eugene made her appearance at the proper time, a rather scared little girl with big eyes and a timid manner.

"Tell us something about ourselves, won't you?" the hostess asked.

"What do you want to know?" Eugene inquired.

"Oh, just anything, dear, we'll leave that to you," was the answer.

Eugene paused a moment, fastened her eyes on the guest nearest her, and commenced talking.

"That lady didn't want to come here tonight, but she came," she said, indicating the woman of whom she was speaking. "She said to her husband she thought the party would be a bore and it was too bad they both had to go, and the husband agreed with her. They decided they would come, though; they couldn't do anything else."

The woman flushed, muttered something about "how absurd; somebody should stop the child," but Eugene went on with her talk. Before she had proceeded far, however, she had told about so many family quarrels that the evening was quite ruined and the hostess had a terrible time getting her party back to friendly activity again.

Eugene is a pretty girl, she has an excellent complexion, white teeth, an attractive mouth, and large eyes that seem to grow dim or look miles away when she is giving a reading. She likes a good time as well as the average girl of her age, dances well and possibly regrets at times that this talent of hers keeps her from leading a normal dancing, lunch-and-"dates with boys" kind of life she might have led had she not broken up that evening party of "grown ups" in Atchison years ago.

Church Activities and Charity Work Take Precedence Over Society With Arrival of Lent

Only a Few Weddings on Depleted Social Calendar — Miss Hilda Mabley and Warren P. Clark Principals in Ceremony Here and Former St. Louisans Are Married in New York.

With the cessation of things social during the Lenten period, society lapses into the usual lethargy of this time of year, with church activities taking precedence over formal gatherings, and charity work holding its own as the chief diversion.

To be sure there are a few weddings here and there on the depleted calendar, and those are always of interest. Yesterday there were two—that of Miss Hilda Mabley and Warren P. Clark of Burlington, Ia., here, and in New York that of Miss Elizabeth Simon and Towner Phelan, both former St. Louisans, whose families are recognized in St. Louis society. The latter ceremony took place at 4:30 in the Church of the Transfiguration, popularly known as the Little Church Around the Corner, on Twenty-ninth street just off Fifth avenue. The Rev. Dr. Randolph Ray officiated. There were no attendants because of Lent, although many friends of the couple witnessed the ceremony.

A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fitzhugh Simon, 121 Madison avenue, and Mr. and Mrs. Phelan departed on a brief honeymoon trip before going to Erie, Pa., where they will make their home.

The bride is a graduate of Miss Shipley's School in Bryn Mawr, Pa., and attended Columbia University. The family left here several years ago to make its home in New York. She is a sister of Mrs. Alma Simon Bostwick, a popular belle here a few seasons ago, and a niece of Mrs. William E. Hoblitzelle, Mrs. William C. Little and Mrs. Franklin Ferris. Mr. Phelan is the son of Mrs. J. Percival Phelan and a brother of Miss Janet Phelan, a bud of this winter, both of whom went East for the ceremony.

The Clark-Mabley wedding was solemnized in the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Fanny W. Mabley, 4905 Argyle place, at 8 o'clock last evening by the Rev. Dr. George R. Dodson of the Church of the Unity. Spring flowers decorated the home, and combined with palms to form a background for the bridal party. The bride wore white moire, made simply on straight lines with no trimming. A georgette lined satin train depended from the shoulders and her veil was arranged under a coronet of duchess lace and orange blossoms. She carried roses and lilies of the valley. Mrs. F. Leonard Hall, formerly Miss Frances Mabley, and Miss Elaine Mabley, attended their sister. They wore frocks fashioned alike of yellow crepe romaine, with silver lace banding inserted in the bodices, and over the hips of the full skirts. Their flowers were yellow jonquils and lavender sweetpeas. J. J. Seerley Jr. of Chicago was best man and F. Leonard Hall and Harry Jones of Saginaw, Mich., groomsmen. Mr. and Mrs. Clark will spend their honeymoon in Excelsior Springs, Mo., and make their home in Burlington. Mrs. Clark is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin. She is a member of Delta Gamma and Phi Beta Kappa. Mr. Clark is an alumnus of Dartmouth College and belongs to Delta Tau Delta.

Out-of-town guests for the ceremony were Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Clark and Miss Margaret Clark, parents and sister of the bridegroom; Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Seerley Sr. and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Millard, all of Burlington; Mr. and Mrs. Seerley Jr. and Frederick Schumaker of Chicago, and Mr. and Mrs. William Harold Hoover, of Kansas City.

From present prospects weddings will play an important part in the early spring calendar. A number have been scheduled for May, with a few waiting for the month of roses. Miss Marjorie Livingston will announce the date of her wedding to William B. Robertson within a few days. It is to be an event of early May, as will that of Miss Myra Delano, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rufus J. Delano of Clovelly Farms, Eureka, Mo., and Clarence Edwards Vinnedge of Tampa, Fla. One of the most important of the early spring weddings will be that of Miss Prudence Lucas, daughter of Mrs. James Hunt Lucas and Jesse Powell Henry, the date of which has not been made known, and another interesting one will be that of Miss Lucy Weisiger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cary N. Weisiger, and Joseph Hayes McNaugher. Miss Agnes Cady will be married this spring to Scott McNutt, and Miss Ann Walsh will become the bride of Walter Boehmer.

Mrs. Robert S. Harnsberger will return this week to her home in Short Hills, N. J., after a visit to her mother, Mrs. George P. B. Jackson, of the Hamilton Hotel. She has been much feted informally during her visit.

A number of out-of-town guests are here for brief visits. Mrs. Howard Bennett of Detroit arrived Thursday to be with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William B. Edgar, 4905 Lindell boulevard, a few days, and Mrs. Edward A. Nixon is entertaining her niece, Miss Mary Wadsworth of Jacksonville, Ill. Mrs. Sidney Y. West of Little Rock, Ark., is visiting her sister, Mrs. Arnold V. Morrow, who with Mr. Morrow, is occupying the home of her father H. T. T. Smith, 55 Kingsbury place, while he is in Honolulu.

Maj. Gen. George H. Harries, retired, national commander of the Military Order of the World War, is visiting his son, Capt. Herbert L. Harries, at Jefferson Barracks.

Mrs. George R. Wendling is entertaining her mother, Mrs. John Avery Haldeman, who is en route to her home in Louisville, after a visit to another daughter, Mrs. George Leib, in California. Mrs. Cooke Wilson of Beaumont, Tex., will depart today, having been the guest of her cousin, Mrs. Harry Potter, 7 Kingsbury place. Mrs. John Guthrie Hopkins of Greenwood, Va., will come to St. Louis soon to be with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peyton H. Skipwith of Westminster place. Mrs. William C. Stribling Jr. of New York has been visiting Miss Hazel Spencer, daughter of Mrs. Corwin H. Spencer.

Miss Frances Benjamin Johnston of New York City will be entertained at luncheon Wednesday at the Fairmount Hotel by members of the Garden Club of St. Louis, which includes many society women interested in garden culture. Miss Johnston, who is noted for her remarkable photography of flowers and gardens, will give an illustrated lecture Wednesday evening in the Little Theater of the Artists' Guild on "Gardens East and West," showing color pictures of beautiful private gardens in many parts of the United States. Among the women members of the Garden Club are Mmes. Eugene H. Angert, W. N. Matthews, Charles M. Rice, W. J. Polk, James T. Drummond, E. H. Simmons, Clinton L. Whittemore, R. H. Switzler, Robert J. Terry, Hermann Von Schrenk, A. Shapleigh Boyd, George F. Tittman, E. J. Walsh, J. Lionberger Davis, J. F. Shoemaker, Fidelio C. Sharp, Sam C. Davis and Miss Grace Morrill.

Mrs. W. E. Hedgcock of New York has arrived in St. Louis to visit her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas M. Webster, of 762 Kingsland avenue, and their infant son, born March 6, whom they have named William Hedgcock Webster for his maternal grandfather. Mrs. Webster was Miss Katherine Hedgcock. Mrs. Hedgcock will remain three weeks longer.

Parties Being Planned for Girls on Vacation From Schools in East

Young Women to Arrive Soon for Easter Holidays—Entertainments to Be Informal in Character.

THE only parties in prospect, and those only of a most informal nature, are for the young women who will arrive in 10 days for their spring vacations from Eastern finishing schools. Because Easter is late this year, the date of this welcome interruption from study has advanced, and many of the students will arrive about March 19. Five out of seven St. Louis girls at Westover School in Connecticut will return on that date. They are Misses Katharine McCluney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel McCluney of Kingsbury place; Miss Jessie Carr, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peyton Carr of Vandeventer place; Miss Elizabeth Cuendet, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene R. Cuendet of Hortense place; Miss Virginia Simmons, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Welch Simmons of Hanley road, and Miss Katherine Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Herndon Smith of Ellenwood avenue. Miss Anne Wallace will spend the holidays with her mother, Mrs. Harry B. Wallace, at Hot Springs, and Miss Elizabeth Douglass, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Douglass, will visit in New York and Wilmington, Del.

From Miss Porter's School in Farmington, Conn., will come Misses Mary and Margaret Carter, twin daughters of Mr. and Mrs. L. Ray Carter of Portland place; Miss Marjorie Niedringhaus, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lee L. Niedringhaus; Miss Ruth McElroy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. McElroy, all of Portland place, and Miss Gertrude Catlin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel K. Catlin.

Miss Janet Kauffman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold M. Kauffman of Portland place, will visit her aunt, Mrs. Thompson, in New Haven, Conn., instead of coming home. She attends the Ethel Walker School. Mrs. Kaufman will depart in a fortnight to join her.

Miss Grace Moulton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Moulton, will return from Vassar College, and Misses Virginia Heffern, Dorothy

COMINGS AND GOINGS OF THE SOCIETY FOLK

Mrs. John Young Brown of 4736 Westminster place, and her debutante daughter, Miss Evelyn, will depart the latter part of the month for New York. They will spend the summer in Europe, but the date of their sailing has not been decided upon. Miss Brown and Francis Niedringhaus will be married in the fall.

RECIPE TO DARKEN GRAY HAIR

You Can Make a Better Gray Hair Remedy Than You Can Buy.

Gray, streaked or faded hair is not only unbecoming, but unnecessary.

Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home that will darken gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. To half-pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ ounce of glycerine.

These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost, or the druggist will put it up for you. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It is easy to use, does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

That Itching Skin Needs SULPHUR

Any breaking out of the skin, even ivy, itching eczema, can be quickly overcome by applying a little Mentho-Sulphur, declares a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, this sulphur preparation begins at once to soothe irritated skin and heal eruptions such as rash, pimples and ring worm.

It seldom fails to remove the torment and disfigurement, and you do not have to wait for relief from embarrassment. Improvement quickly shows. Sufferers from skin trouble should obtain a small jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it like cold cream.

That Itching Skin Needs SULPHUR

Any breaking out of the skin, even fiery, itching eczema, can be quickly overcome by applying a little Mentho-Sulphur, declares a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, this sulphur preparation begins at once to soothe irritated skin and heal eruptions such as rash, pimples and ring worm.

It seldom fails to remove the torment and disfigurement, and you do not have to wait for relief from embarrassment. Improvement quickly shows. Sufferers from skin trouble should obtain a small jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it like cold cream.

SOCIAL ACTIVITIES OF MISSOURIANS IN WASHINGTON

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Senator and Mrs. Selden P. Spencer gave a radio party Thursday night, the object of which was to hear the Senator discourse on the current political situation from a local station, after which the entire party, including many members of the Missouri delegation, listened to near and distant programs. Other members of the Missouri colony who have formed the habit of giving radio parties are Mr. and Mrs. Breckinridge Long and Assistant Secretary of War and Mrs. Dwight Davis.

Mrs. Spencer is planning many parties for the coming continental congress of the D. A. R., which will convene here in April with a big attendance of Missouri daughters of the American Revolution, including Mrs. John Trigg Moss of St. Louis, vice president-general from that State. Washington society is eagerly waiting the announcement that Mrs. Spencer will continue her popular Bible classes this spring. Several seasons she has had as many as 1000 women in her classes. Mrs. Coolidge attended regularly and so did other women of the Cabinet circle.

Mrs. James A. Reed, wife of the Missouri Senator, and Mrs. Thomas P. Gore, wife of the former Senator, entertained 44 congressional women at luncheon Wednesday at the Congressional Club in compliment to Mrs. James T. Morris.

Word has been received from Sweden that the American Minister and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, formerly of St. Louis, will return to America in April to inspect the work on the $1,000,000 residence they are erecting in Georgetown on the outskirts of Washington. Mrs. Bliss has spent much time in Europe collecting antique and period furniture for her new home.

Despite the cold weather many members of the diplomatic corps and the younger members of official society are playing on the tennis courts at Boundary Castle through the courtesy of Mrs. John B. Henderson, widow of the former Senator from Missouri.

Missourians in Washington are interested in the announcement of the engagement of Miss Elizabeth Taylor Jones, granddaughter of the late Senator James J. Jones of Arkansas, to Lieut. Harry Browning Slocum, U. S. N., stationed on the Mayflower. Lieut. Slocum is one of the White House aids.

Hundreds of telegrams were sent from Washington last week to Mrs. Genevieve Thomson of New Orleans, daughter of the late Speaker and Mrs. Champ Clark, when the news of her candidacy for Congress was announced.

Garstang Quits as Sidener's Aid. James E. Garstang, an assistant to Circuit Attorney Sidener since his induction into office in 1921, has resigned his position as prosecutor in Judge Ittner's division of the Circuit Court to take effect March 15. He will resume private practice with the firm of Carter, Norton & Jones. Garstang will be succeeded by Walter Ross, but his work as courtroom prosecutor will be taken up by John T. Mannin

Alkali in Shampoos Bad for Washing Hair

Many soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much free alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It is inexpensive and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Two or three teaspoonfuls is all that is required. Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to manage. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

next meeting. Committee reports were given. A resume of the mass meeting to discuss plans for the new clubhouse was given by Mrs. W. C. Markham, after which it was voted to pay $1 per capita for four years to the building fund. Mrs. G. Z. Davis will represent the club at the future mass meetings. The subject study for the meeting, China, was under the leadership of Mrs. W. C. Markham, who gave a most interesting sketch of the Great Wall and the Gobi Desert, with an account of Andrews and his party of archaeologists' recent explorations, the priceless treasures found and the value to science. A unique vase, a souvenir, hand-carved by a sailor, from the rock of the Great Wall, was on exhibition. Paul Sampson, food specialist of the National Food Show, gave a short address, followed by an informal discussion of food values. Mrs. George Cook will be the next hostess.

The Growth of a Style-Creative Name and Prestige
THE present-day House of Milgrim is remote indeed from the one first known to the discerning woman in 1899.
Indeed, the single floor of twenty-five years ago in downtown New York, has been transformed into a landmark in New York's exclusive up-town shopping section, architecturally appealing, faultlessly appointed in every detail, significant evidence of Milgrim prestige in its chosen field.
"To keep in sympathetic touch with all the accepted tendencies in dress—to render distinctly original interpretations of them the moment they're revealed—is but a part of the creative work to which I have long been pledged."

Medal of Honor for U. S. Sailor.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—Henry Breault of White Plains, N. Y., naval torpedo man of the second class, today received from President Coolidge the Congressional Medal of Honor for heroism and devotion to duty at the sinking of the submarine O-5 off Panama last October. Arrangements had been made for presentation of the medal last Wednesday, but Breault thought he needed a new uniform for the ceremony. President Coolidge waited while Secretary Denby and naval officers in dress uniforms looked for the hero, who failed to appear. Today Breault appeared in a new uniform.

HUSBAND FLEES ON SEEING TWO WIVES

Mrs. Deigel Betzler, Finding No. 2 and Child, Will Seek Divorce.

Mrs. Deigel Betzler, 28 years old, of 2014 Oregon avenue, yesterday instructed her attorney to resume prosecution of her suit for divorce, in the hope that she can have her maiden name restored before she makes a contemplated summer trip to Honolulu. She was married six years ago, but had not seen her husband for four years until Thursday night, when he almost introduced her to the second and present Mrs. Betzler.

Acting upon the advice of her lawyer, Mrs. Betzler, accompanied by two women cousins, started out Thursday night to call on "Mr. and Mrs. Deigel Betzler" of 3901 Westminster place. While they were looking for a policeman at Vandeventer avenue and Olive street, Mrs. Betzler chanced to see her husband across the street.

In the reunion that followed Betzler told the former wife, according to her statements to reporters yesterday, that he had obtained a divorce shortly after their separation. He volunteered to escort her to his present home, which was only a block away. As they neared the door, however, he perceived he was being followed by a policeman and two women. Without explanation, he fled.

Undismayed by the man's abrupt departure, the wife continued on her mission and visited a half-hour with the present Mrs. Betzler. She was unable to find any divorce papers, she said, but was shown a marriage license dated August, 1921. Also, she learned that her former husband was the father of a three-year-old son.

Betzler formerly was manager of a chain grocery store. His arrest has been ordered.

Just Leave Your Headaches With Me

Dr. F. J. Guilbault

Don't tolerate that miserable headache a single day longer. Take it right down to my office and have your eyes tested. Most cases of sick and nervous headaches are caused by eyestrain, and my properly prescribed glasses will quickly normalize your vision and every vestige of those annoying headaches will quickly disappear.

Many thousands of grateful clients whom I have served during the past 20 years will tell you that my office is equipped with all the newest and best scientific instruments for testing vision—that there is no pain or annoyance of any kind connected with my examination of your eyes—that I employ no drops or drugs; and last, but not least, my one moderate charge that covers testing, lenses, frames and fitting is the most reasonable they have ever known.

I Found Youth

And beauty in a French-type clay

By Edna Wallace Hopper

Millions of women marvel at my youthful beauty. I have been 40 years in the limelight, and 32 years a stage star. Yet I still look a girl of 19. I still play youthful parts, and was never more winsome than now.

These things I owe to France. Her experts made me a famous beauty. They have kept my youthful bloom. And those same helps have done like things for many of my friends.

I know they can bring to millions new beauty and new youth. So I have arranged so all who wish may get them.

The supreme help

Many years ago French beauty experts taught me the use of clay. They used then crude and muddy clays, like many still employ. But even those clays multiplied my beauty.

Since then, able scientists have perfected clay by 20 years of study. They have found the right clay—a rare mineral-laden clay—which brings maximum results.

They have found ways to refine it, to remove the useless mud. Their new-type clay is white and clean and dainty.

They have discovered added factors which bring manifold effects. The clay I now use—my White Youth Clay—makes other clays seem very crude indeed.

Amazing effects

Youth Clay purges the skin of impurities. It removes causes of sallowness, blackheads and blemishes.

It draws the blood to the skin to nourish and revive it. The result is that rosy afterglow which so amazes new users.

It firms the skin, combats all lines and wrinkles, reduces enlarged pores. Many women, in 30 minutes, seem to drop ten years. And my youthful bloom and contours show what constant use will do.

A beauty essential

Clay is an essential to beauty at its best. Also to continued youth. Women who omit it cannot hope to compare with women who employ it. Every girl and woman owes to herself this help.

But crude clays are out of date. My new-type clay—the very utmost in a facial clay—is now at your command.

Edna Wallace Hopper's Youth Clay is supplied by all druggists and toilet counters. Price 50c and $1 per tube. Also my Youth Cream, which should follow the clay. Also my Facial Youth, my famous Liquid Cleanser. Also my Hair Youth, which brought my luxuriant hair. My Beauty Book comes with each.

Learn, for your own sake, how much these helps can do. If the first package fails to delight you, your dealer will return its price.

AERO CORPORATION DOES NOT OWN FIELD

Statement Says Balance of $13,716 Held by Organization Will Be Applied on Property.

The St. Louis Aeronautic Corporation, in its statement to stockholders, shows that a balance of $13,716.74 is in its treasury, after meeting all the expenses connected with the International Air Races held last October.

The corporation has ont acquired the flying field, known as Lambert-St. Louis Field, as it hoped and planned to do before the races. It has a lease on the field, which expires in 1936.

It is now planned to use the balance as a first payment on the purchase of the field, and plans for meeting the balance of the cost are being considered. The holding of civilian air meets has been suggested as a means of raising further funds.

Rain, which caused postponement of the races from the first to the latter half of the week of Oct. 1 last, and which made necessary large expenditures for grading and draining, defeated the plan for immediate acquisition of the field. The corporation owns the improvements on the field, including the hangars and stands.

The statement lists funds acquired at $329,133.14, against funds expended of $315,416.40.

Listed under funds acquired are stock subscriptions, $171,225.00; ticket sales, $138,319.78; program and entry fees, $152,$33.08; and miscellaneous, $5875.06. B. F. Bush is president of the corporation, and W. Frank Carter and Carl F. G. Meyer, vice-presidents.

BLIND LAWYER NOMINATED FOR ILLINOIS HIGH COURT

East St. Louis Democrat Hopes to Be Elected in Republican District.

Paul Farthing, a blind lawyer of East St. Louis, was nominated without opposition as the Democratic candidate for Judge of the Supreme Court of Illinois from the First District, at a convention in Carbondale yesterday.

In a field normally Republican, Farthing is optimistic in commenting on the probable outcome of the general election, the Republican candidate for which has not yet been announced. The term of the office is nine years.

"If I am elected," said Farthing, "I expect to find no difficulty in serving as a Supreme Court Judge. It would require considerable hard work, but it would be no more difficult than practicing law."

Farthing has practiced law with his brother in East St. Louis since he was graduated from the law school of the University of Illinois in 1913. He was president of the East St. Louis Bar Association in 1922, and is a member of the Optimists' Club.

To Decorate Courts of Honor.

The National Society of World War Registrars has set aside May 29 as decoration day for its courts of honor for the reason that gold star mothers on May 30, Memorial day, will desire to visit the graves of their sons who lost their lives in the war. An elaborate ceremony is being arranged for May 29 at the St. Louis "memorial boulevard," which extends from Easton avenue to West Florissant avenue on Kingshighway.

Negro Ax Slayer Killed Escaping.

By the Associated Press.

TEXARKANA, Tex., March 8.—Houston Shaw, negro, alleged ax slayer, was shot to death by Tom Lennox, a special Deputy Sheriff, when Shaw wrecked the automobile in which he was being taken to jail and made a break for liberty after pointing out the hiding place of money alleged to have been stolen at the time J. A. Whitten, a Bowie County merchant, was killed several days ago. Shaw is alleged to have confessed and implicated another negro.

Paying One Debt and Creating Three

When a man dies he pays his debt to Nature; but, if he has a considerable estate, by dying he creates at least three new debts.

This is no figure of speech, but the hardest kind of fact. The three new debts which a man creates, by dying, are:

1. The Federal Estate Tax;
2. The State Inheritance Tax;
3. The cost of administering his estate.

(Read Last Week Saturday Evening Post)

P. S.—If you don't expect to leave a taxable estate, remember that a good life insurance policy CAN CREATE AS WELL AS PROTECT AN ESTATE. Life insurance, payable to named beneficiaries, up to $40,000, is not taxable by the Federal Government nor by any State—except one or two. If your chief asset is your productive capacity (which death wipes out) life insurance is more important to you than to the rich man.

OLD AT 40? Iron Starvation of the blood, perhaps, and your worn-out, exhausted nerves need to be revitalized.

NUXATED IRON..... 69c

For this purpose there is nothing better than Organic Iron; not metallic iron which people usually take, but pure Organic Iron—Nuxated Iron—which helps the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples. One dose of Nuxated Iron is estimated to be approximately equivalent (in organic iron content) to eating one-half quart of spinach, one quart green vegetables, or half a dozen apples. It is the taking extract of beef instead of eating pounds of meat.

Over four million people annually are using Nuxated Iron. It will not injure the teeth nor blacken the stomach. A few doses will often commence to enrich the blood.

NATURE PUT IRON FOR YOUR BLOOD

In the husks of grains and the peels and skins of fruits and vegetables, but modern methods of cookery throw all these things away—hence the alarming increase in anemia—iron starvation of the blood, with its nerve-racking trend of symptoms of nervous irritability, general weakness, fatigue, disturbed digestion, headaches, pains across the back, etc.

Either go back to Nature or take Organic Iron—Nuxated Iron—to help enrich your blood and revitalize your worn-out, exhausted nerves. MONDAY, 69c.

OSSING A CHAMPION OF CHILDREN IN NEED

Judge's Dual Role Enables Him to Aid Those for Whom Courts Must Act.

By deed and repute, Judge Erwin G. Ossing, youngest, save one, of Circuit Court Judges in St. Louis, is probably by way of being one of the city's most ardent champions of children—those delinquent and in distress. And, in that connection, his dual service as Judge of the Juvenile Court and in the Court of Domestic Relations places him in the singular position of being the adjudicator of the troubles of almost all children for whom the courts in St. Louis must act.

And that is true more especially for the fact that records, compiled recently with the idea of making positive the connection between the two courts of Judge Ossing, indicate that more than 50 per cent of the children brought before him in the Juvenile Court, as delinquents, are the children of divorced parents. The total number of those, for the past year, is 2852, to which may be added 1215 cases which were settled out of court.

Too Many Delinquency Cases.

Judge Ossing has frequently remarked that cases of delinquency are too often the result of homes broken in his divorce court, and it is probably because of the effect of that upon the Judge that a goodly number of the parties in divorce proceedings leave the Municipal Courts Building decreeless and with only a parting injunction to be less mindful of happiness in their own advanced lives, while the happiness of a life only just begun, the moulding of which is in their hands, is placed at hazard.

"I believe in forcing people to raise their own children, where, by the guidance of my probation office, that may be done," says the Judge. "The cases in the Juvenile Court, exasperating as many of them are, are only the results of mismanaged homes, where the habits of the delinquents are formed. Therefore are the parents directly responsible. And I permit children to be committed to an institution only as the last recourse."

Increase in Cases.

Records show that 1687 of the cases brought before the Juvenile Court during the year 1923 are under the supervision of the probation office. Only 450 of the total number of cases of delinquent and neglected children have been committed to institutions, the remainder of the total having been discharged or otherwise disposed of. There were 469 more cases handled during the past year than in 1922.

There are 17 probation officers, men and women, attached to the Juvenile Court, with Jesse P. Smith as chief.

THREE OLD 'OWLS' OF OLIVE STREET LINE TAKEN OFF

Last of Old "300," With Backdoor Entrances, to Be Shifted to Other Route.

The last three cars of the old "300," known as "back-enders," have been relegated by the United Railways Co. from the Olive street line to rattle their way to the junk heap on less traveled routes.

For more than 20 years the "300" type of street car traveled the main thoroughfares—Olive-University, Delmar and other routes. "Open face" at first, they were converted into closed vestibule types and finally into the "pay-as-you-enter" kind, but always with the entrance at the rear. Then came the new present type, known as the "700," vestibuled throughout with automatic devices for opening and closing doors and with the conductor's station midway of the car.

As these were turned out of the Grand and Tiffany plant they gradually supplanted the "300" type until but three had been replaced. These were the three "owls."

"Old Mac," presiding genius for two decades of the Delmar "owl," known otherwise as Michael J. McNamara; Frank Quinn, for 22 years on the second "owl" and a third motorman operated the relics. They pushed and pulled the front door with a lever and yelled to the waiting passengers, "back door, back door."

Friday night when the trio arrived at the DeBaliviere sheds they found three of the new type cars awaiting them. They were told that old "294," "295" and "298" had been "retired." They were to be used on the City Limits or some other less traveled line. Henceforth the "owls" on the Olive street line would be rated with the "daylights" and delays caused by passengers not familiar with the old "back enders" and who wait always for the front door to open and let them on would be eliminated.

SECURITY BANK BUYS BUILDING IT NOW OCCUPIES; NEW DOWNTOWN HOTEL PROJECT

Hostelry for Southwest Corner of Eighth and St. Charles Streets, It Is Said, May Be 15 Stories High.

By Berry Moore.

The Security National Bank Savings and Trust Co. yesterday concluded negotiations for the purchase of the six-story building at 312-14-16 North Eighth street. The building has a frontage of 70 feet by a depth of 62½ feet, extending to the north and south alley of the block and includes the quarters of the bank.

The grantor was the Essex Realty Co., of which W. K. Bixby is president, and which held the property under a 99-year lase, executed in August, 1920, and which gave the leasee the privilege to purchase the property on a designated basis. This option was exercised by the Essex company several days ago, in anticipation of the resale of the property to the Security National Bank Savings & Trust.

Isaac T. Cook & Co. engineered the operation. The Cornet & Zeibig Trust represented the lessor and original owners, the Wallace Estate, of which Fred G. Zeibig of the Cornet & Zeibig Trust was trustee, and the heirs of which were Henry P. Phipps, Frank H. Phipps and Mary Yates Phipps, when the 99-year lease was negotiated two years ago. The purchase price in neither instance was disclosed, but presumably the first transaction was made on a basis of the lease.

The Security National was organized two years ago with J. Lionberger Davis as chairman of the board and Byron W. Moser as president. The other officers are Fred L. Denby, vice president, and cashier, Leo J. Quinn, assistant cashier, and John Sheppley Lionberger, trust officer.

Larger Quarters for Bank.

The bank occupies the first and second floors and the basement of the south half of the building, which have been reconstructed and equipped with vaults of the most modern type. The quarters are to be enlarged at the expiration of the lease held by Marks & Jones, associated decorators of the south half of the building, to provide for the growth of the bank.

The bank now has more than 7,000 clients.

As indicated from transactions disclosed during the week, the scope of realty operations has been enlarged appreciably both north and west of Twelfth boulevard.

Another Hotel Project.

A 15-story hotel, according to realty circles, is projected for the southwest corner of Eighth and St. Charles street. The site was recently acquired by the National Realty Co., of which J. Lionberger Davis is president, and with whom the promoters are negotiating for a fee.

Plans for the building are being made by Preston J. Bradshaw, architect for the Chase Hotel, Coronado Bachelor Hotel, the Melbourne and Forest Park Hotel, and who will be financially interested in the building enterprise, it is understood. Arrangements have been completed with a well-known hotel man to manage the hostelry.

The site has 68½ feet on Eighth street and 127 feet 8½ inches on St. Charles street. Supposition is that the adjoining ground on Eighth street, available in this connection, will be incorporated in the site, provided it can be acquired on an equitable basis, but it is not regarded as essential to the building project.

The building will be the groupings the Statler Hotel at Nihth and St. Charles streets and Washington avenue, the Mercantile Trust Building at Eighth, Locust and St. Charles streets, and with the new State Theater in construction at Eighth street and Washington avenue.

Lionberger Davis admitted that negotiations were pending for the site. He stated that he purchased the site to reserve for a construction improvement for this quarter of the city, in which the estate of his father, the late John D. Davis, who was vice-president of the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., had extensive real estate holdings.

Possibilities of District.

The possibilities of this district are obvious from the fact that the downtown postoffice and custom house, embracing the block from Eighth to Ninth and from Locust to Olive streets, has been pointed out as available for a downtown railway passenger station, owing to its close relation with the Eads Bridge tunnel which runs under Eighth street at this point.

The second floor of the new two-story building at 719 St. Charles street, opposite the Mercantile Trust Co., has been leased for quarters by the Stack Club, a new downtown luncheon organization, whose membership is to be restricted to young brokers and those with banking connections.

The club was organized by Oliver Anderson, dealer in stocks and bonds. The first floor of the building has been reserved for brokerage concerns.

The club takes its name from the huge smoke stack which rises in the center of this block. The building was erected by clients of the Mercantile Trust Company and adjoins on the east a $100,000 building being erected by Lorenz E. Anderson & Co., of which Oliver Anderson is vice-president, from plans by T. P. Barnett & Co.

Several other transactions involving large holdings were concluded during the week with Pine, Olive and Locust streets as notable centers of speculative interest. A sale of more than ordinary significance was effected by the Cornett & Zeibig Trust. Details in these instances are withheld pending execution of deeds.

Sam Koplar was disclosed yesterday as the purchaser of the southeast corner of Fourth and Locust street. It is understood that he plans to erect a 10-story office building on the site, tentative plans for which have been made by Preston J. Bradshaw, architect.

Frank Yawitz has purchased through the Aslam-Beck Realty Co., George Beck, president, the southeast corner of Third and Locust streets, occupied by a two-story building. The property belonged to the estate of Hetty Green, a copy of whose will it was necessary to file here with the Recorder of Deeds, in connection with the transfer.

Another purchase was that of the southeast corner of Fourth and Morgan streets, occupied by the former five-story building of the Franklin Bank. It is to be altered for office and loft purposes, at a cost of $25,000. The sale of the property was effected by Adari Boeck & Co.

HOME COSTING $33,000 FOR AN EDWARDSVILLE BANKER

One of the handsomest residences in Edwardsville, Ill., that of George W. Meyer, president of the Bank of Edwardsville, recently was completed at a cost of $33,000. It is on the northeast corner of Vandalia and St. Andreas streets.

The exterior is in an attractive modern type of architecture, with classic stone entrance and trim. The roof is green slate, and the gutters and downspouts are copper. The garage is steam heated and attached to the house in the rear, and is reached from the street by a cement drive.

The first floor contains marble entrance vestibule, wide Colonial reception hall and stairway, living room with marble fireplace and bookcases, paneled dining room, breakfast room with black and white ceramic tile floor base, sun parlor with brick fireplace and red quarry tile floor and base and leaded glass windows, kitchen with chocolate and tan composition floor and sanitary base, and pantry. The garage is entered from the first floor hall.

The second floor contains four large bedrooms with large closets and two connecting baths. There is a large sleeping porch. The attic contains one large finished bedroom and provision is made in the basement for the laundry, drying and fruit rooms as well as boiler and fuel rooms. The building is heated by the modulating system of steam heat. The architects are Bonsack & Pearce, of St. Louis. The architect's sketch of the house is shown elsewhere.

STANLEY EPSTEIN REPORTS SEVERAL IMPORTANT SALES

Stanley Epstein reports sale of a large piece of investment property in the O'Fallon Park district, being the southeast corner of Carter and Harris avenues, for account of George Moss and Molly Moss; it is a business building with apartments above, facing on Carter Avenue, and two separate 4-family apartments on Harris avenue. Epstein also reports sale of 5081 Vernon avenue, which was the residence of the late C. V. Gregg. This property, nine rooms and sun parlor, was purchased by O. F. Bartlow for his home, for $9500. The sale of the single flat at 2520 Elliot avenue was closed for the account of Tillie Potashnick to Elliott Wilson.

99-YEAR LEASE TAKEN AT 6TH AND MORGAN

Remley R. E. Co. Acquires Building and Site on N. E. Corner of These Streets.

The Remley Real Estate and Investment Co., of which Thomas Remley is president, has acquired a 99-year lease of the four-story building and site at the northeast corner of Sixth and Morgan streets. The site has a frontage of 26 feet on Sixth street and of 115 feet on Morgan street.

The lease was made on a basis of a valuation of $125,000 and provides for net rentals for the entire 99-year term aggregating $544,500. The lessee, Hannah Luscomb of Massachusetts, was represented by the Cornet & Zeibig Trust. The J. E. Kaime &Brother Real Estate Co, negotiated the transaction in connection with G. F. McLain, on behalf of the Remley company.

This section has displayed decided buoyancy recently, due to the fact that the project to replace the old Union Market with a $1,000,000 structure is now assured under the provisions of the $87,000,000 bond issue, together with the fact that this section promises to respond to the wholesome effects of the widening project for Franklin avenue.

Remley is proprietor of the Thomas Market on Sixth street, opposite Union Market.

ADJOINING BUILDING TAKEN BY LANDAU CABINET CO.

The Landau Cabinet Co., Tower Grove and Folsom avenues, has just completed alterations in an adjoining building which has been taken over by the firm, which will be used as a cutting and sewing room, it was announced yesterday by Alex Landau, president of the firm. The new building gives the firm approximately 25,000 additional feet of floor space and was taken over because of the firm's growing volume of business in cedarized upholstered furniture.

The Chinese High Commission, which was in St. Louis Thursday and Friday, expressed a particular desire to see the Landau factories, having heard of the new method of manufacturing upholstered furniture, used by the firm. The commission spent Friday afternoon in the factories.

MISSOURI THEATER BUILDING OFFICES READY ON MAY 1

The 12-story Missouri Theater Building, in process of construction at the southeast corner of Grand boulevard and Lucas avenue, will be ready for occupancy on May 1, according to Helfensteller, Hirsch and Watson, architects. Tife building as a whole will not be finished before June, but parts of it will be ready to receive tenants May 1.

According to Isaac T. Cook, who has been engaged to manage the property, it will be one of the most attractive professional buildings on Grand boulevard.

Applications for more than 30 suites of offices, consisting of from two to nine rooms, have been received from physicians and dentists.

The owners have decided to lease the second and third floors to commercial and other high class office building tenants. The fourth floor is being subdivided and will be ready for occupancy on May 1. The fifth floor to the twelfth floor inclusive willebe leased to professional men only, who are members of the Missouri Medical Association or National Dental Association.

A warranty deed has been filed at Clayton showing the transfer of property on Wells avenue, near Easton avenue, in St. Louis County, from the St. Louis Frog and Switch Co. to the Southern Manganese Steel Co. for $282,000. J. J. Lichter, president of the former company, to whom inquiries were referred, said the property was a foundry which the Southern firm had bought last April.

It is comprised of about 80 acres, particularly adaptable to home building.

The Kreider Company moved their offices and stock to Chicago about 30 days ago. The Rice & Hutchins Shoe Co. is now occupying the building at 1023 Washington, under a lease expiring shortly.

The Endicott-Johnson Corp. will retain its sample room at 1412 Washington avenue, and the Goldman & Rosen Garment Co. will continue to occupy the storeroom at 1419 Washington under the new lease.

As soon as alterations and repairs on the new premises are completed, it will be occupied by the shoe company.

WEST END HEIGHTS TO BE SUBDIVIDED

Plan for 35 Lots, 30 to Be Reserved for High-Class Residences.

The Opportunity Realty and Investment Co., of which A. J. Kuhs is president, has acquired from the Heights Realty and Investment Co. the tract embracing West End Heights, at the southwest corner of Clayton and Skinker roads, formerly operated as a summer garden.

The transaction was handled by the Kuhs Realty Co., which has let contracts for subdividing and improving the tract for high-class residential purposes. The plot extends from Ethel avenue on the south to the tracks of the Market street car line, or Oakland avenue on the north, the latter forming the south boundary of Forest Park.

Two streets to be dedicated, one as Kuhs place and the other as Hi-Pointe place, are to be extended through the tract from Ethel to Oakland avenue. A subdivision of 35 lots is proposed, with 10 each on Kuhs and Hi-Pointe places, 10 on Ethel avenue and five on McCausland avenue, which is to be reserved for business purposes.

Sewers, water and gas mains will be included in the improvements besides sidewalks and streets with curbs, all of the high-class type.

UNIQUE HOUSE BUILT BY THE HAMLEY REALTY CO.

The Hamley Realty Co. has built a unique house in the Alta Dena subdivision at the southwest corner of Kingsbury and Hanley roads. It has seven rooms and a garage and is equipped with many labor-saving features. It is known as the Hanbury House.

The reception hall includes a spacious coat closet. The living room has a fire place, for burning wood, and a beautiful mantel. The dining room is paneled and has oil paint finish. The kitchen has a battery of steel kitchen units with a work table running across the entire length. The back porch contains a large storage closet and an electric refrigeration plant. On this same porch is a hopper door through which all garbage, waste and trash is fed, completely eliminating the garbage can.

A fire proof garage has four big windows and is equipped with radiation and is entered from the back hall. The upstairs consists of three bedrooms with a sun parlor which is used as an upstairs sitting room.

NEW GREEK CABINET LIKELY TO PROCLAIM REPUBLIC

Regent Offers Premiership to Republican When Army Hint Causes Ministry to Quit.

By the Associated Press.

ATHENS, March 8.—The regent has offered the Premiership to M. Papanastasion, the Republican leader, following upon the resignation of Premier Kafandaris and the members of his Ministry.

The decision of Kafandaris to resign came after an intimation by the General commanding the first army that the officers were firmly resolved to insist on the overthrow of the dynasty and the proclamation of a republic.

Former Premier Venizelos has announced that he will leave Greece next week.

The situation is intricate and the crisis is not likely to be ended for several days. It is considered possible that the new Ministry may proclaim a republic, immediately either with or without the consent of the National Assembly, which would then be dissolved.

M. Venizelos has declined to express an opinion on the situation beyond saying that the Conservatives and Liberals would tolerate a Papanastasion Cabinet if formed.

TWO KILLED IN FIGHT

By the Associated Press.

JOPLIN, Mo., March 8.—James Ball of Webb City, Mo., a wealthy farmer, today was shot and killed instantly by Frank Fitzjohn, his employe, after Ball had fatally shot Fitzjohn. Fitzjohn lived an hour. The shooting took place on Ball's farm at Lawton, Kan., 10 miles northwest of here. The men quarreled in a field over the settlement of hay grown on the farm. Ball drew his revolver and twice shot Fitzjohn, who grappled with him and succeeded in taking the weapon from him. Fitzjohn then shot Ball, the bullet entering the right temple.

SCANDAL HAUNTS BEQUESTS LEFT TO BRITISH ROYALTY

Mysterious Creditor Stays Distribution of Lord Farquhar's Fortune in Auditor's Proceeding.

POLITICAL FUNDS REPORTED MISSING

If Case Reaches Court, List of Subscribers to Secret Fund to Attain Peerage May Be Known.

By WILLIAM BOLITHO,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

Copyright, 1924, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos. the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, March 1 (by mail).—Lord Farquhar, faithful courtier, confidant of the King in two generations, died last year at the age of 79, with a gesture quite befitting the role he had played. Lacking heirs, he distributed a fortune of some 400,000 pounds in bequests to Queen Alexandra and the Princess Royal; to the Princess Arthur of Connaught and her son, the Earl of MacDuff, to Princess Maud and her husband, Lord Carnegie, and to other members of the royal family.

Before the bequests were paid, however, an unidentified creditor stayed the proceedings through a firm of auditors, Maxwell Hicks & Co. While the announcement of the name of this firm, by the Sunday papers of Feb. 17, England startled, began to speculate. Maxwell, Hicks & Co., most people know, are official auditors for the funds of the Conservative party. Lord Farquhar had been joint treasurer of the Conservative party funds, and treasurer also of the special fund of the Coalition Conservative party.

Not since the days of George IV's divorce has the door been opened wide on the private affairs of the English court and the horor system of the peerage. Party leaders are struggling now to get it closed, and they may be able to prevent any court proceedings over the will. But through the crack opened by the action of Naxwell, Hicks & Co., the public has glimpsed what seems to be a hoof, a horn and the tuft of a tail.

From Impoverished Family.

Horace Brand Farquhar, first Earl Farquhar, privy counsellor, doctor of letters, holder of 14 foreign decorations of the highest class, late master of the household to King Edward VII, began as the younger son of an impoverished county family. He had come to know so much of the secrets of the royal family that, mixed with regret at losing a faithful old courtier of a race which is extinct with him, may have been possibly some relief that the possibility of his telling has gone forever.

Indeed, of late years Lord Farquhar had given a little uneasiness to high quarters. He had shown an inexplicable affection for Lloyd George, not shared by any other member of the court circle. But in spite of this affection he remained apparently the pleasantly old-fashioned, solid pillar of court whom King Edward and his sisters had trusted like an Archbishop.

In death, as in life, he was faithful to the royal family. All were pleasantly surprised to find he was so rich. His bequests were most welcome, also, for it is no secret that the war hit many of his investments on behalf of the King, and the royal family, like most other great English families, is feeling the pinch of the times.

Curiosity Over Creditor's Identity.

Even before the intervention of the unidentified creditor, it was learned that Lord Farquhar's estate had been found much less than £400,000. Then came the first positive act. Agents of E. Bourcher Hawksley, executor under the will, notified legatees that, "a large creditor" had petitioned to have the will administered by the courts, and that it might not be possible to pay the bequests in full for some time, if at all. There was great curiosity to know the name of this creditor.

Then came word that Maxwell Hicks & Co. had applied to the Court of Chancery for the appointment of an official administrator for the estate. They made no statement as to the nature of their claim. But the implication was clear. The secret funds of the Conservative party, contributed for the most part by rich commoners anxious for a peerage or other mark of gratitude, which Lord Farquhar had controlled as treasurer—could any of these, by chance, have become mixed with the funds of his own estate?

Where Did Funds Go?

Conjecture hinted this might turn out to be a scandal of a magnitude almost unknown in England, touching the extreme limits of court life, the underground side of great parties and politicians. The shadow of impending revelation fell over all war peers and their suspect honors.

Now the newspapers remembered old quarrels between Lord Farquhar and his co-treasurer, Lord Younger, over these funds. When Younger, a rebellious Tory, was plotting the downfall of Lloyd George in 1922, and the breakup of the Coalition, he tried to get possession of the party funds which had rashly been put at the service of the common cause. Farquhar, as a partisan of Lloyd George, would not allow this, and after some half-public scuffling the matter was hushed, leaving the impression Farquhar had been the victor.

Were these the funds then that had unduly swollen the dead courtier's estate?

Younger was quick with his denial: "The application of Maxwell Hicks & Co., is not in the name of the Conservative party. Sir Maxwell Hicks is authorized to say that on the late Lord Farquhar's death the funds standing in their joint names reverted to the sole disposition of Lord Younger."

Coalition Dabbled in Honors.

A creaky explanation; yet it would serve if we did not know there were two funds, one of the regular Conservative party fund, the other that subscribed for "special political reasons." This latter was a secret fund, contributed during the time of the Lloyd George ministry, presumably fed by the traffic in honors, in which it is scarcely denied the Coalition dabbled, either with or without the knowledge of the Prime Minister. It is unlikely anybody knew much about this second fund but Lord Farquhar.

Politicians are toiling to lay the ghosts. Sir Maxwell Hicks, in an interview with the Evening Standard, said: "Time alone can tell whether there will be any public proceedings." If the case gets into court, one paper comments, "the whole gamut of party subscriptions may come under review with the disclosure of a list of subscribers. Imagine the state of mind of some subscribers whose identity has always remained a sacred secret suddenly finding their names blazoned forth and compared with the honors' list containing their names, for the public to draw its conclusions!

So the matter may be hushed up.

But England wants to know two things:

What happened to the "political" funds? The Liberal party has never received any according to my information, and just precisely why are Maxwell Hicks & Co. acting?

Mr. Gluck Now 76 Years Old

Given Up By Doctors But Recovers. Had Gas Fermentation and Constipation

"I am 76 years old and was suffering from auto-intoxication in the worst form, brought on by constipation. Was under the doctor's care for 12 weeks and was given up. My wife found out about Adlerika. (intestinal antiseptic) and the first dose helped me." (Signed) Louis S. Gluck.

Intestinal Antiseptic.

There is now offered to the public a preparation having the DOUBLE action of an intestinal antiseptic and a COMPLETE system cleanser. This preparation, known as Adlerika, acts as follows:

It tends to eliminate or destroy harmful germs and colon bacill in the intestinal canal, thus guarding against appendicitis and other diseases having their start here.

It is the most complete system cleanser ever offered to the public, acting on BOTH upper and lower bowel and removing foul matter which poisoned the system for months, and which nothing else can dislodge. It brings out all gases, thus immediately relieving pressure on the heart. It is astonishing the great amount of poisonous matter Adlerika removes from the alimentary canal—matter you never thought was in your system. Try it right after a natural movement and notice how much more foul matter it brings out which was poisoning you. In slight disorders, such as occasional constipation, sour stomach, gas on the stomach and sick headache, one spoonful Adlerika ALWAYS brings relief. No longer treatment, however, is necessary in cases of obstinate constipation and long-standing stomach trouble, preferably under direction of your physician.

Reports from Physicians.

"I found Adlerika the best in my entire 37 years' experience." (Signed) Dr. G. Eggers.

"I use Adlerika in all bowel cases. Some require only one dose." (Signed) Dr. F. M. P. (Name given on request.)

"I have found nothing in my 30 years' practice to excel Adlerika. (Signed) Dr. James Weaver.

"After taking Adlerika feel better than for 20 years. Haven't language to express the AWFUL IMPURITIES eliminated from my system." (Signed) J. E. Purkett.

Adlerika is a constant surprise to people who have used only ordinary bowel and stomach medicines, on account of its rapid, pleasant and COMPLETE action. It is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

Sold in St. Louis by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., 7th and Washington, and Enderle Drug Co., and other leading St. Louis druggists.

Mothers know a dose of DR. CALDWELL'S SYRUP PEPSIN Will keep them fit

'First Aid' For Sick Children

THE experienced mother is not alarmed when a child becomes sick. She knows that most of the ailments of childhood are trifling. If it seems serious she calls a doctor, but whether or not she calls him she gives, first of all, a good laxative medicine. The doctor would advise that anyway. It is his "first aid." Such experienced mothers as Mrs. Everett E. Hunt of Belzoni, Okla., who has three children and never any sickness, and Mrs. F. B. Kuklenski of Prosser, Wash., always give Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at the first indication of sickness. Such timely doses have saved them much worry.

The Meaning of "Good"

All doctors agree that a thorough cleaning out of the bowels is of first importance for it removes dangerous intestinal poisons. They will also advise a "good laxative," and by "good" they mean one that is effective and yet harmless. They know that there are physics that never should be given to children—calomel, which is mercury and loosens the teeth; phenolphthalein, a coal-tar drug that causes skin trouble; salts, which concentrate the blood and dry up the saliva. They consider Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin safe for all ages as they know it is a simple vegetable compound of Egyptian senna with pepsin and agreeable aromatics. The formula is on the package.

Give Laxative for Colds

Adults should have at least one movement of the bowels every 24 hours, and children two or three. Failure to have it means constipation, then headache, biliousness, drowsiness, lack of appetite. Give a dose of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at bedtime, and there will be health and good feeling by morning. A dose costs less than a cent, and a bottle can be had at any drug store. Colds and constipation come together, so if you notice coughing or sneezing stop it at once with Syrup Pepsin.

MARTIN B.—The George Junior Republic was founded by William R. George at Freeville, Tompkins County, N. Y., nine miles from Ithaca, on the Lehigh Valley Railroad. Its object is to prevent crime, to develop character and to promote good citizenship. Its principle of work is: Love and Labor, self-support and self-government. The republic is now an all-the-year-round home for children, founded on the belief (1) That a boy or girl may break a law, or commit an offense, and still not be necessarily a criminal. (2) That a bad" or "criminal." (2) That as a rule a boy or girl who commits an offense against social or civic laws, is possessed of some of the qualities, such as courage, leadership, self-reliance, which will, if rightly directed, make the strongest character and citizen. (3) That to direct and develop these qualities and to instill the sense of responsibility, honor, self-respect and the respect for the rights of others, are a word to make a citizen, requires more than arbitrary authority. (3) That to separate a child who has broken the law, or is in danger of breaking it, or an unmanageable child from the normal environments of educational, commercial, social, civic, religious and home conditions, and commit him to an impressionable age for a definite period to an institution where he is thrown in constant contact with the hardened criminal, where he is controlled by rigid discipline from acting upon his own initiative, and where his individuality is lost in numbers, will never prepare him for the problems and responsibilities of life and citizenship which will confront him upon his release from that institution. (4) But that to develop a sense of responsibility the child must have responsibility placed upon it; to overcome pauperism the child must learn self-support, and to respect law and order, the child must practice self-government. The George Junior Republic is international, non-sectarian, and is for boys and girls over 14. The property consists of 350 acres of land, 10 cottages, church, school house, jail building (boys' and girls'); printing shop, plumbing shop, carpenter and furniture shop, bakery, steam laundry building, farm buildings, hospital buildings and general store. Boys and girls become "citizens" upon their arrival at the George Junior Republic. Every business or "citizen" after being released from quarantine is to find employment, either on the farm or in one of the shops or cottages. The "citizens" are paid for their labor in a currency equivalent in value to United States money. Each "citizen" works five hours a day, and attends school two hours a day. The Republic school curriculum including a college preparatory course. A boarding place in one of the cottages is next arranged for, according to the amount a "citizen" is able to pay from his or her earnings. In addition to their board, each "citizen" must pay a poll tax and buy their clothing. All necessaries and some luxuries can be purchased at the Republic store. The next important step for the "citizen" is to become a family unit with the laws which govern the George Junior Republic. All laws are made by the citizens and passed upon at the monthly town meetings. The laws are enforced, and officers elected by the "citizens" from among themselves. The government officers consist of a president, vice president, secretary of state, secretary of the treasury, girls' judge, boys' judge, (these officers comprising the president's cabinet); a chief district attorney, a four district attorney, police officers, prison keepers and a board of health department. The religious, educational, home, civic and commercial training furnished the George Junior Republic develops in its "citizens" the sense of responsibility, respectability, industry and all that is highest and best in manhood and womanhood, and fits its "citizens" to become useful, creditable citizens of the larger Republic. It cost the State of New York between $630 and $700 annually for each "citizen" at the George Junior Republic. The Republic is practically supported through voluntary contributions. (2) The St. Louis Community Forum conducts its meetings in the Sheldon Memorial, 3648 Washington boulevard. You can perhaps get the addresses of those in the city communicating with the St. Louis organization.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our dear daughter, sister, grandchild and niece, Henrietta Seidensticker, who departed this life March 9, 1919.

Daughter, dear, it is just five years
Since you left is broken-hearted.
Those who saw you in your casket
Pure and white and O, so fair.
Thought you were the like of heaven
As you lay so sweetly there.
Your merry laugh we hear no more.
The voice we loved is still,
And all thought is left for memory
In your grave on a distant hill.
Sadly missed by
PARENTS, SISTER, GRANDMOTHER AND AUNTS.

In sad and loving memory of our darling brother, Mrs. Theresa Hardt, who departed this life Feb. 26, 1923:

Surrounded by friends, we are lonesome;
In the midst of pleasures, we're blue;
A smile on our face, still a heartache,
Aching and longing for you.
There are griefs that cannot find comfort,
And wounds that cannot be healed;
There are sorrows so deep in the human heart
That cannot be half revealed.
We tried so hard to keep her,
But our mother we could not save.
To her grave we slowly wended,
Until death calls us away,
Where we hope to join her, hand in hand,
At the throne on judgment day.
Sadly missed by
BROTHER AND THREE SONS.

USED CAR MARKET

WEBER

Has Changed to Garrison and Locust

Why everybody is coming to our USED CAR EXCHANGE at the southeast corner of GARRISON and LOCUST to buy USED CARS is more than we can answer.

Perhaps it is because we are not charging too much for them. The public seems to be very quick to learn where they get the most for their money.

YOU should have seen the jam Sunday and all of this week.

Just keep on coming, folks, we are trading every day for more USED CAR BARGAINS.

We GUARANTEE our USED CARS. We can truthfully say that a used car is only as good as the firm you buy it from. Ask the man who has bought a used car from us.

Look this list over and no doubt you will see just the car you are looking for. Note: We have our used cars at three different places. Also others to select from, but are not listed here on account of limited space.

These Cars Can be Seen at 18th and Locust Stores.

WEBER

Get Ready For Your Spring and Summer Outings

What better way to spend Saturdays and Sundays than motoring to the country? You CAN afford a car—maybe not a new one—but surely a good serviceable used car.

You need not hesitate buying a used car if you buy from us. Our cars are thoroughly overhauled and repainted, all in our own shops. Prices are very reasonable with very liberal terms. We handle only those cars that we know are serviceable and economical.

The following have been reconditioned and were taken in as part payment on new Hupmobiles:

FORD SEDAN; 1922 model; repainted and overhauled. All ready for a demonstration.

CHEVROLET TOURING; bumper, parking light, steering wheel lock. Everything needed. 1923 model and is in A1 condition.

DODGE TOURING; 1923. Has bumper and in good shape. A real "buy."

HUPMOBILE TOURING; 1921 model with Rex top, two bumpers, cowl lights, parking light, repainted Brewster green with gold stripe. A real all-year-comfort car.

HUPMOBILE TOURING; 1920 model; tire wheels, repainted dark maroon, cream color wheels. A bargain.

OLDSMOBILE 4-PASS.; 1922; winter front; repainted; good cord tires. Just the car for a small family.

DURANT ROADSTER; 1923 model. Double bar bumper, spotlight, extra tires, repainted. A classy car at a reasonable price.

1922 HUPMOBILE 4-PASS. COUPE; repainted, seat covers, good Kelly-Springfield tires. A real economical car.

HUPMOBILE ROADSTER; 1921 model. Repainted and good tires. A1 condition. A dandy for some salesman who desires economical transportation.

The above can be seen on our main sales floor, OTHERS IN OUR REGULAR USED CAR DEPARTMENT AND AT OUR BRANCH SALESROOMS. All are priced for quick sale and at very reasonable terms. Ride in your favorite model—we'll cheerfully demonstrate any one you choose. Better buy now before the usual Spring rush. Best buys always go first.

The Biggest Theft - $1,250,000

True Story of the Celebrated Crime at Northampton, Mass., Told From the Archives of the Pinkerton

They were master safe wreckers whom notorious James Dunlap led in a series of bold exploits, but in the Northampton case they obtained the combinations to the vault and inner door by torturing the cashier —A favorite ruse was to gain access to room above banking quarters, take up the floor and, toiling for several nights in succession, dig through the vault's protective masonry and steel plates — The thrilling record of large hauls, failures and final downfall :: ::

By CLEVELAND MOFFETT.

ABOUT midnight on Tuesday, Jan. 25, 1876, five masked men entered the house of John Whittelsey, in Northampton, Mass. Mr. Whittelsey was the cashier of the Northampton National Bank, and was known to have in his possession the keys of the bank building and the combination to the bank vault. The five men entered the house noiselessly, with the aid of false keys, previously prepared. Passing upstairs to the sleeping apartments, they overpowered seven inmates of the house, gagging and binding them so that resistance or alarm was impossible. These were Mr. Whittelsey, his wife, Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Cutler, Miss Mattie White, Miss Benton and a servant girl.

The bedroom of Mr. and Mrs. Whittelsey was entered by two men who seemed to be leaders of the band. One wore a long linen duster buttoned nearly to the knees, also gloves and overshoes; the other wore a jacket and overalls. Both men had their faces concealed behind masks, and one of them carried a lark lantern. On entering the room the two men went directly to the bed, one standing on either side and handcuffed Mr. Whittelsey and his wife. Both carried revolvers. The proceedings were much the same in the other rooms.

After some delay and whispered consultation, the robbers ordered the five women to get up and dress. When they had done so, they were roped together by ankles and wrists, and taken into a small room where they were kept under guard by one of the band. Mr. Cutler also was imprisoned in the same way. Then the two leaders devoted themselves to Mr. Whittelsey. They told him plainly that they had come for the keys of the bank and the combination of the vault, and that they would "make it hot" for him unless he gave them what they wanted. Mr. Whittelsey replied that it was useless to attempt to break into the bank, as the locks were too strong for their efforts, and he would not betray his trust. At this the man in the linen duster shrugged his shoulders and said they would see about that.

Mr. Whittelsey was then taken downstairs, and again summoned to surrender the keys. Again he refused. At this the man in the overalls put his hand in the cashier's trousers pocket and drew forth a key.

"Is this the key to the bank?" he asked.

"Yes, it is," answered the cashier, hoping to gain time.

"You lie," said the robber, with a threatening gesture, at the same time trying the key in the lock of the front door, which it turned.

"Don't hit him yet," said the other; "he is sick." Then he asked Mr. Whittelsey if he wanted a drink of brandy. Mr. Whittelsey shook his head no. Then the man in the linen duster renewed his demands. He wanted the combination of the vault. Mr. Whittelsey gave him some figures, which the robber wrote down on a piece of paper. These were for the outer door of the vault. He demanded the combination for the inner door, and Mr. Whittelsey gave him other figures. Having written these down also, the robber came close to his prisoner and said: "Will you swear these figures are correct?"

"I will," answered Mr. Whittelsey.

"You are lying again. If they are correct, let's hear you repeat them."

The cashier could not do this, and so disclosed that the figures were not the right ones.

"See, No. 1," said the robber, addressing his comrade. "We're wasting time; we'll have to teach him to stop lying."

As he spoke he struck the sharp point of his lead pencil into Mr. Whittelsey's face so violently as to make a wound, and followed this with several blows to the body.

"Will you tell us now?" he asked.

Mr. Whittelsey kept silent. Then both men came at him, wringing his ears, shaking him by the throat, hurling him to the floor and pounding their knees into his chest. For three hours this torture was continued. More than once the ruffians placed their revolver at Mr. Whittelsey's head, declaring they would blow his brains out unless he yielded. Finally he did yield; the suffering was too great; the supreme instinct of self-preservation asserted itself. Toward 4 o'clock in the morning, bruised from head to foot, and worn beyond further resistance, he surrendered the keys and revealed the true combination of the vault.

Then the robbers went away, leaving two of their associates to watch over the prisoners. One of the band, before his departure, did not disdain to search Mr. Whittelsey's clothes and take his watch and chain and $14 in money. The last of the band remained in the house until 6 o'clock, and it was an hour later before Mr. Whittelsey succeeded in freeing himself from his bonds.

He hurried at once to the bank, arriving there soon after 7 o'clock. He found the vault door locked, its dials broken off, so that it was impossible at the moment to determine the extent of the robbery, or, indeed, whether there had been any robbery. It was necessary to send to New York for an expert before the vault could be opened, which was not accomplished until late that night, 30 hours after the attack had been made. Then it was found that the robbers had been only too successful, having secured money and securities estimated at a million and a quarter dollars. Much of this sum was safe deposits, and the loss fell on the depositors; and to some it was the loss of their whole property.

At this time the authorities had no clew to the identity of the robbers, though they had left behind them numerous evidences of their presence, such as dark lanterns, masks, sledge hammers, overshoes, and the like. Their escape had been managed as skillfully as the robbery itself. Sheriff's officers and detectives did their best during the subsequent days and weeks, but their efforts were in vain. The president of the bank offered a reward of $25,000 for the apprehension of the robbers and the return of the property; but there were no discoveries.

When several months had elapsed, the Pinkertons were called into the case. They began by carefully studying certain communications that had been received by the bank directors from persons claiming to have in their possession the missing securities. The first of these communications was dated New York, Feb. 27, about a month after the robbery. It ran as follows, the letters of each word being carefully printed with a pen, so that there was little chance of identification through the handwriting:

No attention had been paid to this letter, although two certificates of stock accompanied it which had undoubtedly been in the bank's vault. Three other letters of similar nature had been received later. To one of these the bank people had sent a guarded reply, which had called forth the following letter, dated New York, Oct. 20:

"Gentlemen: Since you have seen fit to recognize the receipt of our letter, we will now send you our price for the return of the goods. The United States coupon bonds and money taken cannot be returned; but everything else—bonds, letters and papers, to the smallest document—will be returned for $150,000. If these figures suit you, we will make arrangements, according to our promise, and you may have the goods as soon as preliminaries can be arranged for the safe conduct of the business. If you agree to this price, insert in the New York Herald personal column the simple word 'Agatha.' Respectfully, etc. RUFUS."

The special value of these letters was in helping the detectives to decide which one of several gangs of bank robbers then operating in the country was most likely to have committed the crime. Being familiar with the methods of each gang, Robert Pinkerton was able to draw useful inferences from evidence that would otherwise have been insignificant. He knew, for instance, that the notorious gang headed by James Dunlap would be more apt than any other to thus negotiate for the return of all the securities in a lump, since it was Dunlap's invariable rule to insist upon personally controlling the proceeds of his robberies until final disposition was made of them. On the other hand, the gangs headed respectively by the notorious "Jimmy" Hope, "Worcester Sam" and George Bliss might have divided the securities among the members and then tried to negotiate a compromise on the individual portions.

A fact of much significance to the Pinkertons was the rather remarkable interest in the case, and apparent familiarity with it, shown by one J. G. Evans, an expert in safes and vaults and the representative of one of the largest safe manufactories in the country.

The day after the robbery Evans had been at Bristol, Conn., in the interest of his firm, who, on receipt of the news, had immediately wired him to proceed to Northampton. His presence in Northampton was regarded as nothing strange, for he had been there several times during the months just preceding the robbery, and once had inspected the lock and dials of the vault of the robbed bank. What did seem a little strange, however, was Evans' evident interest in the negotiations for a compromise. On a dozen different occasions he talked with the president and other officers of the bank regarding the robbery, and insinuated quite plainly that he might be in a position to assist them in recovering their lost securities. A few months after the robbery he even went so far as to tell one of the directors that he could name the members of the gang.

This disposition of Evans to put himself forward in the negotiations had all the more significance to Robert Pinkerton from the fact that it had been rumored that a series of daring bank robberies lately committed in various parts of the country had owed their success to the participation of an expert in safes and locks, who had been able, through his position of trust, to reveal to the robbers many secrets of weak bank locks, safes and vaults. Up to this time these rumors had remained indefinite, and no one ventured to name the man. It was known, however, that the false expert was a man of high standing in his calling and generally regarded as above suspicion. It was also known that there was great jealousy in other gangs of bank robbers because of the success of the gang with whom this man was working, and that overtures even had been made by the leaders of some other gangs to win over to their own gangs this desirable accomplice. Robert Pinkerton had already concluded that the gang so ably assisted was the Dunlap gang; and he was now pretty well persuaded, also, that the Northampton robbery had been committed by the Dunlap gang. There was every reason, therefore, for keeping a sharp eye on the safe expert, Evans.

As he studied the case, Mr. Pinkerton recalled a circumstance that had happened in the fall of the previous year. On the night of Nov. 4, the First National Bank of Pittston, Pa., had been robbed of $60,000, and Mr. Pinkerton had gone there to investigate the case. He met a number of safe men, it being a business custom with safe men to flock to the scene of an important bank robbery in order to supply new safes for the ones that have been wrecked. While they were all examining the vault, still littered with debris of the explosion, the representative of one of the safe companies picked up a small air pump used by the robbers, and, looking at it critically, remarked that he would have sworn it belonged to his company, did he not know that was impossible. The air pump was, he declared, of precisely his company's model, one that had been recently devised for a special purpose. At the time

Scott slipped a thin piece of wood into the lock at night.

Mr. Pinkerton regarded this as merely a coincidence, but now the memory came to him as a flash of inspiration that the man who had remarked the similarity in the air pump represented the same company that employed Evans.

In view of all the circumstances, it was decided to put Evans under the closest questioning. He did not deny that he had made unusual efforts to effect the return of the securities, but professed that it was because he was sincerely sorry for the many people who had been ruined through the robbery. And he professed to believe, also, that he had been unjustly treated in the affair, though just how, and by whom, he would not say. To the detective's trained observation it was apparent that he was worried and apprehensive and not at all sure of himself.

In November, George H. Bangs, superintendent of the Pinkerton agency, a man possessed of very remarkable skill in eliciting confessions from suspected persons, had an interview with Evans. He professed to Evans that the detectives had secured evidence that practically cleared up the whole mystery; that they knew (whereas they still only surmised) that the robbery had been committed by the Dunlap and Scott gang, and that Evans was a confederate; that for weeks they had been shadowing Scott and Dunlap (which was true), and could arrest them at any moment; that there was no doubt that the gang had been trying to play Evans false (a very shrewd guess), and would sacrifice him without the slightest compunction; and, finally, that there was open to Evans one of two courses—either to suffer arrest on a charge of bank robbery, with the prospect of 20 years in prison, or save himself, and at the same time earn a substantial money reward, by making a clean confession of his connection with the crime. All this, delivered with an air of completed certainty, was more than Evans could stand up against. He broke down completely and told all he knew.

The story told by Evans is one of the most remarkable in the history of crime. He admitted the correctness of Robert Pinkerton's inference that the Northampton bank had been robbed by Scott and Dunlap and their associates, and in order to explain his own connection with this formidable gang he went back to its organization four years before. The leader of the gang was James Dunlap, alias James Barton, who, before he became a bank robber, had been a brakeman on the Chicago, Alton & St. Louis Railroad. His inborn criminal instincts led him to frequent the resort of thieves in Chicago, and thus he met "Johnny" Lamb and a man named Perry, who took a liking to him and taught him all they knew about breaking safes.

Dunlap soon outstripped his masters, developing a genius for robbery and for organization that speedily proved him the most formidable of all the bank robbers then operating in the country, not even excepting "Jimmy" Hope, the notorious Manhattan bank robber. He had the long-headedness and stubbornness of his Scotch parents, united with the daring and ingenuity peculiar to Americans, and he had organized the most dangerous and best-equipped gang of bank robbers that the country had ever known.

Dunlap's right-hand man was Robert C. Scott, alias "Hustling Bob," originally a deckhand on a Mississippi steamboat and afterward a hotel thief. Scott was a big, powerful man, with a determination equal to anything. Their associates were what one might expect from these two. Other members of the gang were Thomas Doty, William Conroy, "Eddie" Goody, John Perry, James Green, a professional burglar originally from Canada, and the notorious John Leary, alias "Red" Leary, of whom more will be said later on. In addition to these, the gang contained several members of less importance, men who acted merely as lookouts, or as go-betweens or messengers.

The first large operation of Dunlap's band was the plundering of the Falls City Bank in Louisville, Ky., of about $200,000, escaping with their booty. This was satisfactory as a beginning, but Dunlap and Scott dreamed of achievement beside which this was insignificant. They began a careful investigation through many states, to learn of banks of weak structure containing large treasure. One of the gang finally found precisely what they were in search of in the Second National Bank of Elmira, N. Y., which institution, being a Government depository, contained, as they learned on good authority, $200,000 in greenbacks and six millions in bonds.

A survey of the premises satisfied the gang that, massive though it appeared, with its ponderous iron walls and complicated locks, the vault of this bank was by no means impossible of access. The floor above the bank was occupied by the Young Men's Christian Association, one of the association's rooms being directly over the vault. There was the floor between, and under that four feet of solid masonry, some of the stones in it weighing a ton. And under the masonry was a layer of railroad iron, resting on a plate of hardened steel an inch and a half thick. All this, however, so far from discouraging the conspirators, gave them greater confidence in the success of their plan, once under way, since the very security of the vault, by structure, from overhead attack lessened the strictness of the surveillance. Indeed, the most serious difficulty, in the estimation of the robbers, was to gain easy and unsuspected admission to the quarters of the Young Men's Christian Association, on the second floor. The secretary, a very prudent man, had put on the outside door of the association rooms an improved Yale lock, which was then new upon the market and offered unusual obstacles to the lock picker. Neither Dunlap, Scott nor any of their associates had skill enough to open this lock without breaking it, which would, of course, have been fatal to their plan. For days, therefore, after all the other details of the robbery had been arranged, the whole scheme seemed to be blocked by a troublesome lock on an ordinary wooden door.

So serious a matter did this finally become that Scott and Dunlap went to the length of breaking into the secretary's house at night, and searching his pockets, in the hope of finding the keys and getting an impression of them. But here, again, the secretary had taken precautions that defeated their purpose, for he had hidden the keys under a carpet, where the robbers never thought of looking for them. Disappointed in their search, they went away, making no attempt to carry off anything, a bit of forbearance which caused the excellent secretary much wonder the next morning, when he found that nothing was missing, although there were plain traces of intruders.

The Yale lock still continuing an insoluble difficulty, Perry finally made a journey to New York, in the hope of finding some device by which to open it. There, in the course of his search, and in a curious way, he made the acquaintance of Evans.

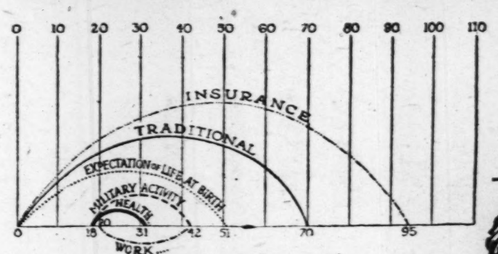
LIVING TO THREE SCORE AND TEN

Modern science of life extension tells the individual many things to help him along to a healthy old age—Figuring the life prospects of wife and spinster, husband and bachelor — Marriage as an aid to longevity—Clergymen and soap makers as good 'risks'—High rate of peace time mortality among army and navy officers



The chart of life and work. This shows the insurance limit of life, the traditional span, the expectation at birth and the periods of greatest health and capacity for work.

HOW long may you expect to live?

Will you reach the Psalmist's traditional three score and ten? Or if you have already got there, will you live to be so old that when you tell your age to an insurance actuary he will look at you with an amused smile and say: "Why, man, you're off my books. You died six months ago."

New and recent researches in that most fascinating and vital study which has to do with the expectancy and possible extension of life have evolved many interesting facts and theories, one of the facts being that in the last 20 years there has been an addition of about 12 years to the average man's expectancy of life. This, as will be explained, does not mean that every person will have 12 years added to his life. The statistician has struck an average. The individual's hope of realizing on the added 12 years of life depends on how nearly he approaches the average in respect of occupational risks, present health and mode of life.

The fact remains that, despite all modern researches, the Psalmist's three score and ten is still accepted, even by the medical profession as the traditional limit and that, in the view of all thoroughly trained life insurance men, any person who lives beyond 95 or at most 96 years doesn't know the first principles of right dying. No use to expect insurance men to come to your ninety-seventh birthday party. They will insist that you are dead and the only dead men who can have successful birthday parties are Washington and Lincoln.

Insurance practice and medical research have shown that in the United States the expectation of life is 51 years, but those who reach the age of 50 have a further expectation of 20 years. A man is supposed to be in full health and vigor in the so-called "health span" between the ages of 20 and 31. In this period he can tackle anything in the way of sport or work, confident in his physical reserves.

And yet, unless the reserves of energy have been too lavishly drawn upon, the man of 31 still has a long period of life expectancy if he is not in a hazardous occupation and watches his step when he is passing over the dangerous grade crossings of life at the ages of 40 and 50. In the United States his expectancy of long life will be below the average if he is a stonecutter, an army or navy officer, an actor, a railroad engineer or fireman, a glass worker, a city fireman or a bootlegger. But if he is a blacksmith he has an excellent chance of living to sing the anvil chorus to his great-grandchildren.

In England he will have the best chance if he is a clergyman, gardener, nurseryman or a tallow, soap or glue manufacturer. Glue manufacturers "stick around" longest of all. At the other end of the scale, with 50 per cent less than the average life expectancy are tin workers, file makers, costermongers and street hawkers.

The Life Extension Institute is maintained by the most important insurance companies in the United States for the purpose of gathering all possible data on life expectancy and of keeping in touch with actual conditions by making periodic physical examinations of policy holders. It is the recognized authority in the field.

A leading insurance actuary who is a member of the Life Extension Institute, has written exclusively for the Sunday Post-Dispatch Magazine the following summary of his observations as to life expectancy:

"Life is sweet, and every healthy person wants to live a long time, and strange as it may seem, even though knowledge is power, nonetheless, too much delving in statistics as to mortality, causes of death, etc., is more apt to cut down your life than lengthen it, because as it is well known, most of us weak human beings have only got to read about the symptoms of some dread disease, and we immediately imagine the corresponding feelings in our own bodies.

"The first suggestion as to long life, therefore, would be that unless you have some very distressing present affliction which your common sense tells you you cannot ignore, forget about yourself, go along in the ordinary course of your way, and have your doctor look you over once in a while to see that all goes well.

"A great many statistics are published from time to time showing the rates of mortality experienced in certain occupations, and among certain groups of people, married, single, abstainers, nonabstainers, people who have a poor family history, people who have bad hearts, and in general all sorts and conditions of men. It need not necessarily be a discouraging feature to find one's self in a group where the rate of mortality is high. Life insurance companies who are constantly investigating experience of various groups of life deal in groups and not in individuals, and while they may find, and do find, for example, that persons of excessive weight, or people with bad hearts, do not on the average live as long as the normal individual, nonetheless there are a great many persons in that group whose expectation of life is just as good as the average person.

"There is no truer saying than the old one that 'everyone at 40 is either a fool or a physician,' and many of us before that age know very well the things that agree with us and the things that disagree with us. We know that if we pursue a certain course certain important results will follow, and common sense will naturally dictate that such actions be avoided. Reaching old age is much more a matter within the power of the individual than most people imagine, and if they will be honest with themselves and live in accordance with what they find produces the healthful, man and they need not worry much about premature death or anything of that sort.

"Of the general rate of mortality as a whole, it is true that there has been a considerable lengthening in the average expectation of life except at the extreme ages. Perhaps this improvement is really greater than appears, because on account of greater medical skill, greater knowledge of hygiene, many young persons are kept alive and reach maturity who a century ago would have died simply through lack of knowledge of how to deal with their cases. This has naturally thrown a great many deaths into the older age groups, so that there must be even a greater improvement in the normal people comprised in that group than is shown by the population in mortality statistics.

"A very recent study of population statistics shows that the expectation of life, both male and female, is now markedly greater than even 10 years ago. It also shows that the expectation of life among unmarried men is less than among married men, but that no such marked difference is to be found among those of married and unmarried women. The difference in mortality between single and married men does not necessarily mean that marriage is a cure for human ailments, but rather that what may be described as a more normal life led after marriage is unquestionably a factor on the good side, but in marriage itself there arises a sort of selection of the more healthy males as opposed to those less strong. The more vigorous men are the most likely to get married, so that apart from their status such a group should in any event show a lower rate of mortality than the other.

"We must remember, too, in considering population statistics which show increases in the number of deaths from heart disease, cancer and such things and many other causes, that the more accurate diagnosis of the present day has of itself, particularly in the case of cancer, caused an apparent increase in the death rate from that terrible disease. It may be, and probably is, the case that the death rate from cancer has actually increased, but almost certainly not to the extent shown by a mere examination

...ion of population death rates as they stand. In the ...same way difficulty is found in comparing the rate of ...portality as between abstainers and nonabstain-...ers. The nonabstaining class consists of all kinds of ...drinkers, from the very excessive to the most mod-...erate.

Between these figures there can, therefore, ...be no comparison between the abstainer and what is ...known as the moderate drinker. Again, in the ab-...staining class there are many people who are ab-...stainers because of physical inability to assimilate ...alcohol and for other reasons. The death rate among ...the abstaining class is, therefore, probably higher ...than the true rate on normal lives who are by choice ...abstainers.

"Probably the most exhaustive investigation that ...has been made in recent times with reference to oc-...cupation, physical characteristics, personal and family history of insured lives ...was made a few years ago by a committee representing the Actuarial Society of America and the Association of Life Insurance Medical Directors. This investigation covered the period of 14 years ...and included about 93 per cent of the life insurance policies issued in the United States and Canada. A study was made of (a) 68 groups involving occupational hazards, (b) 76 groups of medical impairments, and other groups of minor importance. In all, records of 500,375 lives were examined. It was found that at the younger ages tall men have not been so desirable risks as short men, while at the older ages the short and moderate sized men have not been so good risks as the tall men. The lowest mortality was found among those people who were distinctly above the average weight at the younger ages of entry, and below the average weight at the older ages of taking life insurance. It should be remembered that in considering these figures the fact of medical examination and of the selection by the companies of lives which they insured was quite considerable, and naturally the greater the departure from the average weight the more carefully were the lives examined.

"With reference to occupations, the experience among commissioned officers of the army and navy proved to be higher than that expected, and for naval officers the percentage being almost 20 per cent in excess of the same figures for army officers. The death rate from accident and suicide was three times the normal, and among firemen five times the normal among navy officers.

"Persons engaged in city fire departments, glass workers, those engaged in the liquor trade, all showed, with very few exceptions, a rate of mortality considerably in excess of the average. Railroad service proved to be a hazardous undertaking among engineers, the death rate from accidents being eight times the normal, and among firemen five times the normal, and even among the groups of clerks, freight inspectors, etc., the death rate from accident was four times the normal. The theatrical profession shows a high rate of mortality, and, as one would naturally expect, the diseases of the nervous system were much higher than normal. Barbers, bricklayers, cigar makers, cotton factory operators, house painters, printers, shoe factory operators, woolen mill operators were all slightly in excess of the normal mortality, although not to any very great extent. The death rate of blacksmiths was found to be considerably lower than the normal, and this was probably due to the robust type of men in this occupation, and to the fact that they work in airy shops or out of doors, generally in rural districts. The death rate from tuberculosis among stone cutters was six times above the standard rate.

"With reference to the personal history, one of the interesting developments was that it was not a good thing to have too large a waist line, because the relative mortality of those with a large abdominal girth is above the already heavy mortality found among the general body of those of corresponding weight. Second, the relative mortality increases slightly with the increase of the abdominal girth. The smaller the girth the fewer the deaths from tuberculosis, while the death rate from apoplexy, diabetes, pneumonia increases with overweight. With reference to the family history of the particular individual the common case of a family history of tuberculosis is very much related to the weight of the individual. For example, in a certain group of people who became insured between 36 and 44 and whose weight was 25 to 45 pounds less than the average the ratio of actual expected death was 132 per cent. In a similar group where the weight was from 5 to 20 pounds less than average the mortality, corresponding figure, was 111 per cent. Where the individuals were up to 20 pounds in excess of the normal weight the mortality had been reduced to 102 per cent. In all of the above cases the tubercular history was limited to one parent and a brother or sister.

"Turning to another phase of the question, examination was made of the records of those applicants who had given a history of malarial fever. Three types were investigated: (a) Pernicious, (b) remittant, and (c) all other kinds of malarial fever. It was found that a single attack of malaria seemed to be of little moment except in the Southern states, where a little higher mortality was experienced in this group, although no such history of malarial fever in any Southern state has resulted in a materially higher mortality than among the insured as a body in those states.

"On the whole, then, it will be seen that one's chance of living is a very complicated matter. It does not depend on just one thing, but on a great many things, and the most satisfactory thing for us all to remember is that we ourselves can do more for ourselves than any other person or any other factor of our existence. It is well to know the danger points in life, but it is not well to lay too much emphasis on them. Be bright and consistently optimistic, and you can forget all about death rates. If you live a healthy, happy life it will last as long as you have any use for it."

Dr. Eugene Lyman Fisk, medical director of the Life Extension Institute, recently wrote: "Those who survive the perils of childhood and early adult life may look forward with reasonable confidence to living to the seventieth year or somewhat beyond."

British medical and insurance men also have been devoting considerable time and energy to life expectancy and life extension. One of these experts, in an article written for a recent issue of a London weekly, recorded these interesting conclusions as to the life expectancy of men and women, married persons, bachelors and spinsters:

"Last year, in England and Wales, 13 men died out of every 1000 persons in the country. The number of women was only 11.

"Nowadays women are getting more exercise and are learning more about the rules of health. Consequently woman's chances of a long life are increasing faster than man's—for he is still compelled to 'brave the elements' on days when she may stay at home.

"Perhaps for that reason it is safer to be a married than an unmarried woman. Marriage and motherhood, of course, have their own risks. But these are becoming much smaller than they used to be, thanks to more careful medical attention. On the other hand, a married woman lives at home, her work is indoors, and she has a husband to provide for her.

"Most unmarried girls are compelled to go out to work, just as men are. They therefore share the dangers of bronchitis and pneumonia.

"Unmarried girls, too, often eat too little food, or content themselves with food which is not sufficiently nourishing. It is a curious but well-known fact —which I have verified for myself again and again—that the presence of a man in the house is necessary to make women eat proper meals. The married woman has to provide her husband with substantial food, and shares this food with him. The unmarried girl is under no such necessity.

"That, I firmly believe, is why so many girls look much fitter after marriage than they looked in their days of spinsterhood.

"The same kind of reasoning, however, does not apply to married men and bachelors. Though this may not be pleasant news for women, the fact remains that a bachelor has a better chance of long life than a husband.

Nor is it difficult to understand why. When a man is single he almost invariably gets plenty of exercise and all the good food he wants. His time and money are his own.

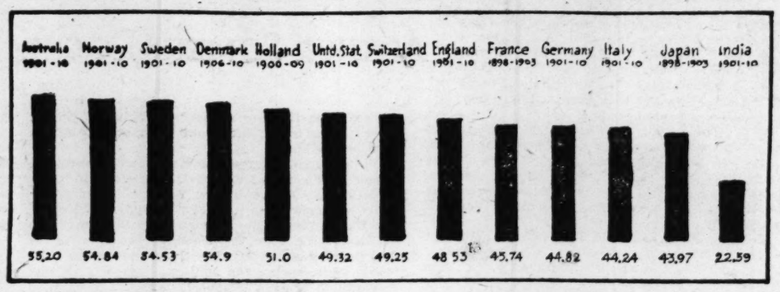
"After marriage both time and money become more valuable. Memberships of golf clubs are dropped and food is often curtailed. Worry, too, is apt to accumulate.

"The married man, however, scores in other directions, and so does not lose so heavily as he would if the bachelor enjoyed all his advantages with none of his troubles. Marriage usually brings a new incentive to effort and a new sense of personal importance. Both of these make for a long life."

As a general rule, a short or medium sized man or woman lives longer than a tall one. But the odds, of course, are the other way if the short person has grown stout and the tall person has remained spare.

One of the tallest and thinnest men the writer knows has just reached his eighty-sixth birthday and is still absolutely fit.

Want of exercise, of course, is far more common among women than among men, and if this was the only cause of a short life most men would become widowers.



Expectation of life at birth for boys of various countries. It will be noted that the United States figure here is about 49 years. Since this diagram was made in 1921 it has increased to about 51 years.

The stone cutter has the least favored of the trades in regard to life expectancy. His work predisposes him to tuberculosis.

A Writ of Habeas Corpus

By ARTHUR SOMERS ROCHE

IT was exactly six days since the Gray Ghost had telephoned that within a week he would kill Pelham with his own hands. Twice motor cars had barely missed running over Pelham. Three times shots had been fired at him. One of them clipped his hat.

Jerry Tryon, his partner, and Slim Dickenson, his cook-valet-friend, were both equally anxious during this especially trying week. They were convinced that if Pelham remained indoors the Gray Ghost would come to him. And when the criminal should come a score of Tryon operators would be awaiting him.

But their plans had been unheeded by Pelham.

"Slim," said Pelham, "I'm going out to dinner."

"I got a swell steak in the icebox," said Slim. But his voice was hopeless.

"Then eat it," snapped Pelham.

"What's the big idea?" demanded Slim. "You're not going out without me, are you?"

"I am," declared Pelham. "Everywhere I've gone I've had a group of people with me, and our friend has made only long-range attempts. If I'm alone, he'll come close. And that's what I want." He laughed. "But because that's what I want, he'll not make any effort tonight."

The Tryon Agency held title to the whole block in which Pelham's apartment was situated. This was not merely an investment calculated to bring in a certain percentage of return; it was also in the nature of a precautionary measure.

So Pelham had been able to construct various doors and passages which made it possible for him, walking into his bedroom, to appear five minutes later in the doorway of a building 50 yards away.

It was dusk when he slipped quietly into the street. He was recognized at once by an operative of the agency. The man would have followed, but Pelham peremptorily ordered him to remain where he was, and darted down a side street.

West of Broadway he picked up a taxi and drove to Edgemont, that gay roadhouse which, well within the city's limits, yet makes one feel that the city has been left behind.

As he progressed peacefully through an excellent dinner he began to feel something ridiculous in his precautions. This was New York; not Corsica, or Sicily, or some other land of the vendetta.

Looking across the river at the twinkling lights of Jersey, watching the moonlight turn the river into dancing silver, hearing the orchestra play the latest waltz, seeing the smiling faces of girls—he managed to bring a temporary sense of security to his strained nerves.

Deliberately, he forced himself to regard the past months of the Gray Ghost's renaissance, the past few days of strain, as unrealities, and the present, with its calm and joyous security, as the true reality.

There is in the makeup of every man who may lay claim to being an artist—and if Pelham's profession was not artistic his methods entitled him to be considered at least more imaginative than his fellow craftsmen—something which enables him to disregard the immediate past and the immediate future, and live only in the moment. Pelham could do this. He was quite forgetful of the Gray Ghost, as, his hunger satisfied, he lighted a cigarette, stirred the sugar in his coffee, and looked about the room.

Presently he realized that the pretty blonde who sat alone, two tables away from him, was eying him.

He had idly noticed her when she first came in, and had seen her insist upon being shown to the table where she now sat. A card, with the word "Reserved" printed upon it, had disappeared from the table almost simultaneously with the transfer of something from the girl's hand to that of the head waiter.

She held up her hand and furtively beckoned to him. He hesitated a moment. Then it seemed to him that it was to him as an individual to whom she wished to speak, and not merely to a well-dressed stranger. So he rose and approached the table at which she sat.

Her face lighted up as he stopped beside her. "Won't you sit down?" she invited him.

"Thank you," said Pelham.

He pulled out a chair, sat down and looked inquiringly at her. She was even prettier than she had seemed at longer range. For the rest she seemed a well-bred girl whose air of sophistication might well be due to nothing more than the contacts required by the necessities of earning a living. Pelham set her down as connected in some capacity with the theater.

"I suppose you must have a terrible opinion of me," she said.

"I am reserving judgment," smiled Pelham.

Convinced that her mute invitation to join her had not been born of an inclination to flirtation, but had been inspired by some real need, he gave her time to approach the matter, whatever it was, in her own way.

It was rather delightful to sit at table with this girl, drinking in through the open windows the soft air of the spring evening.

He suddenly wished to whisper pleasant nothings, and to hear them told to him. But there was something so forced in her tones that he became more than ever convinced that she had had a weighty reason for summoning him.

"You didn't invite me here for idle chatter," he said, presently. "Not that I wouldn't be glad if you had. But why did you want me to join you?"

She smiled uncertainly.

"Because tonight I need money," she said, ruefully.

"How much?" asked Pelham.

"Until the waiter gives me the check I will not know," she replied. She laughed nervously. "I didn't feel like dining at home tonight. This lovely spring evening tempted me out. And it was not until I had finished my dining that I realized I had come here without money. The situation has its embarrassing features."

"Fortunately, the embarrassment need not endure," he said.

"Nor need the loan go long unpaid," she told him.

He waved a deprecating hand. "Suppose that I had had the good fortune to own your acquaintance; in that case there would have been no talk of repayment."

"But those are suppositions," she reminded him. "I can stretch convention so far, but not beyond. If you will pay my check, and then come with me to my apartment—it is on Ninety-fifth street, just off the drive—I will refund the money."

Pelham was conscious that she was anxiously awaiting his reply. The girl was lying. She had undoubtably tipped the head waiter in order to procure the special table which she had chosen. Furthermore, the waiter who had served her had greeted her with apparent recognition as he came to take her order.

She had picked him because he was Jimmy Pelham. Why?

There could be only one answer to this question. Yet to connect the Gray Ghost with this decent girl seemed a little far-fetched. But he pleasantly agreed to accompany her to her apartment and receive money to replace that which now he gave to the waiter.

Outside the dining room she left him, stating that she must reclaim her complexion from the ravages of this spring evening. She disappeared into one of the reception rooms. Pelham waited for her. If this girl were in any way connected with the Gray Ghost matters of importance might be learned from her. When she came out he ordered a taxi, helped her into it, and sat down beside her. The machine started.

"I think," he said, "that under the circumstances it would not be impertinent if I told you my name. It's James Pelham."

The color faded from her cheeks, and she gasped with amazement or horror. She leaned instantly forward and knocked upon the window in front of which sat the chauffeur. The man glanced over his shoulder, then turned into the curb and stopped.

"What's the matter?" demanded Pelham.

"They said it was—that you were—get out," she ordered. "Quickly. They may be on their way, in this neighborhood"——

"Slim," he cried, "in just two minutes I'm going to put six bullets through that trunk."

The Gray Ghost Jailed at Last, But——

Pelham took both her hands in his and held them tightly. "Suppose, my dear young lady, that you begin at the beginning. Of course I know for whom you're working, but how did it happen that you didn't know my name, considering for whom you work?"

"I didn't know for whom I was working until you mentioned your name. But now I can guess," she told him.

"And what did you think you were doing?" demanded Pelham. Beneath his cynical glance she crimsoned. "You see," he went on, "I know you have money in your purse. I saw you tip the head waiter."

"Yet you came with me? You have courage, Mr. Pelham."

"Rather an extremely natural curiosity," he retorted. "But tell me."

Her color became more pronounced. "A man whom I have known casually for some time—he is a stage manager and I am an actress—knew that I had been out of an engagement for months. He told me that a certain man was badly wanted as a witness in a will case that was being handled by some lawyer friends of his. He said that the witness had avoided all attempts to serve subpenas on him. And if I would dine every night at Edgemont and look for this man, my dinners would be paid for, and if I were so fortunate as to find the wanted man, and detain him long enough for subpena servers to get to him, I was to receive a thousand dollars."

Pelham whistled softly. Then he smiled.

"How did you know me?"

"I was given half a dozen photographs of you to study," she replied.

Pelham's smile grew broader. "You believed this cock-and-bull story about a missing witness? You believed it was necessary to entice this possessor of information to your apartment?"

"I didn't believe it," she admitted. "But—I needed the dinners and the thousand dollars. And I didn't dream that murder was meant. But if you are James Pelham, only one person could be behind the stage manager."

He eyed her gravely. "As for the thousand dollars that you have lost—I will give ten thousand for information that would lead me to the Gray Ghost. I'm not going to censure you. Give me the name and address of your stage-manager friend. And keep your eyes open." He descended from the taxicab.

The girl leaned through the door. "Mr. Pelham," she said, eagerly, "I've been straight. I've worked. It's only recently that the luck has been bad"——

"It's all right," said Pelham.

He walked swiftly away. But before he went home he telephoned the agency and ordered operatives to watch the apartment where the girl lived and to arrest her friend, the stage manager.

Slipping cautiously through the night, he reached one of the many entrances to his apartment, and was finally in his own bedroom.

Slim greeted him with delight. He handed his employer a telegram. It was from Philadelphia, was signed with the name of Wade Bonstel, one of Pelham's oldest friends, and stated that the sender would arrive in New York in the morning. He would pay Pelham a long-promised visit. And he was sending a trunk by express.

Pelham was delighted. He had not seen Bonstel for two years.

When the expressman arrived with Bonstel's trunk, a sizable wardrobe affair, Pelham directed them to bestow it in the guest bedroom. The men had just left when the telephone rang. He answered it, and recognized the voice of his feminine companion of the earlier evening.

"Mr. Pelham," she said, "I was so ashamed that I didn't tell you that when I went into the reception room at Edgemont, it was to telephone my friend that I had found the missing witness. He and some others came to my apartment just now. I told them that you had become suspicious and left me.

"When they left I followed them. They went to a garage near here, and a minute later a truck came out of that garage. Two of the men who had come to my apartment rode on the truck. I followed it in a taxi. The men whom I knew got down after a few blocks, but the truck continued downtown. It stopped before your house, and two men who still remained on the truck carried a trunk into your apartment building. I don't know what it means."

"But I do," cried Pelham. "And I think you've earned the $10,000."

He hung up; he turned to Dickenson. He led the way into the guest room and drew his revolver. "Slim," he cried, "in just two minutes I'm going to put six bullets through that trunk."

"Are you crazy?" demanded Slim.

Pelham laughed. "You thought I was crazy when I went out tonight. But if I hadn't gone out I'd never have met a certain young lady about whom I've been telling you. She tried to do a little sleuthing of her own. The Gray Ghost's week is almost up. She stumbled into his last desperate plan. Slim, in 10 seconds more I begin to fire."

But in the second the trunk swung open, and the Gray Ghost, his arms lifted above his head, stepped out of the receptacle.

"Luck was with you, Mr. Pelham," he said.

The Gray Ghost sat humbled and shrunken before Pelham the next day, in an office in the Criminal Courts building. Yet there was no smile upon Pelham's lips, no twinkle in his eye.

The Gray Ghost was a quitter! He was the last man on earth who should have wept and pleaded for his life.

Pelham burst suddenly into protest. "For heaven's sake, Ballantyne, be a man!" he cried.

The Gray Ghost lifted his ashen face. All the terror that, on other occasions, his gray personality had been able to inspire was gone now.

"This is blackmail," said the Judge, hoarsely.

"That's all very well for you to say, Mr. Pelham," he whined, "but you aren't looking at the electric chair. I am. That's why I sent for you, to make a deal, if I could. What good will it do to send me to the chair?"

Pelham's contempt burst the bonds of courtesy to a defeated foe.

"Good? We won't argue the question, Ballantyne. You couldn't understand the feeling that the sight of you arouses in decent people."

"Yes, I could," replied Ballantyne. "When I think of the things I've done, I feel ashamed."

Pelham's jaw dropped. The statement was childishly weak and futile. The Gray Ghost seemed to have crumbled into nothingness. There remained nothing of the great though vicious spirit that had laughed at law.

"What do you expect me to reply?" demanded Pelham. "That as long as you're ashamed and sorry it will be all right, eh?"

"I want to make a deal," said the Gray Ghost. "You may be able to try me for murder. I'm not saying that you can't get a conviction. But I'm offering $5,000,000 for my life."

"A shade more than it's worth," grunted Jerry Tryon.

"Still," argued Ballantyne, "there's a lot of people would be glad to get their money back. I'll plead guilty to murder in the second degree. If you and the District Attorney will accept that plea, I'll give you, this minute, the exact location of everything that I've stolen in the last year. It's all in one place, easy to get at. What's the use of killing a poor old man like me? I'm all through; I never can get away."

For a moment Pelham thought that in the prisoner's eyes gleamed an odd light, a light of eager watchfulness. Then, as the thin shoulders sagged, he decided that he had been mistaken. He looked at Jerry. They both looked at the District Attorney. The latter gentleman smiled deprecatingly. He glanced casually at his copy of the indictment and cleared his throat portentously.

"After all, Mr. Pelham," he said, "the ends of justice will be as well served by the imprisonment of this man as by inflicting upon him the ultimate penalty. With nothing to gain, we can hardly hope that he will disclose the hiding place of his loot. But if his life is promised to him, he agrees to surrender property of great value. Also the State will be spared the great expense of a contest. What do you say, Mr. Pelham?"

"I am a private detective, with private clients to serve," replied Pelham. "If the acceptance of such a plea is satisfactory to you, it is, of course, all right with me."

The Gray Ghost hurled himself from his chair; sobbing, he prostrated himself before his opponent. It was one of the most painful moments in Pelham's whole life.

He turned his back upon the other three men, walked to the window, and stared at the street below. He could not help hearing Ballantyne's hysterical tale, but he could avoid looking longer upon this painful disintegration of character.

"Well, come clean," he heard Jerry say.

"I would not deceive you, Mr. Tryon," whined Ballantyne. "You gentleman are so good and kind to me that I wouldn't lie to you."

"Where's the stuff?" demanded the District Attorney.

"At Rolling Meadows," replied the Gray Ghost.

"Where is that?" asked the District Attorney.

But Jerry Tryon answered the question. "In Westchester, about 10 miles north of White Plains," he cried. "You're kidding us!"

"Why should I do that?" countered Ballantyne.

"There are no storage warehouses in a village like Rolling Meadows," asserted Jerry. Imagination had never been Tryon's strong point.

Something of the old spirit sounded in the Gray Ghost's voice. "Warehouses are owned by people who ask inconvenient questions, Mr. Tryon. But if a South American millionaire purchases an estate in Westchester, no one is surprised if vans occasionally drive up to his house. Many of the treasures I acquire have no merchantable value. I took them for my own pleasure. They would give me no pleasure stored in a room somewhere. But in my own drawing room, on the walls of my library"——

Pelham glanced over his shoulder. It seemed to him that not merely was there new vigor in the prisoner's voice, but the shrunken figure seemed to have taken on flesh. But as he looked again he decided that his eyes and ears had been mistaken. For Ballantyne's attitude was again cringing and his voice whined.

"All you've got to do," said the Gray Ghost, "is to go up to Rolling Meadows, surround the house of Mr. Rafael Anatolia, and I shall have earned my life."

Pelham could stand no more. He ignored the prisoner as he spoke to Jerry.

"Make your arrangements," he said, "and call for me. I'll be at my rooms."

He strode from the office and out of the Criminal Courts building, engrossed in his own thoughts.

"Why hadn't the Gray Ghost gone down fighting?"

He put the question to Jerry Tryon, later on that evening. Jerry laughed at him. "All crooks are rats," declared Jerry.

"Rats fight when cornered," objected Pelham.

"Not human rats," argued Jerry.

Pelham shrugged. "What do we do?" he asked.

Jerry looked at his young-old partner. There was almost a reverential affection in the ex-policeman's blue eyes. Also there were traces of worry in them. Pelham did not look as fit as the man who loved him liked to see him. At a time when he should be jubilant, Pelham seemed depressed and nervous.

"The thing for you to do is to go to bed," said Jerry. "The only thing left to do is to mop up the debris, and we won't need you at all. You've been under a terrific strain for months, and tonight's the night when you begin a long vacation."

Pelham's thin lips curled faintly in a smile. He brushed his nervous, muscular hand over his high forehead.

"What's the idea, Mr. Tryon, of the bulge over your right hip?"

Jerry's ruddy features took on a deeper blush. "Well, there might be a little trouble"——

"And so you wish me to be snugly in bed if occasion arises for you to use that cannon in your pocket, eh?"

Now, Aviation's Greatest E : A Flig

Four officers in the Air Service, U. S. Army, soon will soar from the Pacific coast in specially-built machines—Americans hope to gain for their nation the coveted distinction of having first encircled the globe by airplane—Bases of supplies have been established abroad by the War Department—The route for cruise, carefully planned, will require traveling perhaps 39,000 statute miles — Non-commissioned officers for mechanicians and helpers

SIR FRANCIS DRAKE, the famous explorer and Admiral of the sixteenth century, who calmly insisted upon finishing his game of bowls before going forth to smash the "Invincible Armada" of Spain, was the first Englishman to sail a ship around the world.

That great voyage, at the end of which Queen Elizabeth herself went aboard Drake's ship, the Golden Hind, and knighted him, occurred almost three and one-half centuries ago. Now it looks as if Maj. Frederick L. Martin, U. S. Army, would be the first man of any nationality to command a globe-encircling squadron of airplanes.

It is the most audacious thing yet attempted in the history of aviation, notwithstanding the series of sensational aerial exploits which have been crowded into barely more than 20 years. To wing their way across the Atlantic is but an incident of the program. Measuring the distances by those straight lines on which, tradition has it, the crow flies, the route totals 25,550 statute miles.

Of course, they actually will travel more miles than that. The total has been estimated at 39,000 miles. There are winds and storms to be reckoned with, the chance of getting off the proper course, to one side or the other, and the likelihood that unforeseen events may now and then require them to turn back to one of the supply bases, whence the world tour will be resumed.

Canada, Alaska, Japan, China, French Indo-China, Burma, India, Persia, Syria, Turkey, Rumania, Jugo-Slavia, Austria, France, England, the Orkney Islands, Iceland, Greenland, Canada again, and then the United States—just a recital of the principal countries in which they will land breathes romance.

And here are some of the cities: Seward, in Alaska; Yokohama, Shanghai, Hongkong, Saigon, Bangkok, Rangoon, Calcutta, Delhi, Bagdad, San Stefano (Constantinople), Bucharest, Belgrade, Vienna, Strassbourg, Paris, London, Reykjavik, Quebec, Montreal, Washington, and back across the United States to the starting point. The greatest modern nations, backward peoples, seats of ancient civilizations, out-of-the-way corners of the earth—surely it is a wondrous pageant which will unfold beneath the eyes of Maj. Martin and his men.

British, French and other energetic races have coveted the distinction of conquering all the hazards involved in going clear around the world by airplane, the twentieth century's most important mechanical triumph. And their fliers have displayed wonderful courage and skill, in smaller undertakings. But for a pioneer airplane cruise around the world, apparently the air service of the U. S. Army is necessary.

As these words are written, March 31 has been tentatively set for the date of departure, but with the understanding that it might be made a few days later. The four planes will proceed from Los Angeles to Seattle, but the route of the historic trip officially begins at Seattle, and it will end there, too, if successful.

The squadron will consist of four planes, one piloted by Maj. Martin, the others by Lieut. Lowell H. Smith, Lieut. Leigh Wade and Lieut. Erik Nelson. All these officers have extraordinarily fine records in the air service. With each will go a noncommissioned officer as mechanician and assistant. The plan is for the four planes to keep together throughout the voyage.

St. Louis and adjacent territory should feel more than ordinary interest in what really is a path-finding cruise from the fact that Maj. Martin recently completed two years' service as commanding officer of the air service's technical school at Chanute Field, Rantoul, Ill. All the officers designated for the proposed flight around the world were ordered, early in January, to Langley Field, Va., for a special course of training.

The coupling of Maj. Martin's name with that of the celebrated Admiral Drake suggested itself as soon as the commander of the squadron had been chosen. Although Drake's circumnavigation of the world had been preceded some 60 years by one of the ships which sailed from Spain, commanded by the Portuguese-born Magellan and under the patronage of King Charles V of Spain (Magellan was slain during the voyage by natives of the Philippine Islands), English-speaking people are apt to think of Drake as the mariner who deserves the honor.

Perhaps this is because he was such a redoubtable fighter of England's foes, in both the New World and the Old.

At any rate, Maj. Martin's friends presented him with the silver wings which are the insignia of U. S. aviators, and upon which the friends had had inscribed the famous words of Drake, after his world voyage:

"It matters not; God has yet many things in store for us."

They were prophetic words. Eight years later, under the command of Lord Howard, Drake was one of the English sea Captains who destroyed the "Invincible Armada." A terrible storm aided the English, but Spanish sea power was dealt a crushing blow.

At various times Washington, San Diego, Los Angeles and Seattle were announced as the starting place for the long cruise. Los Angeles, after other cities had been selected, made active efforts to win the distinction for itself. The four planes were designed and built by the Douglas Airplane Co. of Santa Monica, nearby. With such a claim to consideration, Los Angeles people believed that their city should be given preference.

These "Douglas world cruisers," as the type is called, are the result of much study by designers and skillful pilots, in which experience of the past and requirements of the proposed around-the-world cruise received thorough attention.

For months the War Department has been making preparations to insure the safety of the fliers. Just as little as possible is being left to chance. The entire route has been separated into six divisions, and each division has been covered by one or more army officers, going in advance.

These officers obtained detailed information on landing and seaplane facilities, transportation, airways, meteorological and climatic conditions, etc., and made arrangements for the passage of the squadron through the territory to which each officer was assigned. Supplies were shipped from the United States to various points on the route, several months in advance of the flight, and other supplies were purchased abroad.

There is a carefully arranged system of main supply depots and minor depots. Gasoline, oil and smaller articles of supply have been, or will be, placed at practically all the scheduled stops.

Nothing But a Weed ? It May be Worth Mone

St. Louis chemist says that many of our garden "pests" have curative or palliative properties in medicine and that, so great is the demand for them, large quantities of numerous common weeds are continuously being imported—Plants which grow wild, and despised, in vicinity of St. Louis but for which there is a steady market — Names and other details, by an expert :: :: :: ::

An address broadcast recently from Station K S D which probably put some new ideas into the minds of a good many people, especially children, was on the subject of "Weeds Used in Medicine." The speaker was Oliver S. Ledman, a St. Louis chemist. Ordinarily, "weed" is a word applied to undesired and supposedly worthless plants, but Mr. Ledman gave a new definition. Then he called attention to the valuable properties and marketing possibilities of numerous "weeds" which grow in the vicinity of St. Louis. The address was so interesting that it is printed here.

By OLIVER S. LEDMAN.

THOSE vegetable drugs known commercially as botanical crude drugs comprise a list of more than 800 roots, barks, leaves, seeds, flowers, gums and whole herbs. They come from every known quarter of the globe and find a wide range of usefulness in medicine as well as in the industries.

Staggering quantities of these roots, barks, leaves, etc., are gathered in the United States, bit by bit, mostly in rural communities, and eventually find their way into the manufacturing centers, where they are prepared for sale across the druggist's counter or prescribed by the physician at the beside of the sick.

Poke berry, of which both the root and the dried berry find a ready market.

Many of those almost intolerable pests called "weeds" may be curative or palliative when exhibited to the human economy.

To formulate a definition for a weed presents some difficulties, but it seems to resolve itself into a plant growing in the wrong place. Therefore, a weed of today may become an aristocrat of tomorrow.

Let us cite an example or two. Do you remember that beautiful two-lipped pink flower you have seen growing in the thin timber on some barren hillside? And when you crush the plant it gives off a rather aromatic odor? This is one of the monardas. Considerable attention has lately been bestowed on this plant as a possible source of a definite element used in the treatment of the dreaded hookworm disease.

Then there is that old-time, noxious, foul-smelling plant popularly known as vermifuge, or wormseed. Some of you may remember its taste from more youthful days with a not unmixed joy. Today it enjoys an unchallenged standing in the aristocratic class. The greater portion of the oil from this plant, to which it owes its action, has been produced for years in the vicinity of the city of Baltimore, Md., but now efforts are being made to extend its cultivation into some of the Western states because of its sudden popularity in the cure of hog cholera.

We have been reading much during the past year of the treatment of diabetes with that newly isolated animal product, insulin. It has, indeed, brought joy and sunshine where formerly gloom prevailed. It has already been announced that chemists have learned of its presence in some of the most common garden vegetables. I wonder which one of our friendly neighbors will bid for the popularity that is sure to follow the discovery of insulin in workable quantities in the vegetable kingdom.

Ginseng, one of the most high - priced roots In China regarded as a panacea for most of humanity's illnesses.

I believe that, as a rule, the weed has more interest for the farmer, gardener and orchardist than for any other class of our citizens, because it gives them the most annoyance. To most of them the names and uses are unknown, and they are, therefore, unable to turn the weeds to any profit. A great many weeds might be forced to pay for their reaping.

Most every person knows the pokeberry. Both the root and berry in dried form find a ready market.

Then there is the common burdock, the root of which in dried form finds almost a limitless market. Yellow, or curly, dock, the leaves of which are much valued in early spring as greens, is always in demand in the form of dry root.

Common ragweed, so much disliked because it links itself so closely with civilization, has even come into some distinction because a serum has been prepared from the pollen for the treatment of hay fever.

Jimson weed. The leaves and seeds are parts used. It must be handled with care.

Skullcap is always in good demand. It is a plant with a square stem and a seed pod shaped much like an ordinary military cap. It will be found mostly in rather thin timber. Also will be found here culvers, or black root, a remedy much esteemed in liver and bowel troubles. The stems of this plant remain erect throughout the winter season and make it easily distinguishable from its neighbors. The root diggers, therefore, postpone their activities mostly to this season of the year. The leaves of this plant have the peculiarity of growing a ring about the stem at one point they are not scattered.

Common ragweed, from the pollen of which a serum has been prepared for the treatment of hay fever.

Queen of the meadow is another with the same leaf formation. Both root and herb are marketable. The demand is not large. Most every woman and child knows the weed. The leaves and seed of this are the parts used and are in demand. It is exceedingly poisonous must be handled with some care not inhale its dust or swallow any tion of the plant except under the rection of your family physician.

Echinacea, or purple cone flower another popular plant in medicine. use mounts into many thousand pounds. The dried root is mostly though a considerable amount of the top is consumed. It will be found growing mostly on hilltops or hillsides, coming into bloom about middle of June in this locality. The flower purplish-brown, with 10 to 15 rather pale yellow bons surrounding it.

The greatest burden resting on the hearts of root diggers is to find a large quantity of golden and ginseng, because of their scarcity and the price they command. I have known them to down and sleep by a patch when coming upon late in the day to dig it, rather than take a chance on losing the location next morning.

Golden seal is a very dependable drug in mucous membrane disorders, but has grown scarcer as the country fills with people and the is denuded of its timber. Golden seal is strictly timber plant and will not sprout the second after the timber has been cut off.

Attempts at cultivation have met with only different success, both because of the lack of knowledge and because of theft. Ginseng is most sought after by root diggers because of great price, which is now from $12 to $15 a

I have spoken thus far only of plants that be found in the territory contiguous to St. The Southeastern United States perhaps is den spot of the country for the root digger and gatherer, for it is most prolific in yield and riety. Special mention may be made of Connecticut for its witch hazel, Michigan and Northern for their peppermint, the Rio Grande basin for cacti and the Pacific slope of the Sierra Mountains for barks gathered by the carload.

The demand for many of our common so great that large quantities of them are usually being imported in immense quantities. is perhaps due largely to our high standard of ing and the comparatively low price received these weeds.

Many children and inactive persons residing our farms can, even with comparatively low derive a very considerable income in gathering weeds. It is not particularly laborious and no amount of training is necessary. Most roots be washed and dried and all herbs and leaves be dried in the shade.

Honesty on the part of the collector is a of great importance, else his labor may be lost, case he thinks he can deceive the crude drug by mixing undesirable materials with the desirable.

Markets for all crude drugs of vegetable may be found in almost every city of any size in the country and very frequently it is possible to make contracts for the delivery of large quantities running over a season when found in sufficient volume in a single locality.

was obtained to rooms over the vault by false keys, as before; the flooring was taken up and put down every night without exciting suspicion, the masonry was removed, the iron plates of the vault were penetrated, and, finally, one night Scott and Dunlap were able to lower themselves through a jagged hole into the money room beneath.

It now remained to force open the safes inside the vault; and to accomplish this the robbers used, for the first time in the history of safe-wrecking in America, what is known as the air-pump method, which had been devised by Evans and carefully explained by him to Scott and Dunlap. As a first step, all the seams of the safes formed by the doors were carefully puttied up, save two small holes, one at the top and one at the bottom. Then, at the upper hole, Scott held a funnel filled with fine powder, while Dunlap applied the air pump at the hole below. By the draft thus created the powder was drawn into all the interstices between the heavy doors and the frames of the safes. Then a little pistol, loaded simply with powder, was attached near the upper hole, and, by a string tied to the trigger, discharged from a safe distance above. The safes were blown open and their contents secured, the robbers making good their escape with $120,000 in money and about $700,000 dollars in bonds. No part of this money was ever recovered by the bank, nor were any of the gang captured at this time. The securities were, however, afterward sold back to the bank. Indeed, so cleverly had the whole affair been managed that no suspicion fell upon Scott, Dunlap or any of their associates.

By fall their money began to run short, and they decided to look about for another job. In the Quincy robbery they had broken their agreement with Evans, paying him only a small sum for the use of the air pump which he had furnished them. Now, however, they called upon him again, and, partly by threats, partly by generous offers, induced him to assist them again. A series of unsuccessful attempts at robbery were made on banks in Saratoga, Nantucket, Covington, Ky., and Rockville, Conn. In several instances failure came at the very time when success seemed sure.

The gang's most desperate adventure befell in connection with the attempt on the First National Bank of Pittston, Pa. The bank occupied a one-story building covered with a tin roof, and the robbers decided to make the attack from the roof. But there was a serious difficulty in the fact that in case of rain coming at any time after they had begun operations, water might soak through the openings they had made and betray them. Dunlap's ingenuity, however, was equal to this emergency; and each night, after finishing their excavation, they carefully relaid the sheets of tin that had been disturbed, protecting the joints with red putty, which matched the roof in color. So well did they put on this putty that, although it rained heavily the very day after they began, not a drop leaked through.

On the night of Nov. 4 only one layer of bricks separated them from the top of the vault, and it was decided to finish the work and do the robbery that night. Two hours' hard labor with drag and jack-screw sufficed to effect an opening, and Scott and Dunlap were lowered into the vault. They found three Marvin spherical safes, protected by a burglar alarm. But Dunlap was somewhat of an electrical expert and was able to so surround the burglar alarm with heavy boards as to render it of little or no danger. They experienced much difficulty, though, in blowing open the safe. The first one attempted yielded on the second explosion, and they secured $500 in currency and $60,000 in bonds. The next one was far more troublesome, not less than 10 explosions being required to make way into it. And just as the task was at last accomplished, and they were on the point of seizing a great sum of money, there came a warning call from Conroy, who was doing sentry duty on the roof, and it was necessary to fly.

When Dunlap and Scott had been dragged out of the vault by their associates, they were found scarcely able to run. During all the 12 explosions of powder and dynamite they had never left the vault, but, crouching behind the boards that guarded the burglar alarm, had remained within arm's length of explosions so violent that they tore apart plates of welded steel and shook the whole building. Worse than the shock of these explosions were the noxious gases generated by them, which Scott and Dunlap had to breathe. On coming out, their clothes were wringing wet with perspiration, and they were so weak that their legs tottered under them, and their comrades had to almost carry them for a time. But, nevertheless, they managed to walk 30 miles that night, to Lehigh, where they boarded a train to New York.

It was on this occasion that there was left behind in the vault the air pump which Robert Pinkerton afterward recalled so shrewdly to Evans' disadvantage.

Coming, in his confession, to the Northampton bank robbery, Evans said that the gang considered making an attempt there for several months before the robbery was actually executed. For a time they had designed to rob the First National Bank, where Evans had been employed to put in new doors, but this scheme they afterwards abandoned. Enjoying the fullest confidence of the Northampton bank officers, Evans had made repeated visits to the bank and gained important information for his associates. It was through his influence that the bank directors decided to give the whole combination of the vault to the cashier, Whittelsey, who had previously been intrusted with only half of it, the remainder being given to one of the clerks.

On the night of the robbery Evans was in New York, but he had gone to Northampton a day or two after, as already stated. Then, for the first time, he realized what immense wrong and suffering would be inflicted upon innocent people by the robbers, and he said it was this that had prompted him in his efforts to have the securities restored to the owners.

Returning to New York, he at once communicated with Scott and Dunlap by means of Herald personals, and had several interviews with them in the city during the month of February. While they were anxious to dispose of the securities, it was plain from the first that they distrusted Evans and proposed to lessen his share of the profits. While pretending to approve the steps he was taking for a compromise with the bank, they were really, without his knowledge, carrying on secret negotiations with the same object. The suspicion on either side grew until finally it could no longer be concealed. Meeting Scott in Prospect Park some time after the robbery, Evans said: "When are you going to settle and give me my share?"

"You'll never get a cent," answered Scott; "you've given the whole gang away."

For some time they did not meet again. Evans continued his vain efforts for a settlement, growing more and more anxious as the months went by and he saw the danger to himself become more threatening. On Nov. 9 he met Scott, Dunlap and "Red" Leary on the outskirts of Brooklyn and a violent quarrel occurred about the division of the spoils. Reproaches and threats were exchanged with stormy language, and at one time Evans' life was actually in danger.

It was soon after this interview that Evans decided, under the management of Supt. Bangs, to save himself by making a full confession. He had fewer scruples about betraying his associates, because he had become convinced that in the previous robberies, notably in the one at Quincy, Ill., he had been treated most unfairly by Scott and Dunlap.

Evans said that for several weeks preceding the Northampton robbery the gang had concealed themselves in the attic of a schoolhouse which stood four or five rods from the highway and apart from other houses. His statement was substantiated by the discovery in this attic, after the robbery, of blankets, satchels, ropes, bits, pulleys and provisions, including a bottle of whisky bearing the label of a New York firm.

After the vault had been rifled, the money and securities were placed in a bag and a pillowcase and carried to the schoolhouse, where they were stowed away in places of concealment that had been previously prepared. One of these was underneath the platform where the teacher's desk stood. Another was a recess made behind a blackboard, which was taken off for the purpose and then screwed carefully in place. For nearly two weeks this treasure, amounting to over a million dollars, lay unsuspected in the schoolhouse, the teacher walking over a part of it, the children working out their sums on the blackboard which concealed another part. It was left there so long because the robbers were unable to return for it, owing to the strict watch for strangers that was kept at the railway station and along all the roads. Finally Scott bought a team of horses for $900 and, with Jim Brady, drove over to Northampton from Springfield. They secured the booty and got away.

After hearing Evans' story, the question foremost in Mr. Pinkerton's mind was where the stolen securities had been concealed. From what Evans said, and from what he himself knew about the methods of the gang, he was satisfied that Dunlap possessed this secret, and would intrust it to no one unless absolutely compelled to do so. The likeliest way of compelling him was to put him under arrest, which might very well be done, now that Evans had consented to turn State's evidence. For weeks Pinkerton "shadows" had never been off Scott and Dunlap, who spent most of their time in New York, the former living with his wife at a fashionable boarding house in Washington square.

Instructions were accordingly given to the shadows to close in upon them, and on Feb. 14 both men were arrested in Philadelphia, as they were on the point of taking a train for the South.

Despite the large sum of securities in their possession, the men had run short of ready money, and, while awaiting a compromise, were starting out to commit another robbery. They were taken to Northampton and committed to jail to await trial.

It happened as Mr. Pinkerton foresaw. Brought into confinement, Dunlap and Scott were compelled, in the conduct of their affairs, to reveal the hiding place of the booty to some other member of the gang. They chose for their confidant "Red" Leary. The securities, as subsequently transpired, were at this time buried in a cellar on Sixth avenue, near Thirty-third street, New York. The precise spot was indicated to Leary by Mrs. Scott, who, in doing so, reminded Leary of an agreement entered into by the members of the gang before the robbery, that any of their number who might get into trouble could, if he saw a necessity, call upon his confederates to dispose of all the securities on whatever terms were possible and use the proceeds in getting him and others—if others were in trouble also—free. At the time Leary scoffed at this agreement, but was perfectly willing, even eager, to have it enforced a little later, when, by the orders of Inspector Byrnes, he was himself arrested on the charge of complicity in the memorable Manhattan bank robbery, which had occurred some time before. Having failed in a purpose of shadowing Leary to the place where the securities were hidden, Robert Pinkerton decided that the best move to make next would be to arrest Leary for complicity in the Northampton robbery. Steps were taken to have requisition papers prepared, and if was pending the arrival of these that Leary was held on the other charge, for it was not thought that he had really taken part in the Manhattan bank robbery.

Leary escaped and fled to Europe, but was afterward arrested in Brooklyn by Robert Pinkerton and three of his men. He was taken immediately to Northampton and put in jail there.

Some time previous to this the Pinkertons had located Conroy, who had also escaped from the Ludlow Street Jail, in Philadelphia; and immediately on the arrest of Leary, Robert Pinkerton sent one of his detectives from New York to Philadelphia, who was fortunate enough to arrest Conroy at one of his resorts on the same night, and he was also delivered in jail at Northampton.

Some months previous to this the Pinkertons had also arrested Thomas Doty, another member of the band, and lodged him in the Northampton Jail.

In the meantime, Scott and Dunlap, now in State prison, had made a confession as against Leary, the holder of the securities; and when Leary was brought to Northampton they wrote him a letter, notifying him that unless the securities were handed over to their proper owners, they would take the witness stand against him and convict him, but if he did turn over the necessary securities they would refuse to take the stand. This resulted in the recovery by the Northampton bank of nearly all the securities stolen from the bank.

After the securities were returned, Scott and Dunlap refusing to take the stand against Leary and Doty, the authorities were eventually obliged to release them, as Evans had also refused to take the stand against them.

Scott and Dunlap were sentenced to 20 years each in State prison. Scott died there and Dunlap was pardoned several years later and went to live in a Western city, a reformed man.

Evans is engaged in legitimate business, and is prospering. In compiling this chapter from the records the writer has, by request, changed some of the names of the parties, who since that time have reformed and are now respected members in the communities where they reside, and the author has no desire to injure them.

A Writ of Habeas Corpus

"Well, I don't see any necessity for you doing the rough work," said Jerry, obstinately. "Besides, the chances are a thousand to one against there being any trouble at Mr. Rafael Anatolia's estate."

Pelham's smile grew broader. "Thousand to one shots bring home the bacon sometimes." He rose from the chair in which he lounged and slapped Jerry upon the shoulder. "Some day I'll deliberately leave you out of the climax of one of our cases, and my excuse will be that you need your eight hours' sleep. Answer my question: What do we do?"

"I have five automobiles filled with plain-clothes men waiting downstairs," said Jerry. "We ought to make Rolling Meadows in a little over an hour. When we get there we crash in. That ought to be all there is to it."

"I hope so," said Pelham.

"What do you mean?" demanded Jerry.

Wrinkles appeared on Pelham's forehead. "Jerry, I'm cussed if I know what I mean. Only, weren't you surprised at Ballantyne's attitude? His cowardice, I mean."

"Nothing that a crook does surprises me," declared Jerry.

Pelham sighed. "All right, let's go," he said.

Judge Smithson Waddell's note of hand was so long overdue that his honor had almost forgotten ever having signed the document. A member of the Supreme bench of his State, with 30 years of honorable practice of his profession to look back upon, it was only natural that he should have forgotten—almost—an incident of his early career. Judge Waddell, in those moments when circumstances reminded him of an incident of long ago, remembered it in a most impersonal way. The Smithson Waddell who had committed a crime was a person so long dissociated from Judge Waddell that it was difficult for him to realize that the same person was an uncaught criminal and an ornament to the bar. Memory was jogged tonight.

He had just finished dinner when a servant brought him word that Jason Anstey was calling. The Judge frowned. He had looked forward to a quiet evening. But he would come up for renomination six months from now, and it was just as well to be on friendly, even cordial, terms with a man who was supposed to hold a great many thousand votes in the hollow of his hand. A few moments later they sat facing each other across a narrow mahogany desk, littered with briefs and law books.

Mr. Anstey was a stout gentleman, with a mop of white hair upon a huge round head. He had two chins, thick lips, a blob of a nose, and green eyes that twinkled. Only the black brows that ran harshly in an unbroken line from temple to temple denied his expression of easy good humor.

"I want to tell you a little story, Judge," Anstey began. "Thirty years ago there was a young lawyer just beginning practice in New York. A widow sued a railroad for damages for personal injuries. The railroad settled for $6000, and the lawyer signed a receipt for that amount. But he told the widow that he had collected $3000. He took one thousand for his fee, and paid her two. Now it happened that shortly afterward the widow died, and the lawyer who settled her estate—it was a little one—ran across some items that aroused his suspicion. He investigated and found that the facts were as I have just related them. What do you suppose he did?"

Judge Waddell's lean, stern face was white.

"What?" he whispered.

Anstey smiled blandly. "He did nothing, beyond filing away a few affidavits. Why? Because he had an idea that the information which he possessed would come in handy some day. That 'some day' is now."

"This is blackmail," said the Judge, hoarsely.

Anstey's smile became a grin. "I've always said, Judge, that when it came to rendering quick decisions on the law, there was no one in your class. You call it blackmail, and that's exactly what it is."

"Why?" demanded Waddell.

"I was the young lawyer who handled the widow's estate and put the affidavits away in my safe," said Anstey. "You looked like a clever young chap to me, bound to succeed. The widow had no heirs, and there was nothing to be gained by putting you in jail. Why, Judge, you'd be surprised if you knew the men on whom I have the goods. Some of them will never know, perhaps, that I could send them to Sing Sing. Others, like yourself, find it out only when necessity arises."

"The crime—if you want to call it that—is outlawed," declared the Judge.

Anstey shrugged his fat shoulders. 'Sure it is, but news is always news; 'Respected Judge Proved Criminal!' Think what the headline writers would say!"

"What do you want?" asked Waddell.

Anstey leaned forward. The harsh, black line of his eyebrows made Waddell think of an iron bar, the sort of iron bar that, with others, fronts a prison cell. "I want you to issue a writ of habeas corpus within the next five minutes," he said.

"For whom?" asked the Judge.

"For Peter Ballantyne, alias the Gray Ghost," replied Anstey.

"You're mad," cried Waddell.

Anstey stared at him. "When I leave your house, I'm going to call up every city editor in New York and tell them why I shall oppose your nomination."

"You wouldn't dare! You'd expose yourself," said the Judge.

Anstey laughed. "I am one of the Gray Ghost's lawyers. He's been worth a hundred thousand a year to me for some time. A client like that is well worth risking a little exposure for."

"It will ruin me," objected Waddell.

"You'll be ruined if you don't," retorted Anstey. "Besides, I've got plenty of reasons why the writ should be granted. I have sworn statements to the effect that the Gray Ghost is the victim of a conspiracy. Will you grant the writ?"

The long overdue note had been presented. Judge Smithson Waddell paid it, with interest.

* * * * *

Shortly before 10 o'clock that night, men having been stationed all around the house, Jerry Tryon rang the front-door bell of the mansion of Mr. Rafael Anatolia, and was admitted, with Pelham and eight detectives, into a magnificent hall. Soon both he and Pelham were thoroughly convinced that they were the victims of a gigantic hoax. For Mr. Anatolia was at home, entertaining at dinner two foreign bankers, a Senator, a former member of the Argentine Cabinet and their wives. Not merely did the South American gentleman prove conclusively that Rafael Anatolia was not a nom de guerre of the Gray Ghost, but that Rafael Anatolia—though as yet hardly known in New York—was a man of high position in his native Argentina, with financial affiliations in three continents. Crestfallen, the detectives departed.

Almost as soon as their automobiles stopped before Pelham's apartment, a member of the District Attorney's staff waiting there told them that at 9:30 o'clock that night the Warden of the Tombs had been served with a writ of habeas corpus. Judge Waddell had held court at once in the Ballantyne case and had committed the prisoner to the custody of his attorneys.

They went upstairs to Pelham's living room, telephoned the Tombs and verified the statement made to them by the District Attorney's attache. Both of them knew that the attorneys who were responsible for the person of the Gray Ghost would never deliver him to the court. They would offer a story of violent escape, and though all the world might suspect, no one would be able to disprove their tale.

"It's not hard to have hindsight," said Pelham. "Here are the facts, Jerry. The Gray Ghost came to my room prepared to kill me. I got the jump on him, and he surrendered. Now, a man of his great ability knew that there was always the chance of my getting the jump on him. Yet he took no precaution. He must have known all along that he would manage to get out."

"You mean that he knew Waddell would grant a writ of habeas corpus?"

"I'm sure of it," asserted Pelham. "Oh, we'll never be able to prove complicity between Waddell and the Gray Ghost, but we know it just the same."

"That's absurd, Mr. Pelham," said Jerry. "Why, if we'd been in town when that writ was presented, we'd have risked contempt proceedings rather than surrender Ballantyne."

"You've noticed, perhaps," said Pelham, sardonically, "that we weren't in town."

"What do you mean?" cried Jerry.

"I mean that all this cringing cowardice of Ballantyne's was assumed to quiet any suspicions that we might have; it was feigned in order to give him a couple of hours in which he could be certain that we would offer no interference to the schemes of his lawyers and himself."

"But why on earth did he take such a chance? It sounds as though he actually wanted to spend a night in jail," said Jerry.

Pelham stared at his partner. He leaped to his feet. "Jerry," he cried, "that's exactly it.. He did want to spend a night in jail."

"Why?" asked Jerry incredulously.

"Jerry," Pelham said, "I know that I have my finger within an inch of the reason, but it might as well be a mile. I don't know."

Next morning the papers contained long accounts of the release of the Gray Ghost on a writ of habeas corpus issued by Judge Waddell. The late evening papers were even more sensational. Phillips & Grathwait, the attorneys to whom the Gray Ghost had been turned over, appeared in court to state that their client had escaped. Pelham was not even interested. He merely wanted to know why the Gray Ghost had submitted to arrest. For he knew there was a reason.

"There must be money in stealing," Jerry said, two nights later. "You know that gardener who worked for Mrs. Leamington"——

"The man that stole her jewel-casket?" asked Pelham, idly.

"That's the man. You know they got him an hour after he stole the jewels. And the police know that he hid the jewels within half a mile of Mrs. Leamington's house in Great Neck. He wouldn't know where to sell them, for he was not a professional crook, just a tough chap that went wrong."

"Well, what about it?" asked Pelham.

Mr. W. A. Lumpkin, of Oklahoma, says, "After being deaf 18 years, I used your treatment only a few days an' hear fairly well."

Mr. Anthony, Chapman, of Michigan, says, "The terrible head noises have stopped entirely and my hearing is practically back to normal."

"The District Attorney asked for heavy bail. A hundred thousand dollars. This afternoon lawyers appeared for the gardener, put up a hundred thousand in cash, and the man walked out of the court. Now, where did he get the money to put up?"

Pelham groaned. "Jerry, now we know why the Gray Ghost was willing to take the chance of arrest, and also the chance of getting away."

"I don't follow you," said Jerry.

"No?" said Pelham. "A man steals half a million dollars' worth of jewels, just an amateur. The Gray Ghost is arrested and sent to the same prison. The prisoners are allowed to walk around; even if they aren't, communication is not hard to establish. The Gray Ghost escapes. Two days later your amateur thief puts up a hundred thousand dollars in cash for bail. Where did he get it?"

"You mean that the Gray Ghost went down to the Tombs to see him, found out where he'd hidden the jewels, and in return put up the money for his bail?" demanded Jerry.

"I mean exactly that," replied Pelham.

And two days later he received in the mail a diamond ring. It was accompanied by a card on which were engraved the words: "Mr. Peter Ballantyne" and on which was written, in Ballantyne's handwriting:

"A little souvenir of a pleasant stay in the Tombs. If you have scruples about retaining it, you may give it to Mrs. Leamington."

A Flight Around the World

one for which advance preparations had to be made, is the fact that during portions of the cruise the planes must be equipped to descend safely upon water instead of upon land.

Thus, the ordinary landing gear with wheels will be used in flying from Los Angeles to Seattle, but at the latter point the landing gear will be removed and the planes equipped with pontoons. Water landings will be made in sheltered harbors along the coast of British Columbia, Alaska, the Aleutian Islands, Japan, Chosen, China, French Indo-China, Siam, Burma and Calcutta, India.

At Calcutta the pontoons will be removed and the usual wheeled landing gears will be used in flying across India, Persia, Asia Minor and Europe, including London and Hull. At the latter point, which is an English seaport, pontoons again will replace the wheels and will remain in place until the squadron reaches Keyport, N. J., where once more the pontoons will give way to the wheeled landing gears for the overland journey to Washington and across the United States to the starting point on the Pacific coast.

At the places just mentioned, the necessary pontoons or landing gears will be awaiting the squadron. There will be no delay in the matter of supplies, if the plans of Major-General Mason M. Patrick, chief of the air service, are carried out as he has directed them.

The prediction already has been made that the motors in each plane will be changed half a dozen times during the cruise, because of the hard service which will be required of them, the severe climatic changes they must meet and the fact that the installation of a new motor will be preferable to halting the squadron for extensive motor repairs.

"The object of the flight," said Major-General Patrick recently, "is to demonstrate the feasibility with which aerial communication may be established between the various continents, and to obtain much valuable information concerning the operation of present-type aircraft in various climates.

"Several previous attempts to encircle the globe by air have been made by the British and French, but without success. The accomplishment of a flight of this nature by the United States will, therefore, bring to the United States the honor and distinction of being the first nation to encircle the globe, and would be quite in keeping with the present rapid development of aeronautics, in which our country leads all nations of the world, in spite of the small appropriations available for experimentation and research in this new science."

Lieut. C. C. Mosely, commandant at Clover Field, Los Angeles, where the four world cruisers are being tested, stated that the machines would be numbered and in all probability would be named as well, before setting out on their long journey.

The names doubtless will have been chosen before these words appear in print. But how about "Golden Hind," the name of Drake's ship when he went around the world? Or "Victoria," the name of Magellan's vessel which in 1522 completed the first voyage around the world?

The American attempt to achieve the first globe-encircling airplane flight will be made in machines which are all-American in design and manufacture. The Douglas world cruisers were developed by Donald W. Douglas, president of the Douglas concern, from the "Cloudster," an airplane which he built at Los Angeles two years ago, and the Douglas "Torpedoplane," which has been built in large numbers for the U. S. Navy.

The preliminary flight from Los Angeles to Seattle will start March 15, and will be by way of San Francisco, Sacramento, Ashland, Ore., and Eugene, Ore.

With the pick of the U. S. Army's air service taking off in latest-type American-built airplanes, specially designed for marvelously long flights without landing, and with the elaborate preparations which have been made along the route abroad, it seems impossible that this great undertaking can be anything but a success.

Gray Hair Conquered
By this Clean, Colorless Liquid

A Proved Substitute for the Lost Color

Results in a Week

"Is gray hair to become a thing of the past?"

This question has been asked ever since it was announced that a liquid known as Kolor-Bak had been discovered which, although colorless itself, quickly restores the original color to gray hair.

It seemed unbelievable at first, but the experience of people everywhere has proved that this remarkable preparation actually gives us the means to keep the hair from showing the dreaded sign of age.

How Long Will You Endure Grayness When You Can Banish It So Easily?

If you have been allowing gray hair to get the best of you, it's time to look about and see what Kolor-Bak has done for other people.

If you could talk to any of the thousands who have been through the experience of seeing their hair turn gray and who then have seen it return to its former shade by the use of Kolor-Bak, you, too, would take this easy way to get rid of your grayness.

Every scientist, every physician, knows that gray hair is hair that has ceased to receive its normal supply of coloring matter or pigment from certain tiny cells (called follicles or papillae) in the scalp, because these cells have become inactive from illness, shock of some kind, scalp disease, dandruff, infection, neglect of the hair, or lack of circulation, etc. But no matter what the cause of the grayness, it is simply amazing to see how it disappears when Kolor-Bak is used. It is a proved substitute for the natural pigmentation.

It doesn't make any difference what the former color was. Kolor-Bak will restore it. Several people whose hair was originally of different colors could use the same bottle of Kolor-Bak and each would see the former color return. No streaked or dyed look—the color is uniform throughout.

Relief for Dandruff, Itching Scalp, Falling Hair

Not only does Kolor-Bak restore the original color to the hair; it banishes dandruff and keeps the pores from being clogged with scurf and scale. Itching stops, and if the hair has been falling out the falling soon ceases. Kolor-Bak is not mussy, sticky or greasy. It is as easy to use as water.

OF OUR 'COLORITE' FABRIC DYES

An unusual photographic nature study. This picture, made by Cornelia Clarke, shows a robin leaving her nest for a hurried breakfast.

"Her brow is like the snowdrift—"
it was written of Annie Laurie. Lovely complexions have been the theme of poets and the admiration of all men since the beginning. A clear, flawless skin is the first requirement of beauty.

MERCIREX restores the true skin to health, giving a flawless complexion

Blackheads, pimples and eczema are banished by this new scientific treatment

THE skin is not a simple protective covering, but a complicated structure composed of two layers, the surface skin, and the under, or true skin, where nearly all skin troubles take root.

Poisons, germs and infections often center in the true skin, interfering with the work of the millions of tiny glands which eliminate waste material from the body. It is then that the true skin shows its distress in the form of pimples, blackheads, eczema, or other disorders appearing on the outer skin.

The L. D. Caulk Company, one of the oldest scientific institutions in the country, has developed a treatment which penetrates to the true skin, and there acts promptly and positively on the deep centers of skin disorders.

The Mercirex Treatment

This treatment consists of Mercirex Medicated Soap and Mercirex Medicated Skin Cream, which used in conjunction will positively rid the skin of pimples, blackheads and more serious disorders. There are two steps in the treatment:

1—Cleanse the affected area with Mercirex Medicated Soap, the most efficacious germicidal soap developed for disinfecting the skin. It cleanses and disinfects the outer skin in a remarkable way, and stimulates the glands, preparing for the penetration of Mercirex Cream.

2—Apply Mercirex Cream thinly. Massage gently but thoroughly until the Cream penetrates, leaving no trace of grease or stain. It goes quickly to the true skin, killing germ life and neutralizing poisons, thus enabling the true skin to function normally.

No matter how many other treatments have failed, Mercirex will give you relief. With the true skin restored to health, minor or serious surface defects disappear, leaving the complexion clear and the skin beautifully smooth.

You can begin to enjoy these benefits to-day. Your druggist is offering a full-size Mercirex treatment, consisting of two cakes of Soap and a jar of Cream—regular $1.55 value—at the introductory price of $1.25. Take advantage of this offer now—as thousands of others are! If your druggist cannot supply you, mail the coupon with $1.25, and we will send you the introductory package, together with a booklet on the care of the skin and scalp.

The complicated true skin, where most skin troubles develop. Mercirex Cream penetrates here, eliminating the nucleus of pimples, blackheads, and eczema. It is also effective against most other ailments of the skin and scalp—such as boils, ringworm, sores, wounds, insect bites, plant poisons, and dandruff.

For sale at all leading druggists.

Sallow skin

You can awaken it

You can give a sallow skin color and life simply by using a more stimulating method of cleansing.

Follow this treatment once or twice a week, and see how it will rouse the inactive pores and blood vessels:

JUST before retiring fill your basin full of hot water—almost boiling hot. Bend over the top of the basin and cover your head and the bowl with a heavy bath towel. Steam your face for thirty seconds. Now lather a hot cloth with Woodbury's Facial Soap. With this wash your face thoroughly, rubbing the lather well into the skin. Then rinse the skin well, first with warm water, then with cold, and finish by rubbing it for thirty seconds with a piece of ice.

After three or four of these treatments you will notice a wonderful improvement.

Get a cake of Woodbury's today, at any drug store or toilet goods counter. A 25-cent cake lasts a month or six weeks for this treatment and for regular toilet use.

Mark Today's Teeth

Note how many of them glisten

This is how the change came

COMPARE the teeth you see today with the teeth of long ago. Note how many teeth now glisten. Mark how clean they seem.

A change has come to millions in their methods of teeth cleaning. It is a change which you'll adopt when you once find it out. Accept this test now, for your own sake, if you have not made it.

You must fight film

The only way to whiter, cleaner teeth is to daily fight the film. Film is that viscous coat you feel. It clings to teeth. Unless removed, it soon discolors, forming dingy coats. That is why teeth grow cloudy.

Film also holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay. Germs breed by millions in it. They cause many serious troubles, local and internal. Most dingy teeth and most tooth troubles are now traced to film.

Dental science finds two ways

Dental science, after long research, has found two ways to fight film. One disintegrates the film at all stages of formation. One removes it without harmful scouring.

Able authorities have proved these methods effective. A new-type tooth paste has been created to apply them daily. The name is Pepsodent. Today careful people of some 50 nations employ it, largely by dental advice.

To homes all around you—to people you know—it has brought a new era in teeth cleaning.

Other new factors

Pepsodent does other things which research proved essential. It multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva, which is there to neutralize mouth acids. It multiplies the starch digestant in saliva, which is there to digest starch deposits on teeth.

Those are Nature's great tooth-protecting agents in the mouth. Every use of Pepsodent gives them multiplied effect.

Prove it now

These results, when you know them, will mean much to you and yours. Send this coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth become whiter as the film-coats disappear.

You will be amazed and delighted. We believe that this test will bring to your home an entirely new dental era. Cut out the coupon so you don't forget.

Protect the Enamel

Pepsodent disintegrates the film, then removes it with an agent far softer than enamel. Never use a film combatant which contains harsh grit.

"My family has always suffered from the evils of constipation. We were liberal users of calomel and bought saline laxative waters by the case. Two years ago the family physician suggested that I eat three cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast a day for two months. At the end of that time my system was in such excellent shape that today we are a family of Fleischmann advocates. We no longer require the daily medicine; our skin is clear; our health vivid, and we are generally happy and content with our life."

(A letter from Mr. Herndon P. Hippee of Des Moines, Iowa)

"UNTIL 6 months ago I was virtually a hermit, only going out to work every day and then spending the evening reading in my room. I was an extreme example of a pimple-faced youth. It seemed nothing could remove those eruptions.

"Then I tried the Fleischmann treatment. In one month my face had indeed cleared up greatly. I continued the treatment for three months, and by that time my face had become as clear as anyi dy's. I go everywhere now and bless the day I started to use Fleischmann's Yeast.

(Mr. Bernard Kliman of Philadelphia, Pa.)

"FROM the time I was 12 years old until I was 33, every year I had an attack of boils. No remedy or treatment had any effect. My profession was teaching. Seven years ago my annual attack of boils began. The school physician examined me and told me to buy Fleischmann's Yeast and take it daily for ten days. In those ten days my boils disappeared. The doctor told me to repeat this treatment once every three months for a year and that he was sure that I would have no more boils. He was right. For the past seven years I have been free from them."

(A letter from Miss Elsey H. Erwin of Pittsburgh, Pa.)

Simple, inexpensive—yet

This fresh, natural food achieves literally amazing results

"AS Executive Officer and Lieutenant, U.S. Navy, I was relieved from active duty November, 1919. Sick in mind with a pain tortured body—stomach trouble was so acute I couldn't eat or sleep. My aunt recommended a Fleischmann's Yeast Cake dissolved in water, and I took it to please her. The pain ceased. I had slight return attacks for a few weeks, but each time 'little doctor yeast cake' knocked them out.

"I eat anything now and enjoy it, and sleep like a baby. Old navy friends tell me I look like the Athletic Instructor of old."

(A letter from Charles C. Beach of Baltimore, Md.

THESE remarkable reports are typical of thousands of similar tributes to Fleischmann's Yeast.

There is nothing mysterious about its action. It is not a "cure-all," not a medicine in any sense. But when the body is choked with the poisons of constipation — or when its vitality is low so that skin, stomach, and general health are affected—this simple, natural food achieves literally amazing results.

Concentrated in every cake of Fleischmann's Yeast are millions of tiny yeast-plants, alive and active. At once they go to work—invigorating the whole system, clearing the skin, aiding digestion, strengthening the intestinal muscles and making them healthy and active. Health is yours once more.

Dissolve one cake in a glass of water (just hot enough to drink)

— before breakfast and at bedtime. Fleischmann's Yeast, when taken this way, is especially effective in overcoming or preventing constipation.

Or eat 2 or 3 cakes a day—spread on bread or crackers—dissolved in fruit juices or milk—or eat it plain.

Write for further information or let us send you a free copy of our latest booklet on Yeast for Health. Address: Health Research Dept. 523, The Fleischmann Company, 701 Washington Street, New York City.

Fleischmann's Yeast comes only in the tinfoil package—it cannot be purchased in tablet form. All grocers have it. Start eating it today! A few days' supply will keep fresh in your ice box as well as in the grocer's.

"ONE day the chef at the country club suggested that I try Fleischmann's Yeast. I was haggard, anemic, and had lost all interest in life. I smiled, reminding him of my previous experiences with 'tonics.' About that time he began serving me with what he called a special cheese sandwich for lunch, which soon became a daily habit with me. A month elapsed, and everyone marvelled at my complete transformation. I would never have known what Fleischmann's Yeast had done for me were it not for the fact that one day I strolled into the club kitchen and saw the chef spreading Fleischmann's Yeast on sandwiches and realized that I had been the butt of what he thought was a good joke."

E day the chef at the country club suggested
I try Fleischmann's Yeast. I was haggard, nic, and had lost all interest in life. I smiled, nding him of my previous experiences with ics.' About that time he began serving me what he called a special cheese sandwich for h, which soon became a daily habit with me.
onth elapsed, and everyone marvelled at my plete transformation. I would never have wn what Fleischmann's Yeast had done for were it not for the fact that one day I strolled the club kitchen and saw the chef spreading schmann's Yeast on sandwiches and realized
I had been the butt of what he thought was

DAUGHERTY AND ELKINS ONLY OFFICIALS AUDIT HAS SHOWN IN OIL STOCK DEALS

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 10. ATTORNEY - GENERAL DAUGHERTY and Senator Elkins, Republican, of West Virginia, are the only two public officials who had transactions in Sinclair Oil stock, so far as shown by the audit by the oil committee of brokerage books.

Senator Walsh, of Montana, leader in the oil inquiry, made this statement today after a conference with Louis D. Bond, Federal Trade Commission accountant who has had charge of the audit. He has not quite completed examination of the books in New Yorks

CLARKE ADMITS MANN ACT VIOLATION

Former High Official of Ku Klux Fined $5000 at Houston, Tex.

By the Associated Press.

HOUSTON, Tex., March 10.—Edward Young Clarke of Atlanta, former acting imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, pleaded guilty this morning in Federal Court to a charge of violating the Mann act, and was fined $5000 by Judge J. C. Hutcheson Jr.

The courtroom was crowded with spectators, who expected a legal battle.

Clarke previously had entered a plea of not guilty, and once the case, based on a charge filed nearly a year ago, had been continued at the request of his attorneys.

The charge involved a young Houston woman. It was alleged that Clarke transported her to New Orleans in February, 1921.

"If you are the kind of a man who would preach against unchastity, and at the same time condone acts of violence committed against persons suspected of being unchaste, then I must measure your punishment accordingly," said Judge Hutcheson before passing sentence on Clarke.

"If on the other hand," he continued, "you were opposed to, and fought such acts of violence, then you are in a different light.

"You have entered a plea of guilty, which shows that you have gone a long way towards making restitution. If you had pleaded not guilty, and tried to lie your way out of it, I would have sentenced you to the penitentiary."

Clarke formerly was "Imperial Kleagle" of the klan and was one of the triumvirate that ruled it. In September, 1921, he resigned because of criticism of his association with Mrs. Elizabeth Tyler, with whom he was arrested in an Atlanta resort. She was one of the leaders of the klan.

In the following December he became temporary "imperial wizard," but in October, 1922, he resigned from this position and announced that he would withdraw from all connection with the order. In November, 1922, he was named "imperial giant" of the klan. A year ago, it was announced by "Imperial Wizard" Evans that Clarke had been relieved of all official connection with the Ku Klux Klan. Last January Clarke challenged the right of Evans to expel him and "Emperor" Simmons.

Evans' Suit Against Simmons Dismissed.

By the Associated Press.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., March 10.—The $750,000 suit of H. W. Evans, "Imperial wizard" of the Ku Klux Klan, against Joseph Simmons, former "emperor" of the klan, for alleged libel, was dismissed in Circuit Court here today on motion of the plaintiff and at his cost.

HOLDUP IN HOTEL CHASE DRIVE

Boundary Battery Robbed of $80 by Man Who Jumps on Truck.

Glenwood Lane, 2130 Chestnut avenue, was driving a laundry wagon into the parking entrance of the Chase Hotel at 1:30 p. m. today when a man jumped on the running board and pointed a revolver at him and demanded his money. Lane handed over $70 and the robber fled through a passageway to Lindell boulevard.
